Thanks for the posts regarding the 909...I like the looks and features of this radio, and was seriously considering getting the unmodify version...However I am not convinced it will outform my 1103 which costs considerably less money...Perhaps I will hold off on getting the 909, and look at other options that are available...Thanks again for the help...

I've always enjoyed mine. And mine even has a sliding dial pointer that is very accurate (the exception rather than the rule with these, I gather). DX aside, it's also one of the best sounding portable radios ever designed for AM (very good on FM too, of course).

We, some of us, were concerned about your well-being. I'm glad to hear you're okay. There are a lot of hurtin' folks up in your area. I've seen the same around my home state (Florida) but nothing like what Katrina has wrought. Welcome back.

I heard a similar comment on Rush Slimeball today. I don't know who these Democrats are that think the hurricane was Bush's fault. Rush set the record straight: It's the fault of the liberals!

He was so excited he was drooling. He sees this disaster as an opportunity to suspend all the environmental laws - drill for oil wherever you want. Lay pipelines all over the place. Suspend pollution standards. Let the profits soar and to hell with the environment. Hey, while we're at it, how about another tax rebate? And maybe we could invade some more third world countries.

There is a big giant about sixty or seventy feet tall pecan tree in my front yard that has a big giant fork that almost touches the roof over my living room area and a tree just like it in my back yard that almost touches the roof over my bed room area.Last Monday morning,doggy and I sat out the storm in my dining room,I figured if any of those trees came crashing down,we would dive under my dining room table and trust to luck.We sat there untill about 11:00 PM Monday night.I was scared s..tless! If I had to do it all over again,in hindsight,we would sit it out in my car in my driveway.

Looters and evil people weilding Brownies, apparently.

''Looters found despoiling the dead were summarily executed by the militia - stood against the nearest wall or pile of debris and shot without the hindrance of a trial. The same brutal justice was delivered to amateur photographers. "Word received from Galveston today indicates that Kodak fiends are being shot down like thieves.
Two, it is stated, were killed yesterday while taking pictures of nude female bodies." (Dallas News, September 14, 1900.)''

I'm not drunk. I haven't finished my first 12 pak yet.
I'll get there and when I do it's back to the cemetary.

Down there with your mommy.....

Dug her ass right up! She was too damn ugly to have sex with before she died. The old bag o bones fell apart in my hands! She didn't complain about much either other than the lousy sex she got from those foursomes with you, Mike and her husband.

love dem bones....dem bones....dem bones

squeek...squeek...

An she sucked too!

How is your mom Mike?

Skeleton rides 50 cents a pop! If you can stand the smell....I wonder is she stunk that bad in life?

She is very fresh but not that fresh!

hehe...I love dem bony women....rotten to the core.....

um...umm....good!

Please accept my apology for abusing her. I'm sorry that I did not toss her back into the black depths that she came from. Next time,I will be sure to take care of that. I promise that I will refill the hole with the dirt that came out too. In addition, I will re sod the plot at no additional charge. Let me also apologize for the milky substance in her left eye socket, that was an unavoidable accident.

please feel free to include this post in your sig file!

You might as weel keep it up there...I love the ole boney bitch!

Dem Bones! Dem Bones! Dem Bones! I loved playing dem Bones!
Dem Bones! Dem Bones! Dem Bones!
I loved playing dem Bones! I ran my fingers uo and down dem bones and she began to come alive!
I played dem bones like they never been played and she smiled for me all the day.

Pork and bones....

DON'T HURT CANADA! I'll miss those nights with the ole bony lady!

The most fun I ever had!

Sporting a new moniker (GraveDigger) just for you and mommy...

How is mom Mike? You two talking these days?

Maybe the cats got her tounge.

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him.

Agreed, I hope it'll be business as usual. With Dayton spinning down, it's good to see Shelby still standing strong.

For those coming up from I-85 south, I'd say top it off in the Greenville/Spartanburg/Gaffney area.

For those coming in from I-85 north, better catch some no later than Gastonia or Belmont just before you turn off of I-85 onto Hwy 74.

For either situation there's convenience stores and/or truck stops at many exits.

So far I have used it to decode RTTY & Weather Fax. Now that I have it up and running, it isn't half bad. It could come in handy for utility. I also like that it has its own bass and treble settings. I'm going to see if I can use it to decode images from satellites the next time NOAA-15 passes over.

The main radio interference is generated when the diodes turn off. That is when you get the high peak voltage around them. Use a scope and you can see it. You could try a snubber arrangement with a low value resistor in series with the cap across the diode. The resistor will burn the power in the voltage spike. You set an RC time constant that is approximately the same in time as the spike. This should work better then just a cap alone.

Pay Haliburton for the reconstruction. Bush gets out of Iraq AND Cheney makes more Billions. Everyone wins..well..except the US taxpayer, who doesn't count for anything anyway.

Weird? Not when he's drunk in the middle of the afternoon. An acquaintance suggested I send all of the maroon's necrophilia related postings to his family via surface mail. He'd have a bit of explaining to do to his wife and children.

We'll see how he behaves from now on before I decide. The guy is an insult to anyone who has ever had cancer or their families.

You're right. There is a post on mews:rec.antiques.radio+phono that mentioned a man being killed by a branch that fell out of his pecan tree in Meridian, Ms. He was in his yard talking to neighbors when he heard it start to break off. His neighbors ran one way and he ran for his

Just One Question for Opponents of the Iraq War
By Dennis Prager
FrontPageMagazine.com | August 31, 2005

All those who support the American war in Iraq should make a deal with anyone opposed to the war. Offer to answer any 20 questions the opponents wish to ask if they will answer just one:

Do you believe we are fighting evil people in Iraq?

That is how supporters of the war regard the Baathists and the Islamic suicide terrorists, the people we are fighting in Iraq.

Because if you cannot answer it, or avoid answering it, or answer "no," we know enough about your moral compass to know that further dialogue is unnecessary. In fact, dialogue is impossible. Our understanding of good and evil is so different from yours, there is simply nothing to discuss. Someone who was asked a hundred years ago "Do you believe that whites who lynch blacks are evil?" and refused to answer in the affirmative was not someone one could dialogue with.

Here are the responses you are likely to receive:

1. The Bush administration is just as evil: for illegally invading a country that did not threaten us; for "lying" to get us into Iraq; and because it is a war for corporate profits.

2. Some of those we are fighting may be evil, but not all; some are simply fighting against foreign occupation of their country.

3. We cannot call anyone evil; only God can make such judgments.

I will respond to these "responses," but what is most important is to acknowledge that none of them actually responds to the question. Anyone posing this question to opponents of the war must not let them off the hook. They must answer the question: Do you believe we are fighting evil people in Iraq?

Regarding the issue of judging anyone evil, the best response is a question: Can we judge anyone to be good (not perfect, just good)? Of course we can. But if we can't call anyone evil, we can't call anyone good, and we certainly know that there are good people. If there are good people, there have to be not good, evil people.

Anyone who remains unable to morally judge people who slit the throats of innocent people, who place bombs in the middle of markets, and who murder anyone attempting to help women achieve basic human rights is a moral imbecile.

As for the Bush administration being equally evil, this, too, reveals the responder's values. It is one thing to believe the war was a mistake; it is quite another to regard it as a function of the administration's desire to enrich Halliburton or expand the "American empire," or because Jewish neo-conservatives pushed docile Gentiles -- Bush, Cheney, Rice, Rumsfeld -- into waging it "for Israel." Such views are held by people who are so angry and so brainwashed about conservatives that they have lost the elementary ability to identify real evil, which is what Islamic and Baathist terrorists and "insurgents" are.

Finally, the people fighting us in Iraq hate freedom, hate women's rights, hate non-Muslims, and do all they can to murder innocent Iraqis and others in order to undermine the march toward freedom in Iraq. They are not fighting foreign invaders; they are fighting foreign liberators and domestic democrats.

It is worth again noting that none of those responses directly answers the question: Do you believe we are fighting evil people in Iraq?

It is one thing to oppose the war in Iraq; it is quite another to deny the evil of those we fight there. That is what the Left in America routinely does. And that is why the culture war in America is as important as the military war in Iraq.

Why We Are In Iraq
By David Horowitz
FrontPageMagazine.com | November 26, 2004

(This speech was given at Georgetown University on October 14, 2004 and broadcast on C-Span. It has been edited for inclusion on FrontPagemag.com -- The Editors)

Just before American and British troops entered Iraq to remove the regime of Saddam Hussein, a videotape of Osama bin Laden was aired on Al-Jazeera TV. The tape was aired on February 12, 2003, and in it bin Laden said: ï¿½The interests of Muslims and the interests of the socialists coincide in the war against the crusaders.ï¿½

Bin Laden was referring to the fact that four weeks earlier, millions of leftists had poured into the streets of European capitals and of Washington, San Francisco and New York to protest the removal of Saddam Hussein. Their goal was to prevent the United States and Britain from toppling Saddam and ending one of the cruelest and most repressive regimes in modern times. The protesters chanted ï¿½no blood for oil;ï¿½ they called the United States ï¿½the world's greatest terrorist state;ï¿½ they called Americaï¿½s democratic government an ï¿½Axis of Evil;ï¿½ and they compared Americaï¿½s president to Adolph Hitler.

In America, the demonstrations against the war were organized by two different groups. One of these was International ANSWER, a front group for the Workerï¿½s World Party, which is a Marxist-Leninist sect aligned with the Communist dictatorship in North Korea. The other was the Coalition for Peace and Justice, an organization which was led by Leslie Cagan, a veteran 1960ï¿½s leftist and member of the Communist Party until after the fall of the Berlin Wall. The Coalition welcomed all factions of the left and was composed of organizations that ranged from the Communist Party to the National Council of Churches to Muslim supporters of the terrorist jihad.

Despite their efforts, the global protesters failed to stop the British and American military effort or save Saddamï¿½s regime, which fell six weeks after the initial assault. This ended the filling of mass graves by the regime, shut down the torture chambers and closed the prison that Saddam had built for four to twelve-year-olds whose parents had earned his disapproval. But Saddamï¿½s forces were not entirely defeated and regrouped to fight a rear-guard guerilla effort against the American ï¿½occupiers.ï¿½ At the same time, the organizers of the anti-war protests had already determined to continue their efforts, this time in the arena of electoral politics. Accordingly, they directed their activists to march into the Democratic presidential primary campaigns and support the candidacies of anti-war Democrats like Dennis Kucinich and Howard Dean.

The enormous resources in money and manpower that the activists had mobilized against the war now transformed the campaign of an obscure governor of Vermont, making Howard Dean the immediate front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination. Dean condemned Americaï¿½s war in Iraq, and hinted that, if elected, he would make peace at the earliest possible opportunity and withdraw American forces from the Gulf. Electoral politics thus became the leftï¿½s rear guard attempt to produce the result their pre-war protests had failed to achieve: an American defeat in Iraq.

With the resources of the left squarely behind him, Howard Dean raced to the front of the presidential pack. In the spring of 2003, just prior to the Iowa caucuses, Deanï¿½s nomination appeared so inevitable that he was endorsed by the titular heads of the Democratic Party, Jimmy Carter and Al Gore. So leftist in its view of Americaï¿½s world role had the Democratic Party become.

But just as the prospect of this nomination became a reality, Democrats collectively flinched. Verbal gaffes by the candidate, who remarked that the world was not safer because of the capture of Saddam, and a hyper-emotional rhetoric caused many Democrats to wonder if a nominee so overtly radical could carry the party to victory in the national campaign in November. Within a few weeks, this question was decided in the negative as Democrats abandoned Dean and rallied behind John Kerry -- a candidate with a military record who had originally supported the war in Iraq but who recently had turned against it under the pressure of seemingly irresistible Dean tide.

This reversal of views on a matter of war and peace proved to be the most troubling aspect of John Kerryï¿½s candidacy, and eventually sealed his electoral defeat. Having been a prominent Democratic supporter of the war both before and after the fact, he reversed himself on the basis of a trend in public opinion polls among Democratic primary voters. Rather than lose the nomination, he was willing to abandon his position on a matter as grave as war and peace.

This was in stark contrast to the behavior of another Democratic candidate, Senator Joseph Lieberman, whose deportment could not have provided a greater contrast. Having been the Democratsï¿½ vice-presidential nominee in the previous election, Lieberman ought to have been the presidential nominee in this one. But his views on the removal of Saddam Hussein put him at odds with Democratic primary voters and with the activists who had brought their resources into the campaign. Unlike Kerry, Lieberman did not waver in his views of the war even though it meant sacrificing his presidential ambition.

Patriotism and Treason

Certain issues beneath the surface of the political conversation, carry a charge so great as to shape the conversation itself. Such are the issues of ï¿½patriotism,ï¿½ and ï¿½treason,ï¿½ and the question of what constitutes legitimate criticism of government policy in a time of war.

To listen to the complaints of the left, one would think that conservative officials were standing ready with pre-drawn indictments for opponents of the war, or any criticism of government policy in matters pertaining to Iraq. Yet if any side has deployed the charge of treason to silence opposition on the war issue, it is the Democrats themselves, who have accused the President of taking the country to war under false pretenses, lying to the American people, and getting Americans killed for no reason, except to line the pockets of his Halliburton friends. Al Gore has called the President a traitor; the President has not mentioned Goreï¿½s name.

The reality ï¿½ for better or worse ï¿½ is that that no one in America takes treason very seriously anymore, and hasnï¿½t for a long time. No individual has been charged with treason in the United States in fifty years, not since Tokyo Rose and Axis Sally were tried for broadcasting enemy propaganda to American troops during WWII. Not the Rosenbergs, who stole atomic secrets for the Soviet Union; not Jane Fonda, who in the exact manner of the aforementioned traitors appeared on enemy radio in the midst of a war, denounced American soldiers as war criminals and called on them to defect. Fonda also collaborated with the Communist torturers of American POWs. Yet she was not charged with any crime. Nor were spies like Aldrich Ames, or defectors like John Walker Lindh, who joined the Taliban to fight against his own country indicted for treason. So letï¿½s not pretend that there is any real threat in the word ï¿½treasonï¿½ capable of chilling criticism of current foreign policy. If there were, Michael Moore would be in jail instead of on the short list for an Academy Award. When leftists complain that their patriotism is being questioned in an attempt to stifle their criticism, the claim is a red herring designed to prevent others from thinking about issues that affect our national security, or the implications of the positions that some opponents of the war have taken.

Contrary to the impression conveyed by the left, Republicans have been extraordinarily polite in confronting those who in assaulting the war have also Dslandered its supporters. In the first presidential debate President Bush chided his opponent for attacking the war in Iraq as ï¿½the wrong war, in the wrong place, at the wrong time.ï¿½ To make that claim ï¿½confusesï¿½ people, the President said, and is no way to lead a nation engaged in a war.

The presidentï¿½s statement was certainly correct as far as it went. But coming from a leader of the Demcratic Party who might soon be President, Senator Kerryï¿½s statement actually served to do more than confuse people. If you are nineteen years old and an American marine in Fallujah, and are being fired on by terrorists, and the leader of the Democratic Party who is within a hairï¿½s breadth of being your commander-in-chief says you shouldnï¿½t be there at all, one can surmise that that does more than confuse you. It demoralizes you and it saps your will to fight. It can get you killed. The reckless nature of the Democratic attacks on this war ï¿½ with the emphasis on reckless ï¿½ serves to encourage the enemy more than reasonable criticism would require; worse, it probably demoralizes American soldiers on the field of battle and probably gets some of them killed. This is the subject that is suppressed when issues of loyalty and the proper tone of criticism are arbitrarily taken off the table in time of war. But Republicans are too polite to mention this.

Treason itself is not actually that difficult to define. It is when your country is at war and you want the other side to win. (Of course the desire alone would be merely a treason of intention; to meet the legal definition, there would have to be overt acts.) Are there such people in America, active in the nationï¿½s public life? Michael Moore is an obvious example. The following statement by Moore appeared on his website on April 12, 2004 as the United States was struggling to build a post-war democracy in Iraq: ï¿½First, can we stop the Orwellian language and start using the proper names for things? Those are not ï¿½contractorsï¿½ in Iraq. They are not there to fix a roof or to pour concrete in a driveway. They are MERCENARIES and SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE. They are there for the money, and the money is very good if you live long enough to spend it. Halliburton is not a ï¿½companyï¿½ doing business in Iraq. It is a WAR PROFITEER, bilking millions from the pockets of average Americans. In past wars they would have been arrested -- or worse.ï¿½

While Moore described Americaï¿½s role in Iraq as that of a predator and criminal he described the Saddam diehards and Zarqawi terrorists, beheading American citizens and killing American troops this way: ï¿½The Iraqis who have risen up against the occupation are not ï¿½insurgentsï¿½ or ï¿½terroristsï¿½ or ï¿½The Enemy.ï¿½ They are the REVOLUTION, the Minutemen, and their numbers will grow -- and they will win. Get it, Mr. Bush?ï¿½

There is little doubt whose side of this war Michael Moore is on. Michael Moore wants America to lose this war and why shouldnï¿½t he, since he regards the United States as a predatory empire illegally in Iraq, and ï¿½terrorismï¿½ as a fiction created by Washington to justify its imperialistic ambitions.

I have followed Michael Moore ever since the 1980s, when he was fired from his position as editor of the leftwing magazine Mother Jones. His firing was triggered when he censored an article mildly critical of the Sandinista dictatorship that had been written by the socialist Paul Berman. Moore was too much of a Leninist even for the leftists at Mother Jones. As a Marxist convinced that America is an empire ruled by evil corporations, Michael Moore is a self-conceived enemy. The issue of betraying your country when it is under attack never arises for Moore, because he denies that there is even a terrorist threat in the first place. Of course he does. Because in his eyes, America is an aggressor responsible for the attacks upon itself. American imperialism is the root cause of the War on Terror. This is not his unique view but is one shared by many people on the political left and by most of the people who marched in the ï¿½anti-warï¿½ demonstrations.

Michael Mooreï¿½s hostility to his own country in time of war is a fact, but what are the consequences? Moore has rooted for the enemy all his life, first in the Cold War and now in the War on Terror, but his treasonous sympathies have made a celebrity of him, not a pariah, and rich into the bargain.

A similar observation can made of about the leaders of the anti-war demonstrations, whose careers may not be a well rewarded as Mooreï¿½s, but whose commitments and absence of adverse consequences are the same. The national mobilizations against the war in Iraq were organized and led by veteran activists who rooted for the Communist enemy in the Cold War. They did so because, like Moore, they regarded America as an imperialist empire and the Soviet Union as an advocate for its oppressed global subjects. Guided by these radical assumptions they marched in the fall of 2002 and the spring of 2003 to thwart Americaï¿½s war in Iraq and save Saddam Hussein.

It should be self-evident that these are not people for whom ï¿½peaceï¿½ is a priority. When Saddam was faced with a UN ultimatum on November 8th to disarm ï¿½or else,ï¿½ the opponents of American policy organized no demonstrations at the Iraqi embassy to persuade Saddam to comply. Disarming Saddam was not part of their ï¿½anti-warï¿½ agenda. In the same illuminating way, there were no demonstrations against the genocide the Communists carried out in Indo-China after America withdrew its forces from Vietnam. In its core, the anti-Vietnam movement was not about bringing peace and justice to Indo-China; it was about defeating America and helping the Communists to win. The goal of the radicals who organized the anti-war demonstrations during the conflict in Vietnam and the confrontation with Iraq are the same: whatever the war, America should lose.

This goal has now been introduced into the electoral mainstream under the auspices of the Democratic Party. In Michael Mooreï¿½s notorious film, Farenheit 911, which became a campaign spot for the Democrat Party, Saddamï¿½s Iraq is presented as a peaceful, even idyllic country cruelly invaded by a callous and deceitful invader, which is us. The opening of this anti-American propaganda film was held in the midst of the presidential election campaign. It was attended by the leader of the Democratic Party, Terry McAuliffe, by Senators Clinton, Daschle, Harkin, Boxer and many other celebrating party members. It was an episode that can be said to mark how far we have slipped morally in this country that the leaders of one its two great parties are ready to accept any attack on the sitting commander-in-chief ï¿½ and through him on the nation itself ï¿½ as legitimate, and can do so in a time of war, and thus in effect donï¿½t take our enemies seriously.

The matter of ï¿½treasonï¿½ is not finally resolved by applying the term. This reflects the complex allegiances of the citizens a democracy like ours and also underscores the bad faith in the lefti¿½s defensive complaints. When they are pressed on the issue, ï¿½progressivesï¿½ will be the first to claim that dissent itself is patriotism, indeed the only self-respecting patriotism (since, for leftists, embracing the positive in the American experience is reserved for right-wing jingoists and yahoos). Leftists will point to the fact that the American founders were themselves accused of treason and will remind us of Benjamin Franklinï¿½s quip to ï¿½make the most of it.ï¿½

In America, the founding principles form the nation first, and only secondarily the ties of blood and soil. If America is indeed the greatest terrorist state, as Moore and other leftists proclaim, if America is an imperialist monster, then America is actively betraying its founding principles. If this is the case, loyalty to these principles ï¿½ loyalty to America -- would demand acts of treason as a defense of the constitutional faith. The code that leftists like Michael Moore consciously live by is this: ï¿½Loyalty to humanity is treason to America.ï¿½ In their own minds, they have no country. They are citizens of the world, and America is the enemy of humanity (to employ a phrase Michael Mooreï¿½s Sandinista heroes inserted into their national anthem).

Here is how Moore himself defends his disloyalty to his country in the war on terror as a higher loyalty to its founding principles: ï¿½What if there is no ï¿½terrorist threat?ï¿½ What if Bush and Co. need, desperately need, that ï¿½terrorist threatï¿½ more than anything in order to conduct the systematic destruction they have launched against the U.S. Constitution and the good people of this country who believe in the freedoms and liberties it guarantees?ï¿½ (Stupid White Men, Part One)

To make a judgment on the this issue one has to first decide whether this nation has really violated and abandoned its founding principles and is thus worthy of betrayal in the midst of a war. If so, then Michael Moore is American hero and the left is a progressive force. If not, then Moore and the left are reactionaries allied with the most backward-looking and oppressive forces of our time, as well as self-declared enemies of their native land.

Legitimate Criticism of War Policy

Criticism of government policy is the life-blood of democracy. This includes war policy. But beginning with the founders, everyone understands ï¿½ or used to understand --that there is a necessary trade-off between liberty and security and that in times of war sacrifices of the former are regularly made in the interests of the latter. ï¿½Loose lips sink shipsï¿½ was a slogan memorialized on posters during World War II. It was an appeal to Americans to voluntarily restrict their own exercise of free speech to save the lives of themselves and their neighbors. It was not regarded as a bid to abrogate the Constitution or the destruction of the First Amendment, which is the way the leftwing is currently mis-characterizing measures to tighten Americaï¿½s defenses against terror. It was a simple recognition that some speech can weaken a democracy and undermine its self-defense.

In a conflict like the war on terror, where the enemy walks among us and can kill thousands of civilians at a stroke, it is important to recognize the difference between criticism made in support of the war effort and criticism designed to undermine it, even if the actual line between them is not always easy to discern. Some criticism is maliciously intended, and some criticism in itself can constitute an assault on America that weakens our democracy and undermines our defense.

Before the fighting started in Iraq, some critics voiced a concern that an armed intervention would cause the Arab street to erupt and inflame the Muslim world. This was the criticism voiced by former National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft. Scowcroftï¿½s remarks were obviously made out of concern for the nationï¿½s security. a substantial amount of the criticism of the war in Iraq is based on similarly legitimate concerns. Scowcroft's attack on the President's policy was a harsh criticism. He said that under no circumstances should the America go to war over Iraq. But it was obviously a criticism based on reasonable concerns about Americaï¿½s security, that were proved wrong when Saddam was toppled in the swiftest and least costly victory on historical record, and without the immediate consequences that Scowcroft imagined.

A large part of the criticism of the war, however, has been made on grounds that have nothing to do with American security, and in terms that are far removed from the realities. Often, as in the case of Michael Mooreï¿½s widely popular rants, these are thinly veiled attempts to portray America as the problem and the outlaw regime of Saddam Hussein regime as the victim. Often, the attacks are voiced in such a way (and to such a reckless degree) as to undermine the security of Americans and their forces in Iraq. It was one thing for Scowcroft to imagine negative consequences of great magnitude resulting from the attempt to remove Saddam and quite another when the initial stage of the war was won without such consequences for critics on the left to launch an all-out attack on credibility and morals of the Commander-in-Chief.

Within two months of the fall of Baghdad, Democratic leaders were assaulting the President as a calculating liar on the basis of 16 reasonable words in a State of the Union Address which have since been confirmed by a bi-partisan Senate Intelligence Committee. As Senator John Edwards, who was one of those leaders attacking the President, pointed out, a Presidentï¿½s credibility is his most important asset. Why then attack him as a liar for saying that British intelligence had reported that Saddam was seeking bomb-making uranium in Niger? Particularly, when the British had done just that. Yet for weeks in June of 2003, Democratic leaders piled on the President as a ï¿½liarï¿½ for those very words.

It is one thing to make dire predictions in advance of a war, and quite another to make dire and unsubstantiated claims after the war is under way and our troops are still under fire in Iraq. In these circumstances, to say that the President lied to the American people and sent our troops to die under false pretenses is more than criticism, particularly when there is absolutely no evidence to substantiate the charge. When this is done by political leaders who supported the war in the first place, the betrayal is an even more egregious. Yet that is precisely what leaders of the Democratic Party did within two months of the liberation of Baghdad, most shamefully among them Ted Kennedy and Al Gore, but also John Edwards and Jimmy Carter, John Kerry, and Howard Dean.

Even the charges which followed the failure to locate stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction are reckless and baseless given the fact that there is no evidence the President lied about these weapons in advance of the war, and indeed the evidence would lead to the opposite conclusion, since all national intelligence agencies, including those of the Muslim countries of Pakistan and Jordan were saying the same thing.

The vitriolic and personal attacks on the Presidenti¿½s integrity and morality, while the war was only months old went beyond legitimate criticism and amounted to an effort to sabotage the war itself in the hopes that a failed war would unseat the President in the elections in November. These personal attacks were incitements to the American public to distrust and hate their President in the middle of a war. To go a step further, and portray Iraq -- a country whose dictator had invaded two sovereign nations and murdered a million people -- as an idyllic place into which American marauders intruded under false pretenses using their advanced technologies to blow innocent and i¿½defenselessi¿½ people to bits (as Farenheit 9/11 did) is no longer criticism. It is an effort to sabotage the nationi¿½s war on terror and soften us up for the kill. This is no longer criticism, nor is it intended as such. It is intended to as a war within the war, and is directed at all of us -- Democrats and Republicans alike.

In the real world, of course, matters like these are not always so easily resolved. There is often an irreducible gray area, which makes distinctions difficult. Thus, there are incidents common to all wars that are regrettable and need to be regretted, but which can be exploited by oneï¿½s enemies. The criminal offenses at Abu Ghraib are one example. As war atrocities go -- as the atrocities committed by our enemies in this war go -- the incidents at Abu Ghraib were minor. They were an isolated series of indefensible but unrepresentative acts by low-level operatives. Still, we hold ourselves to higher standards than our enemies (and most of our friends) and concern was therefore in order. But when Abu Ghraib is inflated into a major atrocity and appears on the front page of the New York Times for more than sixty days running and is compared by a leading Senator to Saddam Hussein's own torture chambers, something else was going on. This may have been just an atrociously irresponsible effort to topple a sitting President. But its clear effect was to conduct psychological warfare for the enemy camp, to undermine American leadership and to sabotage the war itself. The New York Times and Senator Kennedy expressed more outrage about Abu Ghraib in one day than Imam Ali Sistani the leader of Iraqï¿½s Shiï¿½ite population did throughout the entire episode, about which he said nothing.

Some people will recklessly exaggerate America's deficiencies -- even in the midst of a war ï¿½ in pursuit of political power. Others, however, may do it out of habitual complacency. It hasnï¿½t really registered on them that we are at war. Even after 9/11, they continue to think that America cannot be vulnerable. They haven't absorbed what the 9/11 attacks revealed. In their thinking, America is still a free country and people can say what they want. But saying some things still has consequences, and we ignore them at our peril.

The War Was Not About WMDs

The attacks on the President in the first year of the war in Iraq were entirely about the rationale for the war. This is odd in itself. If we were to discover say that Abraham Lincoln had contrived to send a secret Union force to attack Fort Sumter and blame it on the Confederacy would that change our view of whether the Civil War was worth fighting? Yet that seems to be the logic of the opponents of the Iraq War for whom ï¿½missing WMDsï¿½ and other elements of the original argument in behalf of the war have been crucial to rejecting the war itself.

Yet this is a war whose aims and purposes make it very hard to understand how anyone who is a supporter of human rights, or who believes in freedom, could be against it. In four years, George Bush has liberated nearly 50 million people in two Islamic countries. He has stopped the filling of mass graves and closed down the torture chambers of an oppressive regime. He has encouraged the Iraqis and the people of Afghanistan to begin a political process that give them rights they have not enjoyed in 5,000 years. How can one not support this war?

The rationale for this war was not, as critics claim, stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction. This is a misunderstanding that was the product of political arguments during a Democratic primary season that were intended to unseat a sitting president, but they had grave fallout for the credibility and security of the nation itself. The resultant misunderstanding about WMDS is the basis for most of the attacks on the war in Iraq.

In addressing this issue, it is important to remember that the Democrats who are now in full-throated opposition to the war, actually authorized it in the first place. The ï¿½Authorization for the Use of Force in Iraqï¿½ is the title of a resolution passed by both the House and the Senate, with Democratic as well as Republican majorities.

Since Bush has been accused of acting willfully and imperially and ï¿½dividing the nation,ï¿½ it should be pointed out that not only did he request and secure a resolution for using force in Iraq from both political parties, but that this is more than his Democratic predecessor did in launching his own war in Kosovo. Bill Clinton neither sought to obtained a congressional resolution to use force in the Balkans. In gauging the sincerity of the Democratic attacks on Bushï¿½s war-making decisions in Iraq, as ï¿½illegalï¿½ and ï¿½unilateral,ï¿½ it is worth remembering that Bill Clinton never even sought congressional approval (or UN approval) when he went to war in Kosovo. This didnï¿½t seem to bother Democrats at the time.

The Authorization for the Use of Force in Iraq that President Bush did seek and obtain in October 2002 has a total of 23 clauses. These 23 clauses spell out the rationale for the war. Out of all 23 clauses, there are only two that even mention stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction. If this was the principal argument for the war, the resolution surely didnï¿½t make much of it. What the resolution did stress ï¿½ in twelve separate clauses ï¿½ were 16 UN resolutions that that Saddam had ignored or defied.

These Security Council resolutions, were more than mere expressions of UN opinion. The first two of them 687 and 689 constituted the terms of the truce in the first Gulf War, whose violation was a legal cause of war itself. The other fourteen, were failed attempts to enforce them. This is why we went to war: to enforce the UN resolutions and international law.

Saddam Hussein had invaded two countries - Iran and then Kuwait, and used chemical weapons on his own people. We went to war with Saddam Hussein in 1991 to force him out of Kuwait, which his invading armies had swallowed. At the end of the war, there was no peace treaty, merely a truce that left Saddam in place. The truce was sealed by UN resolutions 687 and 689 and they set established the conditions by which we - who were still technically at war with Saddam - would allow him to remain in power. These resolutions instructed Saddam to disarm and to stop his programs to develop weapons of mass destruction.

How do we know he had programs for developing weapons of mass destruction? Because he had gassed the Kurds. Because his own brother-in-law who was in charge of his nuclear weapons program defected and told us he did. Because we sent UN inspectors into Iraq under the UN Resolutions and they located his weapons of mass destruction and destroyed the ones they found. The UN resolutions -- backed by the armed power of the United States ï¿½ partially worked. But only partially, and only for awhile. Saddam was forced to stop the programs the UN inspectors discovered, and he was forced to stop repressing the ethnic and religious minorities in Iraq, as the UN resolutions required. But without an occupying army in Iraq, the UN proved unable to hold him to the terms of its resolutions and he remained an internationally recognized menace. With the help of his allies on the UN Security Council -- France, Russia and China, Saddam circumvented the sanctions placed on him, obstructed the inspectors and evaded the terms of the resolutions until finally, in 1998, he threw the UN inspectors out of Iraq altogether.

This constituted an act of war in itself, though Clinton Administration did not have the will to prosecute one. Saddam had broken the truce. When Saddam threw the UN weapons inspectors out, Bill Clinton fired 450 missiles into Iraq (more than the United States had fired into Iraq during the entire Gulf War) and got Congress to authorize an Iraqi Liberation Act, which passed by an overwhelming majority from both parties. But despite its name, the Iraqi Liberation Act only asked for authorization to provide military help to Iraqis trying to overthrow Saddam. It didn't call for an American Army to do the job. Bill Clinton understood the grave threat that Saddam Hussein presented to international peace and thought Saddam should be removed and said so, because Saddam had broken the truce. But Bill Clinton didnï¿½t send an army to do the job, because in 1998 he was too busy with an intern and was unable to perform his duties as Commander-in-Chief.

In 1998, Bill Clinton at least understood, as John Kerry and Tom Daschle and Al Gore also did at the time, that Saddam Hussein had violated international law and was a threat to the peace. He was an aggressor twice over. He had shown that he was determined to circumvent the UN inspections and the arms control agreements he had signed. It was clear to all ï¿½to every intelligence agency in the world -- that Saddam was determined to break the UN sanctions and to develop weapons of mass destruction if he could. Why would Saddam throw the U.N. inspectors out if it werenï¿½t his intention to build weapons of mass destruction and use them? (The famous Duelfer report says that in fact that he was.)

Saddam was a self-declared enemy of the United States who expressed his loathing for America in innumerable ways, among them an attempt to assassinate an American President and the distinction of being the only head of state to celebrate the destruction of the World Trade Center after 9/11. Despite leftwing claims to the contrary, there were in fact major links between international terrorists, including al-Qaeda and the Saddam regime. These are documented in in Stephen Hayesï¿½ book, The Connection, which describes the relations between the government of Iraq, Al Qaeda, and the major world terrorist organizations. Among other gestures to the Islamic jihad, Saddam had inserted into the Iraqi flag the proclamation ï¿½Allahu Akhbar.ï¿½ Saddam did not adopt the mantra of Islamic martyrs because he had a religious revelation. He did it because Islamic terrorists had adopted the slogan as their war cry and Saddam wanted to join their war.
Standing between Saddam and his malevolent ambitions in the fall of 2002 was the uncertain power of the United States. It was uncertain because the first Bush Administration had failed to remove him at the end of the Gulf War and the Clinton Administration was too paralyzed by ideology and circumstances to act when the need to repair the mistake became inevitable. Clinton fired hundreds of missiles into Iraq, but without an army to remove the tyrant, they were fired to little effect. After his defeat in the Gulf War, a still-defiant Saddam had boasted that America could fight a Cold War, but couldnï¿½t endure ten thousand casualties. After Americaï¿½s humiliation in Somalia, Osama bin Laden said nearly the same thing: American soldiers can fight a Cold War but not endure the will to defeat Islam in a holy war.

In the terroristsï¿½ eyes, America was a paper tiger. This was perhaps the main cause of the miscalculations made by Saddam that led to his fall. But his assessment was correct until 9/11. Until that moment, America had shown itself to be a power unwilling and therefore unable to put an army in the field for more than four days since the Vietnam truce of 1973.

On September 11, 2001, the world changed because the perceptions of an American president changed. George W. Bush understood that this strike against us was a declaration of war. He understood that the world we live in is a world in which terrorists who are supported by rogue states like Saddam Husseinï¿½s can get access to terrible weapons with which they can smuggle into the United States and use to do incalculable damage. America could not wait for such an attack before responding to the threat that these regimes represented. The consequences were simply unacceptable. America had to strike before the threat became imminent. Since Saddam had already shown that he would defy all attempts to control him and since he had already demonstrated that he would use weapons of mass destruction, and since he supported the jihad against the United States, his regime presented a peril that had to be confronted. John Kerry and other Democratic leaders spoke eloquently to these realities and endorsed the measures taken by the President that led to war. The Bush Doctrine is simply a statement of these realities along with the will to take the measures necessary to deal with them. It is to engage the war that has been declared against us by the terrorists and the regimes harbor them ï¿½ Iran, Syria, Libya to name three.

In their attacks on the President, opponents of the war and even Democratic leaders who once knew better have said that Iraq was ï¿½no threat.ï¿½ But if Iraq was no threat, why was Afghanistan a threat? Afghanistan is a much poorer country than Iraq. It has no great oil reserves; it wasnï¿½t about to make a deal with North Korea to buy nuclear weapons ï¿½off the shelf,ï¿½ as Saddam was when United States troops crossed his borders. So why was Afghanistan a threat? It was a threat because it provided the terrorists with a base of operations, and from that base they were able to deliver a devastating blow to the United States.

Since Afghanistan was a threat, obviously Iraq was an even bigger one, but so was Iran. Some critics of the war want to know why we didnï¿½t attack Iran or North Korea, which appear to them more menacing than Saddam Hussein. There is a certain hypocrisy in these qualms. These are the same people who are argue that our attack on Iraq was illegitimate. Nonetheless, the question is worth answering. The difference between North Korea and Iraq is that as bad as North Korea is, it is not part of the Islamic jihad that includes al-Qaeda and Hamas, and which Saddam Hussein had joined. (To cite one instance of his role, $74 billion of the UN Oil-for-Food funds that Saddam embezzled went directly to finance the Hamas terrorist organization). The difference, finally, between Iran and Iraq is that we were actually at war with Iraq and had been at war since 1991. For a decade U.S. and British warplane had participated in daily missions over the ï¿½No-Fly Zonesï¿½ in Northern Iraq in order to prevent Saddam Hussein from dropping poison gas on the Kurds. For ten years, the United States and Britain were engaged in a low-intensity war with Iraq to keep Saddam within the restrictions created by the UN resolutions that he relentlessly defied. This war had failed to accomplish its task, which is precisely why the United States and Britain initiated a larger war to finish the job.

The Deulfer Report, issued after Saddamï¿½s removal, which involved the interrogation of officials of the regime, concluded that Saddam Hussein had one overriding agenda, which was to remove the UN sanctions, remove the UN inspectors, and resume his programs to build weapons of mass destruction. That is what the war was about.

To recap its timeline: After 9/11, George Bush declared that Iraq was in defiance of the arms control and inspection agreements that were designed to keep him under control and was therefore an international menace. In his State of the Union Address, delivered on January 20, 2002 he told Saddam, ï¿½You are part of an ï¿½Axis of Evilï¿½ and you are in defiance of the 1991 truce agreements. You need to comply with the terms of the truce you signed, and with the U.N. resolutions, and disarm, open your borders to UN inspectors and give up your ambitions to acquire weapons of mass destruction -- or else.ï¿½ This ultimatum was delivered fourteen months before we actually went to war.

When Senator Kerry and other critics say the United States ï¿½rushed to war,ï¿½ it is difficult to imagine what they are talking about. Shortly after George Bush put Saddam on notice in January 2002, Al Gore gave the first foreign policy address he had made since the election of 2000. In this speech, Gore praised Bush for identifying Iraq as one of the components of an axis of evil. He noted that Bush had come under criticism for making such a statement, and he made a point of supporting the Presidentï¿½s decision to do so. Saddamï¿½s regime was, in fact, evil and a threat to the peace. Gore said America had to do whatever was necessary to deal with the threat that Saddam represented, even if we had to do it alone and without our alliesï¿½ approval. Al Gore betrayed his own vision of Iraq, just as the leadership of the Democratic Party betrayed a war it had signed onto, in the hope of making a seasonal political gain.

There was no rush to war. In September 2002, nine months after the Axis of Evil speech and six months before the onset of the war, President Bush went to the UN and told its delegates the UN must enforce the resolutions Saddam had disregarded and defied or become ï¿½irrelevant.ï¿½ If the UN Security Council would not meet its obligations, enforce its resolutions and defend the peace, the United States intended to do so in its place. As an earnest of its intent, the United States had already begun sending troops to the Gulf. The immediate effect of this was to cause Saddam to readmit the UN inspectors. In the crucial months that followed, the American president said more than once to the Saddam regime: ï¿½You will disarm, or we will disarm you.ï¿½ This was not a rush to war, but a deliberate march to a moment of truth in which Saddamï¿½s intentions would be tested a final time: Disarm; open your borders to unobstructed UN inspections -- or else.

In October, following his appearance at the UN, the President went to Congress and got the authorization he needed to use force against Iraq if Saddam persisted in the course of obstruction he had pursued for more than a decade. The vote was 77 to 23 in the Senate, receiving support from majorities on both sides of the aisle. On November 9, the President won a unanimous 15 to 0 vote in the Security Council for Resolution 1441. This resolution was an ultimatum that said to Saddam: ï¿½You will disarm, and you will show that you have disarmed by making a comprehensive report on your weapons of mass destruction ï¿½or serious consequencesï¿½ will follow.ï¿½ The deadline for compliance was set for thirty days hence, or December 7, 2002.

The Chief UN Weapons Inspector Hans Blix has since written a book on these events, which he has called Disarming Iraq. Blix is a Swedish leftist who, by his own admission, was against going to war despite Saddamï¿½s failure to comply with the UN resolutions.[1] In his book he acknowledges that UN Resolution 1441 was diplomatic language for an ultimatum of war, and that Saddam failed to meet its terms.[2] On December 7, which was the deadline for compliance the Iraq regime delivered a 12,000-page report that was essentially a rehash of previous inadequate and deceptive reports it had submitted and not a serious answer to the questions that had been asked. Thousands of weapons were unaccounted for, and the requirements the Security Council had laid down had not been met.

At this point, the question was whether yet another ultimatum should be allowed to slip with no consequences to follow. If there is never a consequence then the entire fabric of ï¿½international lawï¿½ would be a sham. Neither the word of the United Nations or the United States would have any credibility. This would create an extremely dangerous international environment where force would be the only international abiter. If the word of a great power like United States could be taken seriously, the only way remaining to deter a future threat would be to go to war. In sum, not acting on UN resolution 1441 would show contempt for international law and order (as Prime Minister Tony Blair pointed out vainly to the French) and would increase the chances of future conflict with potentially even more deadly consequences than the one with Iraq.

The reason enforcing the UN ultimatum was summarized with admirable clarity by President Bill Clinton in 1998, although the disorder of his personal affairs paralyzed his government and restricted his action to launching missile strikes against Saddam: ï¿½If we fail to respond today, Saddam and all those who would follow in his footsteps will be emboldened tomorrow by the knowledge that they can act with impunity, even in the face of a clear message from the United Nations Security Council, and clear evidence of a weapons of mass destruction program.ï¿½[3]

Senator Kerry and other critics on the left have claimed that Saddam Hussein could have been contained without going to war, that the weapons inspections would eventually work to disarm the regime and keep it disarmed. But this is an empty claim. It presumes the United States could keep 100,000 troops on the Iraqi border indefinitely and focus the main energies of government on keeping one rogue state in check. The only reason the U.N. inspectors were readmitted to Iraq in the first place was because of the decision taken by Bush to put a massive American military force on the Iraqi border, and to threaten the regimeï¿½s survival.

If threats are never acted on, they eventually lose credibility. Thatï¿½s why enforcing the 17th UN resolution on Iraq was so crucial. The effort to mobilize enough force ï¿½ diplomatic and military ï¿½ to produce Saddamï¿½s moment of truth on December 7, 2002 had been a year in the making. How long could the United States focus this kind of attention on Iraq and deploy these kinds of resources just to see that Saddam Hussein observed the promises he made? To let this ultimatum pass and continue the cat and mouse game indefinitely would mean paralyzing the ability of the United States to deal with the rest of the world. While the confrontation lasted it would cost of $1 billion a week and would mean maintaining more than 100,000 troops in the Arab desert (sitting targets for terrorists). Saddam, on the other hand, would have all the time in the world to manipulate ï¿½world opinion,ï¿½ delay any result and wear the allies down. This entire exercise, moreover, would be merely extending an effort to stop Saddam Hussein from evading sanctions and controls that had been going on for more than a decade. It should be self-evident that this ï¿½alternativeï¿½ to war was merely a plan for continuing an appeasement that had failed.

The Role of the Left

In January 2003, one detour remained on the road to Saddamï¿½s moment of truth, -- a detour that has since served to obscure the rationale for the war itself. When the UN Security Council deadline passed December 7th, America and Britain were alone among the major powers willing to enforce the resolution they had all signed onto. Saddamï¿½s longtime ally told Secretary of State Colin Powell that even though Saddam had now defied his 17th UN resolution would veto a decision to go to war ï¿½under any circumstances (quelles que soient les circonstances).ï¿½[4] In January, 750,000 anti-war protesters appeared in the streets of London to join the French opposition and say no to war. The size of this demonstration was equivalent to 4 million protesters in the streets of Washington.

Four million American protesters would not even be the full equivalent of the political fact that confronted Tony Blair. The protesters were members of his own party. A proper equivalent would have been if millions of Republicans had marched in Washington to oppose enforcement of the Security Council resolution. To meet this opposition Tony Blair pleaded with President Bush to go back to the U.N. Security Council and present whatever intelligence information was required to get a second ï¿½ albeit entirely superfluous ï¿½ UN resolution. This, in itself, was an appeasement of Saddam who had brazenly defied the UN resolution. But because Tony Blair was such a loyal ally the President said yes.

In retrospect, he should not have done so. First of all, because after Colin Powellï¿½s presentation of new evidence to the UN, the French informed him, that no evidence would persuade them ï¿½ that they would not vote for a resolution to go to war ï¿½under any circumstances.ï¿½ We now know that the French had been bribed with millions of dollars stolen from the UN Oil-for-Food program and the promise of billions of dollars in oil contracts from Saddam. But this was hardly necessary for their opposition to action on the resolution they had voted for, since they had been Saddamï¿½s allies for decades.

There was a second and far more important reason not to go to Security to persuade its unpersuadeable members (Russia and China were also Saddamï¿½s allies with a veto over the decision) to vote for another superfluous resolution. In order to make his case to the recalcitrant left, Powell had to stretch the available evidence and make claims about the existence of actual weapons of mass destruction that proved unsustainable. The reason to go to war was the defiance of the UN ultimatum (and of sixteen previous UN resolutions). But Colin Powellï¿½s presentation gave enough of an impression that the reason for war was the existence of stockpiles of wmds as to cloud and confuse the entire debate about the war. It was Colin Powellï¿½s presentation that became the basis for the leftï¿½s unprincipled attack on the President for allegedly ï¿½misleadingï¿½ the nation into war.

The war in Iraq was not about weapons of mass destruction; it was about Saddam Hussein's ten-year defiance of international law and his manifest determination to break the UNï¿½s arms control arrangements in order to acquire weapons of mass destruction. There was no rush to war, but rather a deliberate march to war authorized by both political parties and a unanimous vote of the Security Council (which France and Russia and China had no intention of honoring). It was not unilateral, and it was not about a ï¿½non-existent imminent threat,ï¿½ as the party of appeasement has claimed.

In his State of the Union speech on January 28, 2003, right before the fighting began, the President said in so many words that we were not going to wait until Saddam Hussein became an imminent threat. We were not going to wait until Saddam already had the weapons in place and the plan to attack us was afoot. We were not going to wait until he struck us first. ï¿½Some have said we must not act until the threat is imminent. Since when have terrorists and tyrants announced their intentions, politely putting us on notice before they strike? If this threat is permitted to fully and suddenly emerge, all actions, all words, and all recriminations would come too late. Trusting in the sanity and restraint of Saddam Hussein is not a strategy, and it is not an option.ï¿½[5]

This was the presidentï¿½s message: Saddam will comply with the UN ultimatum. He will disarm and prove that he has disarmed, or we will disarm him.

The Party of Appeasement

It was this policy that the Democratic Party and its leaders reluctantly supported and then opposed after the fact, weakening the war to consolidate the victory and establish a democratic regime in Iraq. How did the Democratic Party come to be a party of appeasement in the approach to war, and a saboteur of the war effort after the fighting has started? How did it come so powerfully under the influence of an historically anti-American left?

It is not difficult to date the leftward slide of the Democratic Party. It began with the McGovern presidential campaign of 1972, whose slogan was ï¿½American come home,ï¿½ as though America was the problem and not the aggression of the Communist bloc. The McGovern campaign drew in the rank and file of the anti-Vietnam left much as the anti-Cold War Henry Wallace Progressive Party campaign of 1948 and the Howard Dean anti-Iraq campaign of 2004. McGovern himself was a veteran of the Wallace campaign and, virtually all the leaders of the anti-Iraq movement, including most of the Democratic Party leaders who supported it are veterans of the anti-Vietnam campaign.

I have lived this history as both spectator and actor. My parents were Communists, and my first political march was a Communist Party May Day parade in 1948 supporting the the presidential campaign of Henry Wallace and the Progressive Party campaign against the Cold War, which meant against Americaï¿½s effort to contain Communism and prevent the Stalin regime from expanding its empire into Western Europe. Our change was this: ï¿½One, two, three, four, we donï¿½t want another war/Five, six, seven, eight, win with Wallace in ï¿½48.ï¿½

This campaign was the seed of the anti-war movement of Vietnam, and thus of the political leftï¿½s influence over the post-Vietnam foreign policy of the Democratic Party. The Wallace campaign marked an exodus of the anti-American left from the Democratic Party; the movement that opposed Americaï¿½s war in Vietnam marked its return. As a post-graduate student at Berkeley in the early Sixties, I was one of the organizers of the first demonstration against the war in Vietnam. It was 1962 and the organizers of this demonstration as of all the major anti-Vietnam demonstrations (and those against the Iraq war as well) was a Marxist and a leftist. The organizers of the movement against the war in Vietnam were activists who thought the Communists were liberating Vietnam in the same way Michael Moore thinks Abu Musab al-Zarqawi is liberating Iraq.

In 1968, Tom Hayden and the anti-war left incited a riot at the Democratic Party convention which effectively ended the presidential hopes of the Democratic candidate Hubert Humphrey. Humphrey, who was Lyndon Johnsonï¿½s Vice President was a supporter of the war. This paved the way for George McGovernï¿½s failed presidential run against the war in 1972.

The following year, President Nixon signed a truce in Vietnam and withdrew American troops. His goal was ï¿½peace with honor,ï¿½ which meant denying a Communist victory in South Vietnam. The truce was an uneasy one depending on a credible American threat to resume hostilities if the Communists violated the truce.

Three years earlier, Nixon had signaled an end to the draft and the massive national anti-war demonstrations had drawn to a halt. But a vanguard of activists continued the war against Americaï¿½s support for the anti-Communist war effort in Vietnam. Among them were John Kerry and Jane Fonda and Tom Hayden. They held a war crimes tribunal, condemning Americaï¿½s role in Vietnam and conducted a campaign to persuade the Democrats in Congress to cut all aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia. When Nixon was forced to resign after Watergate, the Democrats cut the aid as their first legislative act. They did this in January 1975. In April, the Cambodian and South Vietnamese regimes fell.

The events that followed this retreat in Indo-China have been all but forgotten by the left, which has never learned the lessons of Vietnam, but instead has invoked the retreat itself an inspiration and guide for its political opposition to the war in Iraq. Along with leading Democrats like party chairman Terry McAuliffe, George McGovern called for an American retreat from Iraq even before a government could be established to deny the country to the Saddamist remnants and Islamic terrorists: ï¿½I did not want any Americans to risk their lives in Iraq. We should bring home those who are there.ï¿½ Explained McGovern: ï¿½Once we left Vietnam and quit bombing its people they became friends and trading partners.ï¿½[6]

Actually that is not what happened. Four months after the Democrats cut off aid to Cambodia and Vietnam in Jaunary 1975, both regimes fell to the Communist armies. Within three years the Communist victors had slaughtered two and a half million peasants in the Indo-Chinese peninsula, paving the way for their socialist paradise. The blood of those victims is on the hands of the Americans who forced this withdrawal -- John Kerry, Ted Kennedy, Howard Dean and George McGovern, and anti-war activists like myself.

It is true that Vietnam eventually became a trading partner (ï¿½friendï¿½ is another matter). But this was not ï¿½once we left and quit bombing its people.ï¿½ Before that took place, a Republican President confronted the Soviet Union in Europe and Afghanistan and forced the collapse of the Soviet empire. It was only then, after the Cold War enemy and support of the Vietnamese Communists had been defeated that they accommodated themselves to co-existence with the United States.

The ï¿½blame America firstï¿½ mentality so manifest in this McGovern statement is endemic to the appeasement mentality that the progressive Senator so typifies: ï¿½Iraq has been nestled along the Tigris and Euphrates for 6,000 years. It will be there 6,000 more whether we stay or leave, as earlier conquerors learned.ï¿½ In McGovernï¿½s Alice-in-Wonderland universe, Iraq did not invade two countries, use chemical weapons on its Kurdish population, attempt to assassinate a U.S. president, spend tens of billions of dollars on banned weapons programs, aid and abet Islamic terrorists bent on destroying the West, and defy 17 UN resolutions to disarm itself, open its borders to UN inspectors, and adhere to the terms of the UN truce it had signed when its aggression in Kuwait was thwarted.

The ï¿½blame America firstï¿½ mentality so manifest in this McGovern statement is endemic to the appeasement mentality that the progressive Senator so typifies: ï¿½Iraq has been nestled along the Tigris and Euphrates for 6,000 years. It will be there 6,000 more whether we stay or leave, as earlier conquerors learned.ï¿½ In McGovernï¿½s Alice-in-Wonderland universe, Iraq did not invade two countries, use chemical weapons on its Kurdish population, attempt to assassinate a U.S. president, spend tens of billions of dollars on banned weapons programs, aid and abet Islamic terrorists bent on destroying the West, and defy 17 UN resolutions to disarm itself, open its borders to UN inspectors, and adhere to the terms of the UN truce it had signed when its aggression in Kuwait was thwarted.

During the battle over Vietnam policy, thirty years ago, Nixon and supporters of the war effort had warned the anti-war left of the consequences that would follow if their campaign was successful. If the United States were to leave the field of battle and retreat, the Communists would engineer a ï¿½bloodbathï¿½ of revenge and to complete their revolutionary design. When confronted by these warnings, George McGovern, John Kerry and other anti-Vietnam activists dismissed them out of hand. This was just an attempt to justify an imperialist aggression. Time proved the anti-war activists to be tragically, catastrophically wrong, although they have never had the decency to admit it.

If the United States were to leave the battlefield in Iraq now, before the peace is secured (and thus repeat the earlier retreat), there would be a bloodbath along the Tigris and Euphrates as well. The jihadists will slaughter our friends, our allies, and all of the Iraqis who are struggling for their freedom. Given the nature of the terrorist war we are in, this bloodbath would also flow into the streets of Washington and New York and potentially every American city. The jihadists have sworn to kill us all. People who think America is invulnerable, that America can just leave the field of this battle and there will be peace, do not begin to understand the world we confront.

Or if they understand it, they have tilted their allegiance to the other side. McGovernï¿½s phrase ï¿½as earlier conquerors learned,ï¿½ speaks volumes about the perverse moral calculus of the progressive left. To McGovern we are conquerors, which makes the Zarqawi terrorists ï¿½liberators,ï¿½ or as Michael Moore would prefer, ï¿½patriots.ï¿½ The left that wants America to throw in the towel in Iraq is hyper-sensitive to questions about its loyalties but at the same time can casually refer to our presence in Iraq as an ï¿½invasion and occupation.ï¿½ It wants to use the language of morality but it only wants the standard to apply in one direction. There is no one-dimensional such standard, and a politics of surrender is not a politics of peace.

The War At Home

The root cause of the division over the war in Iraq, as over the war in Vietnam, is a left that is alienated from the national purpose and believes that mankind will be better off if America loses the war with radical Islam. In the Cold War, this same left gave moral and political support to our Communist enemies; in this war it has entered an ï¿½unholy alianceï¿½[7] with radical Islam to defeat us in the war on terror.

Its opposition to Americaï¿½s wartime agendas is not limited to our efforts abroad or in Iraq; it is also at war with our homeland security defenses. There are already more than 350 American cities, which under the instigation of the political left have signed pledges refusing to cooperate with Homeland Security, particularly in regard to the protection of the nationï¿½s borders. This movement is spear-headed by the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Lawyers Guild and the legal left which provides not only intellectual leadership but active counsel for indicted terrorists.

The inspirer of the movement against the Patriot Act is himself an indicted terrorist, Sami al-Arian, former professor of engineering at the University of South Florida and head of Palestinian Islamic Jihad, a suicide bombing cult responsible for the murders of more than a hundred innocent people, including two Americans. In 1996, al-Arian founded an organization called the National Coalition to Protect Political Freedom. Its purpose was to oppose the precursor of the Patriot Act -- an anti-terrorism bill proposed by the Clinton administration in the wake of the bombing of the Federal Building in Oklahoma City. Al-Arian became a leading figure in the civil liberties left, embraced by his colleagues at the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Lawyers Guild, organizations with long histories of obstructing Americaï¿½s national security organizations.

Al-Arian opposed the anti-terrorist act because it outlawed ï¿½material support for terrorï¿½ and allowed the use of secret evidence in terrorist cases. But constitutional issues were hardly the motivating factor for al-Arian whose real motive in opposing the measure was that his brother-in-law and co-conspirator had been arrested under its provisions, as a principal in the terrorist organization called Palestinian Islamic Jihad.

Sami al-Arian is still defended by the ACLU and the National Lawyers Guild, one of whose chief executives, Kit Gage, now heads Al-Arianï¿½s organization. This ï¿½legal leftï¿½ regards him as a victim of racial profiling and the Bush Administrationï¿½s over zealous prosecution of the war on terror and alleged disregard for the Bill of Rights. Said al-Arian on his arrest: ï¿½Iï¿½m a minority. Iï¿½m an Arab. Iï¿½m a Palestinian. Iï¿½m a Muslim. Thatï¿½s not a popular thing to be these days. Do I have rights, or donï¿½t I have rights?ï¿½

The indictment of al-Arian is 120 pages long and consists of years of tapped phone transcripts showing him involved in planning and financing suicide bombings in the Middle East. Although he was exposed by journalists at the Miami Herald in the early 1990ï¿½s, the federal government could not arrest him because of legal obstacles that blocked their investigations, obstacles that had been put in place by anti-Vietnam Democrats in the 1970s and 1980s and that were only removed by the Patriot Act. For nearly a decade, al-Arian was protected by the president of the University of South Florida, Betty Coster, the Democratic Partyï¿½s senatorial candidate in the 2004 elections.

Sami al-Arian is hardly unique. National Lawyers Guild attorney and veteran leftist, Lynne Stewart, has also been indicted by the Justice Department. Like Al-Arian, Stewart is actively defended by the ACLU, the legal left and the politically sympathetic American Association of University Professors, as well as radical magazines like Salon.com and The Nation. Stewart is under indictment for helping her client, the blind sheik Omar Abdel Rahman, conduct terrorist activities in Egypt. Rahman is the leader of the Islamic Group, a terrorist cult that bombed the World Trade Center in 1993. Lynne Stewart is on record saying she believes the terrorists are liberationists and freedom fighters. ï¿½They are basically forces of national liberation,ï¿½ she told the Marxist publication Monthly Review; ï¿½and I think that we, as persons who are committed to the liberation of oppressed people, should fasten on the need for self-determination. ï¿½ My own sense is that, were the Islamists to be empowered, there would be movements within their own countries ï¿½ to liberate.ï¿½[8]

How is it possible that people who think of themselves as advocates of social justice can lend aid and comfort to Islamic radicals who behead people and blow womenï¿½s heads off with AK-47s when they are suspected of having sexual relations outside of marriage? How can self-styled progressives embrace such people? They can under the logic that the enemy of my enemy is my friend. In 1993, Stewart was honored by the National Lawyers Guild at its annual convention and told her adoring audience: ï¿½We have in Washington a poisonous government that spreads its venom to the body politic in all corners of the globe. We now resume ï¿½ our quests ï¿½ like David going forth to meet Goliath, like Beowulf the dragon slayer, ï¿½ like Sir Galahad seeking the holy grail. And modern heroes, dare I mention? Ho and Mao and Lenin, Fidel and Nelson Mandela and John Brown, Che Guevara who reminds us, ï¿½At the risk of seeming ridiculous, let me say that the true revolutionary is guided by a great feeling of love.ï¿½ï¿½

The unholy alliance between radical Islam and the American left is forged by their perception of a common enemy, which is the United States. They act under the delusion that is common to all radicals who believe they can ï¿½change the world,ï¿½ that they can give birth to new world in which ï¿½social justiceï¿½ prevails. This idea of a socially just world is the contemporary vision of communism and socialism. It is the secular analog of the 72 virgins that await Islamic jihadists in Muslim heaven.

Muslim martyrs commit mass murder in order to get into paradise. This is a precise description of the progressive agenda. Why does the left want help the Islamic radicals to destroy America? To get into paradise. Call it socialism; call it Communism; call it social justice. It is a dream of the future that is so enticing it will justify any crime required to achieve it.

The radical left does not understand that the root cause of the social problems that confront is humanity itself. We are the root cause of the inequalities and injustices that we face. There will never be a socially just world because the ï¿½newï¿½ world that revolutionaries create will be run by the same human beings, who are corrupt and selfish and fallible by nature. A hundred million corpses in the Twentieth Century, the human detritus of the socialist experiment attest to this fact. To ignore it ï¿½ and this is the basis of the revived political left ï¿½ is delusional, but that does not make it any less dangerous. Radicals have a parallel goal to the goal of the jihadists, which is paradise on earth. And they have the same enemy, which is the Great Satan, i.e., the United States.

To confront this enemy in our midst we must reverse its perceptions. The mantra of the left is ï¿½the enemy of my enemy is my friend.ï¿½ To defend ourselves we must adopt the view that the friend of my enemy is my enemy.

[2] Blix, Disarming Iraq, pp. 106 et seq. Unholy Alliance: ï¿½When the deadline arrived, the Iraq regime provided a report that was generally conceded not to have met the terms of the ultimatum. U.N. chief inspector Hans Blix summarized the Iraqi submission: ï¿½The chemical area of the text was an updated version of a declaration submitted in 1996. The missile part also had largely the same content as a declaration of 1996, with updates added. I reported to the Council that our preliminary examination of the declaration had not provided material or evidence that solved any of the unresolved disarmament issues.ï¿½ These included the fact that ï¿½8,500 liters of anthrax, 2,100 kilograms of bacterial growth media, 1.5 metric tons of VX nerve agent and 6,500 chemical bombsï¿½ that the U.N. inspectors had ascertained were at one time in Saddamï¿½s possession were unaccounted for.[2] Resolution 1441 had called on Saddam Hussein to document their destruction. Even the French ambassador noted that ï¿½there was no new information in the declaration,ï¿½ï¿½[2] Afterwards Blix wrote of the declaration, ï¿½My gut feelings, which I kept to myself, suggested to me that Iraq still engaged in prohibited activities and retained prohibited items, and that it had the documents to prove it.ï¿½ï¿½

Oh the irony. Usenet's biggest joke talking about stupidity.

LOL.

Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band
(R. Xemblinosky/P. McCartney)

It was twenty years ago today,
Roger Wiseman forced the boys to be gay
He's been going in and outa their rears
And he's made them into ravin' queers.
So watch out or I'll force on you
The act we've hated all these years,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

We're Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band, Disciples of the Bucktoothed Choad,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band,
Sit back and watch us shoot a load.
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound, Roger Wiseman's Greyhound, Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.
It's wonderful to be here,
But Wiseman's full of crap,
The dirty goddamn pederast:
That fucker gave us syphilis,
That fucker gave us clap.

I don't really want to stop the show,
But I thought you had all better know,
That Wiseman's going to play a song,
On a stickpin that he stuck through his schlong.
So let me introduce to you
The one and only Bucktoothed Choad
And Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

The Unholy Alliance Revealed
By Douglas Davis
The Spectator | August 23, 2005

Politics makes strange bedfellows. Stranger still when the odd couple are fundamentalist Islam and the secular Left. The evolving Black-Red alliance is growing in France, Germany and Belgium. But, based on the successful British model, it is now going global to declare war on the war on terror.

No fewer than three international conferences have been convened in Cairo, presided over by the former president of Algeria, Ahmed Ben Bella, under the auspices of the International Campaign Against US and Zionist Occupations. One outcome is 'The Cairo Declaration Against US Hegemony, War on Iraq and Solidarity with Palestine.' British signatories included Tony Benn, Jeremy Corbyn and, of course, the indefatigable George Galloway, whose 'fiery' participation won honourable mention in Egypt's semi-official newspaper, Al-Ahram.

If Iraq was the catalyst for the Black-Red alliance, the Stop the War coalition provided the cauldron in which the union was consummated. The result is a pure gestalt: the coalition allows its constituent parts to pack a far greater collective punch than they could have dreamt of on their own. Putting a million people on to the streets of London is not, after all, small potatoes.

The steering committee of the Marxist-Islamist alliance consists of 33 members - 18 from myriad hard-Left groups, three from the radical wing of the Labour party, eight from the ranks of the radical Islamists and four leftist ecologists (also known as 'Watermelons' -green outside, red inside). The chairman is Andrew Murray, a leading light in the British Communist party; co-chair is Muhammad Aslam Ijaz, of the London Council of Mosques. Among the major players from the Left are Lindsey German, who resigned as editor of the Socialist Workers' party newspaper to become convenor of the Stop the War coalition; John Rees, also of the SWP, and, of course, George Galloway. Indeed, the first proud progeny of the alliance is Galloway's Respect party, which fought and won the London seat of Bethnal Green and Bow, with its substantial Muslim electorate.

Points of potential disagreement between the hard Left and radical Islam - democracy, human rights, xenophobia, free-expression, feminism, homosexuality, abortion, among many others - would seem to pose insuperable barriers to the union. Not so. The hurdles have been neatly vaulted in the interest of mutual hatreds: America, Israel, globalisation, capitalism and imperialism. Anti-Semitism is never far from the surface.

True, there is some squeamishness within the 'house of horrors'. Dissent is evident in the Socialist Workers' party but not in the Muslim Association of Britain, which was inspired by the fundamentalist Muslim Brotherhood and now shelters under the umbrella of Sir Iqbal Sacranie's Muslim Council of Britain (it was, let it not be forgotten, the good Sir Iqbal who, before being scrubbed up and knighted, declared that 'death is perhaps too easy' for the allegedly blasphemous Salman Rushdie; it was Sir Iqbal, too, who refused to participate in this year's Holocaust memorial events because they did not refer to the supposed genocide of the Palestinians).

Those on the Left who support the alliance have found not only a revitalising cause but also an unexpected and deep hinterland from which to draw support. 'The practical benefits of working together are enough to compensate for the differences,' I was told. 'And success tends to win the argument.' Such opportunism exposes a strain of pernicious racism that allows the Left to indulge outrageous bigotry as long as it is espoused by brown people.

'The far Left will always support Third World peoples against what they view as an imperialist West,' notes one analyst who has closely followed the phenomenon. Another says, 'Islamists in the West have skilfully used the tools of intellectual intimidation to build an inviolate wall around Islam, giving it a sacred status that brooks no criticism.' The French Leftist leader Olivier Besanï¿½onneau added political piquancy when explaining his inclusivist approach to the Islamists: 'Are these not the new slaves? Is it not natural they should unite with the working class to destroy the capitalist system?'

But there are small voices of doubt. To some within Britain's Trotskyite Alliance for Workers' Liberty, the unholy marriage is outright heresy. One Trot describes SWP advocates of the Black-Red alliance as 'demoralised Guardian readers with headscarves', a withering allusion to the SWP organiser who ordered secular, socialist women to cover their heads while demonstrating with their Muslim sisters outside the Israeli embassy in London. And he is scathing of SWP monitors who enforced gender segregation to mollify Muslim sensibilities at a demonstration in Trafalgar Square. 'Marxists are secular or they are not Marxists,' said the Trot with principled purity.

Dogma runs deep. The Islamists accentuate the positive, noting Galloway's opposition to abortion and his professed religious faith, which, according to one, 'will surely be welcomed by British Muslims who see Respect as a real alternative'. And why complain when the Left is so obligingly on message? Take Spark, the organ of Arthur Scargill's Socialist Labour party, which hailed Asif Mohammed Hanif, the British suicide-bomber who attacked a beachfront bar in Tel Aviv, as a 'hero of the revolutionary youth'. Hanif, declared the paper, had carried out his mission 'in the spirit of internationalism'.

The fact is the coalition has been a godsend to both sides. The Left, a once-dwindling band of communists, Trotskyites, Maoists and Castroists, had been clinging to the dregs of a clapped-out cause; the Islamists could deliver numbers and passion, but they needed a vehicle to give them purchase on the political terrain. A tactical alliance became an operational imperative.

Indeed, the first to advocate the Black-Red alliance was none other than Ayman al-Zawahiri, deputy to Osama bin Laden and ideologue of al-Qa'eda. In a message delivered in August 2002, he called on sympathisers to seek allies among 'any movement that opposes America, even atheists'. This sentiment was refined in London by Abu Hamza al-Masri, the hook-handed Islamist from Central Casting who is currently fighting extradition to the United States on terrorism charges. 'We say to anyone who hates the Americans and wants to throw the Jews out of Palestine - Ahlan wa Sahlan (welcome). The Prophet teaches that we could ally ourselves even with the atheists if it helps us destroy [the] enemy.'

But the Tora Bora Award for Chutzpah goes to George Galloway, veteran champion of Arab and Islamist causes. Appearing on al-Jazeera television last month, he attacked the West while extolling Islamic virtue. 'It's not the Muslims who are the terrorists,' he declared. 'The biggest terrorists are Bush and Blair, Berlusconi and Aznar.... We believe in the Prophets, peace be upon them. [Bush] believes in the profits, and how to get a piece of them. That's his god.'

Marx meets Mohammed. High theatre meets low farce. The savvy Galloway, now more godly than gorgeous, has created a conduit through which Islamofascism pumps its poison into Britain's political bloodstream. It would be quite funny were it not so serious.

Lately, when I give talks, I encourage the folks, especially the liberals, to repeat after me: ï¿½The men who flew the planes into the Trade Towers were evil fuckheads. They were simply a bunch of Ted Bundy psychos who perverted the teachings of a great and ancient religion to justify mass murder. As a patriotic American liberal, I will not attempt to ï¿½understandï¿½ the terrorists, or ï¿½explainï¿½ their behavior, or blame their victims. Instead, I will recognize that the United States, while far from perfect, is the most progressive and inclusive society in the history of the world. And it is the fundamentalists of the world, including many of our own from the right and left, who hate us and want to destroy us precisely because of our progressive and inclusive society. Osama and his gang hate womenï¿½s rights, gay rights, the separation of church and state, freedom of speech and religion, and pretty much everything else about us, except for maybe the 2nd amendment. So, as patriotic American liberals, in love with our country, and in love with womensï¿½ rights, gay rights, the separation of church and state, freedom of speech and religion, and pretty much everything else about us, except for maybe the 2nd amendment, we must battle all forms of fundamentalism, foreign and domestic. Okay, folks, letï¿½s do that again: The men who flew the planes into the Trade Towers were evil fuckheads...ï¿½

If you do some looking you'll find he basically runs a cult where people have to turn over all their belongings to move onto his commune.

That's when they find JESUS. He's the one who's left in the good group.

Amazingly, Jesus is usually also the one making the division too.
Weird how that works out. I'd think Jesus would be all wore out.

Just how inclusive were we that we didn't let blacks have equal rights until recently and let women vote?

Then again, the Iraqis aren't going to let theri women have as may rights as men, but that's the "freedom" we're giving them as a gift.

One last thing. You may call Osama and his buddies evil. I just think they are power hungry a-holes. I don't think they look at us and care about our freedoms. They just have a need to show they are powerful by destroying a big nation. If he cared about freedoms, he would have picked another target. But he chose the WTC because it represented money, the economy and an icon of America. Thinking that he cares about all that other crap you posted is just some patriotic and nationalist rhetoric.

Handy Shortwave Chart
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. Also includes WARC-92 broadcast band extensions, which may be used before April 1, 2007 on a secondary (non-interference) basis. For multi-use bands, most common usage is shown. Some stations operate outside the official bands. Information is from Sep 2000 NTIA allocations table, see:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/allochrt.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines usually don't. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I find that it outperforms the telescopic whip antennas built into most portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \ or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be purchased from some shortwave dealers.

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

By the way, these filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

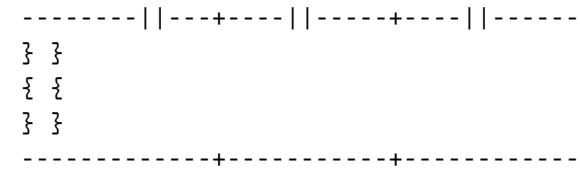
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)

Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.



The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB
1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

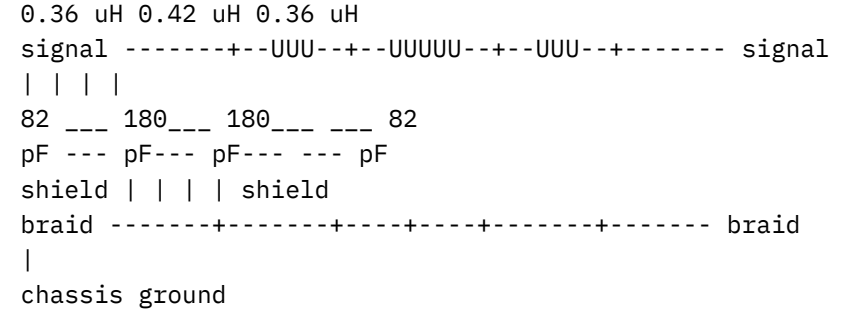
Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)



I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

(what kind of animals attack a children's hospital?)

"The Children`s Hospital in New Orleans has come under siege by looters, the New Orleans Times Picayune reports. Late Tuesday, Gov. Kathleen Blanco`s spokeswoman Denise Bottcher said the facility in the city`s north end was being targeted, and people in the hospital were in danger. "The staff are huddled with the 100 sick kids inside, waiting for help to arrive as looters try to break in," she said. The director of the hospital said police had been summoned, but neither they nor National Guard responded.

Even a nursing home was targeted by looters, who took a bus and threatened the driver and residents. The home plans to relocate residents and its director said she's considering arming workers."

No one's replied so if I may: The 7600GR AM and SW RF amplifiers are simply connected in parallel, with no on-off switching, to the mixer. The high 55MHz 1st IF gives very good AM broadcast band image rejection in SW but is less effective conversely. The whip also (as pointed out here) picks up noise and that addition may contrubute to overloading the mixer and AGC circuit which now (with a an external antenna) has very high input.

"THERE IS NO EVIDENCE that Saddam Hussein was connected in any way to al Qaeda."

So declared CNN Anchor Carol Costello in an interview yesterday with Representative Robin Hayes (no relation) from North Carolina.

Hayes politely challenged her claim. "Ma'am, I'm sorry, but you're mistaken. There's evidence everywhere. We get access to it. Unfortunately, others don't."

CNN played the exchange throughout the day. At one point, anchor Daryn Kagan even seemed to correct Rep. Hayes after replaying the clip. "And according to the record, the 9/11 Commission in its final report found no connection between al Qaeda and Saddam Hussein."

The CNN claims are wrong. Not a matter of nuance. Not a matter of interpretation. Just plain incorrect. They are so mistaken, in fact, that viewers should demand an on-air correction.

But such claims are, sadly, representative of the broad media misunderstanding of the relationship between Iraq and al Qaeda. Richard Cohen, columnist for the Washington Post, regularly chides the Bush administration for presenting what he calls fabricated or "fictive" links between Iraq and al Qaeda. The editor of the Los Angeles Times scolded the Bush administration for perpetuating the "myth" of such links. "Sixty Minutes" anchor Lesley Stahl put it bluntly: "There was no connection."

Conveniently, such analyses ignore statements like this one from Thomas Kean, chairman of the 9/11 Commission. "There was no question in our minds that there was a relationship between Iraq and al Qaeda." Hard to believe reporters just missed it--he made the comments at the press conference held to release the commission's final report. And that report detailed several "friendly contacts" between Iraq and al Qaeda, and concluded only that there was no proof of Iraqi involvement in al Qaeda terrorist attacks against American interests. Details, details.

There have been several recent developments. One month ago, Jordan's King Abdullah explained to the Arabic-language newspaper al Hayat that his government had tried before the Iraq war to extradite Abu Musab al Zarqawi from Iraq. "We had information that he entered Iraq from a neighboring country, where he lived and what he was doing. We informed the Iraqi authorities about all this detailed information we had, but they didn't respond." He added: "Since Zarqawi entered Iraq before the fall of the former regime we have been trying to have him deported back to Jordan for trial, but our efforts were in vain."

One week later, former Iraqi Prime Minister Iyad Allawi told the same newspaper that the new Iraqi government is in possession of documents showing that Ayman al Zawahiri, bin Laden's top deputy, and Zarqawi both entered Iraq in September 1999. (If the documents are authentic, they suggest that Zarqawi may have plotted the Jordanian Millennium attacks from Iraq.)

Beyond what people are saying about the Iraq-al Qaeda connection, there is the evidence. In 1992 the Iraqi Intelligence services compiled a list of its assets. On page 14 of the document, marked "Top Secret" and dated March 28, 1992, is the name of Osama bin Laden, who is reported to have a "good relationship" with the Iraqi intelligence section in Syria. The Defense Intelligence Agency has possession of the document and has assessed that it is accurate. In 1993, Saddam Hussein and bin Laden reached an "understanding" that Islamic radicals would refrain from attacking the Iraqi regime in exchange for unspecified assistance, including weapons development. This understanding, which was included in the Clinton administration's indictment of bin Laden in the spring of 1998, has been corroborated by numerous Iraqis and al Qaeda terrorists now in U.S. custody. In 1994, Faruq Hijazi, then deputy director of Iraqi Intelligence, met face-to-face with bin Laden. Bin Laden requested anti-ship limpet mines and training camps in Iraq. Hijazi has detailed the meeting in a custodial interview with U.S. interrogators. In 1995, according to internal Iraqi intelligence documents first reported by the New York Times on June 25, 2004, a "former director of operations for Iraqi Intelligence Directorate 4 met with Mr. bin Laden on Feb. 19." When bin Laden left Sudan in 1996, the document states, Iraqi intelligence sough "other channels through which to handle the relationship, in light of his current location." That same year, Hussein agreed to a request from bin Laden to broadcast anti-Saudi propaganda on Iraqi state television. In 1997, al Qaeda sent an emissary with the nom de guerre Abdullah al Iraqi to Iraq for training on weapons of mass destruction. Colin Powell cited this evidence in his presentation at the UN on February 5, 2003. The Senate Intelligence Committee has concluded that Powell's presentation on Iraq and terrorism was "reasonable." "THERE IS NO EVIDENCE that Saddam Hussein was connected in any way to al Qaeda."

Time to Tell All About Iraq and al-Qaeda
Jay Bryant (archive)

June 1, 2004

News media bias is at least as often evident in the stories that are not reported, or are underreported, than in actual manipulation of the facts in stories that are reported.

Right now, there are a number of truly important news stories that are receiving vastly less coverage than they deserve, including the United Nations Oil For Food Program scandal, the vitriolic opposition to John Kerry by a majority of the officers who served in his boat squadron in Vietnam and Al Gore's hate-filled speech at MoveOn.org ï¿½ which has been treated as a one-day story (on interior pages in both the NY Times and Washington Post, with the most inflammatory parts left out.) The truth is that Gore's manic remarks are at least as over the top as were those of his friend Howard Dean on the night of the Iowa primary.

But that was then, this is now, and don't look for the mainstream press to do anything that might help George W. Bush.

The mother of all underreported stories is the growing evidence for a conspiracy between Saddam Hussein's Iraq and Osama bin Laden's al-Qaeda.

There is probably no greater divide between those who support President Bush and his administration on Iraq than this question: is the War in Iraq a component of the War on Terrorism, or is it a distraction from the War on Terrorism? For the Administration and its supporters, the first view is fundamental; with Iraq in the hands of Saddam Hussein, the War on Terrorism could never be won. This is not quite the same thing as saying that Saddam and al-Qaeda were in cahoots, but if they were, then the case is made ipso facto. If moreover, Saddam was somehow implicated in 9/11, the case is not only made, it becomes of the utmost importance.

Liberal orthodoxy holds that there was no connection. Saddam was a secularist; Osama and his followers are among the most extreme theists who have ever lived. They are, therefore, natural enemies. So, over and over, the media ï¿½ expressing the liberal view ï¿½ has refused to give any credence whatsoever to the proposition that however different the two men may be on many issues, Osama and Saddam nonetheless fit under at least one tent quite nicely, and that tent, from at least 1991, has been the one with the sign that reads "Hate America."

At least two separate lines of evidence point to a pre-9/11 Saddam-Osama axis of evil. The Czechs have always maintained that 9/11 mastermind Mohammad Atta met with an Iraqi intelligence officer, Ahmad Khalil Ibrahim Samir al-Ani, in Prague in April, 2001. The CIA, on the other hand, has maintained Atta was in the US at the time. But in fact, Atta's whereabouts cannot be established between April 5 and 11, and on the 4th, he and another of the 9/11 hijackers cashed an $8,000 check in Virginia Beach, VA.

Atta and al-Ani also apparently met in May and June of 2000 after which Atta flew from Prague to Newark. It all sounds like Atta was an Iraqi intelligence "asset," and al-Ani was his handler. Newsweek is now claiming that the whole story was a fiction made up by Ahmed Chalabi (wasn't everything?) but people who've followed the trail closely aren't buying it.

Newsweek may not believe in an Iraq/al-Qaeda connection now, but they used to. In their January 11, 1999 issue, they wrote: "Saddam Hussein, who has a long record of supporting terrorism, is trying to rebuild his intelligence network overseas-- assets that would allow him to establish a terrorism network. U.S. sources say he is reaching out to Islamic terrorists, including some who may be linked to Osama bin Laden, the wealthy Saudi exile accused of masterminding the bombing of two U.S. embassies in Africa last summer." Well, as I said once before in this article, that was then, this is now. Then, the Clinton Administration wanted a connection, and even that paragon of honesty, Richard Clarke, told the Washington Post there were links, a statement the Post would duly print in January of 1999. Now, with a Republican administration, Clarke will not admit, and the media establishment will not publish, anything suggesting a connection.

Writer Stephen Hayes of the Weekly Standard, has (in addition to digging out the 1999 quotes above) detailed the second piece of evidence for an Iraq/al-Qaeda conspiracy , which centers on another probable Iraqi intelligence officer named Ahmed Hikmat Shakir, who was present at an al-Qaeda summit in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, on January 5-8, 2000. At least three of the 9/11 hijackers were also present at that meeting. On September 17, 2001, Shakir was arrested in Qatar and had in his possession contact information for known al-Qaeda terrorists, including some with 9/11 connections. He was released, arrested again when his plane to Baghdad stopped in Jordan. Jordanian intelligence thought they'd struck a counterintelligence deal with him and sent him on his way to Baghdad. He has not been heard from since, according to Hayes.

Finding and publicizing an Iraq/al-Qaeda connection is probably even more important than finding weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. We know why the Kerrybacking news media won't print it, and probably the only way to get them to do so is for a top-level Bush Administration figure to speak out. There may be vital security interests inhibiting such a statement, or the evidence may still need shoring up.

Or else they're waiting for the right political moment, which I humbly suggest is now.

No we are fighting members of several groups who themselves have been fighting one-another for centuries. Couldn't tell you whether they are evil, since I don't know what the word means. I do know we are priming ourselves for a departure Viet-Nam-style and will leave a total vacuum of power in our wake. Expect that chaos and much more killing will occur once we depart.

I can't think of a radio that's as small as the HF-150 that can match it's performance. They're nicely made.

And considering what used ones sell for, other folks must feel the same way.

Hi Rob

So are you saying the GE Super Radio II {2} is the best one GE makes for shortwave??

Can you please elaborate on why the radio impressed you so much? What are the features that make this radio still talked about today?

Thanks ahead

The digital display shows the center of bandpass, not the carrier frequency like a higher resolution display on one of the more ham oriented receivers does. (Note that the frequency doesn't shift when you switch between USB and LSB). It will always read 1.6 kHz off (either way) for an SSB signal. Well, rounded off to the nearest 1 kHz.

If you try and adjust the counter, you'll screw up the clock.
(The 3.2768 MHz xtal on the top board).

The analog dial on the VFO is a friction fit, the silver ring knob at the back of the main tuning knob can be shifted to align that dial.

I have the Super 1 (7-2880a) and it beat the socks off of my early (I assume it's an early one since I have had it for about 10 yr) Super3. The one pulls in MW stations that the three wasn't even getting. Never use it for FM so can't evaluate the FM side
As near as I can tell there are only minor differences between the one and two, the two has a tweeter which the one's do not. The very early one (mine) does not have external antenna connections while the later ones and the two do.
I also have Radio Shacks attempt to copy the GE Super and it isn't even in the race, actually it sounds like a radio with a squelch that is set quite deep, it's just another nice sounding portable that's good for local use only. RM~

That was before we saw the planet on Christmas Eve, 1968. That changed everything.

To defeat evil, you must become evil, though.

NY Times,NY Slimes.John,(he used to work at the auto/truck/lawnmower battery factory in Florence,Mississippi where I used to work) used to subscribe to the NY Slimes.That was back in the 1980's and 1990's,,, uh huh.During our ten minute break periods and our half hour lunch break periods,he would spred out that NY Slimes lieing rag and be reading.One night I said to John, (John Thomas,he was from California) I said,John,why do you read those lieing left wing NY Slimes rags? John owned two big dogs,and when he wasen't working,he would walk his dogs around the battery factory and up and down a few of the streets around there.Back in the back part of the factory,sometimes some of us guys would be takeing batteriers off the lines and putting more batteries on the lines and hooking them up to the battery chargers.John would be rounding the corner back there walking his dogs and here we go,WOOF! Children's Hospital under siege

http://www.nola.com/newslogs/breakingtp/index.ssf?/mtlogs/nola_Times-Picayune/archives/2005_08.html#075290

Tuesday, 11:45 p.m.

Late Tuesday, Gov. Blanco spokeswoman Denise Bottcher described a disturbing scene unfolding in uptown New Orleans, where looters were trying to break into Children's Hospital.

Bottcher said the director of the hospital fears for the safety of the staff and the 100 kids inside the hospital. The director said the hospital is locked, but that the looters were trying to break in and had gathered outside the facility.

The director has sought help from the police, but, due to rising flood waters, police have not been able to respond.

Bottcher said Blanco has been told of the situation and has informed the National Guard. However, Bottcher said, the National Guard has also been unable to respond.

I wrote a protracted letter to the people at CNN last night, after hearing them harping that the feds were unprepared and too slow to respond to the crisis..

H-E-Double-Toothpicks.. what were they supposed to do? Set up camp right there on the coast and get blown away themselves? They set up staging areas where they felt they would be most advantageous. How were they supposed to know that all roads into the city would become impassible? I admire the efforts of the rescuers who have used what they had on hand to get to those in need. Yes, it's inadequate, but it's also largely beyond anyone's control at this point to do better. Give credit where credit is due.

WALTER MAESTRI: It's going to look like a massive shipwreck. There's going to be-- there's going to be, you know-- everything that that the water has carried in is going to be there. Alligators, moccasins, you know every kind of rodent that you could think of.

All of your sewage treatment plants are under water. And of course the material is flowing free in the community. Disease becomes a distinct possibility now. The petrochemicals that are produced all up and down the Mississippi River --much of that has floated into this bowl. I mean this has become, you know, the biggest toxic waste dump in the world now. Is the city of New Orleans because of what has happened.

DANIEL ZWERDLING: Federal officials say that nobody in America has confronted these conditions before. Not across an entire city. Not after an earthquake. Not after floods. Not even after September 11th:

So they've gone to the US Army Corps of Engineers, and they've asked them to figure out ï¿½ How would the city even begin to function? Jay Combe has spent the last few years assembling a doomsday manual.

JAY COMBE: Street signs will be gone. The things that you normally think, "Well, I'm going 'round the corner of Broadway and St. Charles," and that place won't be there.

DANIEL ZWERDLING: So Combe's been mapping crucial structures with longitude and latitude, because he says emergency crews will have to use navigation devices just to find out where they are.

And Combe says, how will they get the water out of the city? For the past hundred years, New Orleans has operated one of the biggest pumping systems in the world. Every time there's a major rain, colossal turbines suck up the water and pump it out of "The Bowl." Combe says that won't work after a big hurricane.

JAY COMBE: The problem is that the city's been under water, the pumps are flooded. They don't operate now. We have to get the pumps back in operation and in order to get the pumps back in operation, we have to get the water out of the city.

DANIEL ZWERDLING: Catch-22

JAY COMBE: That's correct.

DANIEL ZWERDLING: And here's perhaps the most troubling question of all: if a huge hurricane does hit New Orleans, how many people will die?

JAY COMBE: I think of a terrible disaster. I think of 100,000, and that's just my guess. I think that there's a terrible lack of perception. The last serious hurricane we had here was in 1965. That's close to 40 years ago.

So, we've dodged bullets three times since Betsy and I'm not sure we can keep counting on the hurricane changing its mind and going someplace else.

DANIEL ZWERDLING: Stories about disasters in America usually end on an optimistic note. People rebound. The nation rebuilds. Life gradually gets back to normal. But officials in Louisiana are facing another possibility: If a monster storm strikes New Orleans, this city might never come back.

DANIEL ZWERDLING (ADDRESSING SUHAYDA): Are you seriously suggesting that the nation might have to abandon the city of New Orleans?

JOE SUHAYDA: I think there would be some concern perhaps of rather than trying to rebuild the city would be then to just demolish those areas that couldn't be refurbished, reclaimed and basically start from some kind of scratch or blank slate, so to speak.

WALTER MAESTRI: And if I'm the Senator from South Dakota or North Dakota or wherever, you know, am I going to want to vote the kind of massive funding that it's going to take to rebuild it, given the fact that nobody can promise me that it's not gonna happen again two weeks later.

Today, there are a "fair" amount of 'festers on site with the camper section near 74 Business full. The guy next to me is from New York, so some aren't afraid to travel. The Exxon out there on 74 and 74 Business had their gas at $3.39 per gallon! Petros in Gastonia 10 cent cheaper.

IMHO, this is nothing but a lousy attempt to take advantage of one situation and "claim" their huge price increases are valid; it is a GOUGE that I hope BACKFIRES on the oil companies. It's time for consumers to simply NOT buy for a few days and see what happens. Of course, I suspect the gas price will "mysteriously" begin to drop after the Labor Day holiday disguised as refineries being "repaired" (how concidental that they get repaired right after Labor Day because they can "hide" under the disaster.) I hope they CHOKE on their ill-gotten profits! :(Me, except for attending the hamfes)t, I am sitting at home until the SOB's rot; I can WALK to the grocery store if I have to!

Given that most of the residents of New Orleans are black, I'd expect most of the ones "left behind" to be black.

I imagine we'd have worked just as hard to help them if they were white.

But who besides you cares what color they are?

But many of the people who are still there chose to stay when they were warned to get out.

One of them is Fats Domino. Hopefully, he and his family are OK.

And many had no way to leave, even if they did want to.

My prayers go out for them all.

Hope Fats is around for the next big Rock and Roll revival.

Radio France International (RFI) broacasts in French to US? None.
There are none that I am actively aware of.
Sadly, St. Pierre & Miquelon were never used as a relay station bases to North America.

-- Only 100 kw is needed to cover North America from the Atlantic Time Zone.
-- At least 2 x HR 4/4/1 transmission antennas [standard for shortwave broadcasting] could have covered the US and Canada, provided that they were used simultaneously to create a 120 degree beam.
-- This broadcast antenna design is essentally what RNZI uses at Rangataki Relay Station.

RG-174 is the smallest, most flexible 50 Ohm coax I have found.
somehwre I have the RG number for mini 75 Ohm coax. While our radio don't really care, video is much less forgiving and mini coax is really nice for snaking a short discrete video run.

I gave up on soldering RG174 connectors and use "crimp on" connectors. The connectors are reasonable in cost, but a good crimp tool is priced like it is made from gold!

Glad you found some coax that would work..

My "go kit" has a ATS-909 with 25' of RG-174 coupled to a 9:1 in a sturdy UV resistant plastic box with stainless steel nuts/bolts to allow the rapid deployment of an antenna. I replaced the stock narrow ceramic IF fitler with one from a CB and it really helps in crudy conditions. You mentioned the need to build an external power pack, I have built a 5 "C" cell holder for NiMH that power the ATS909/DX398 for several long nights of listening. I also have a LM317 +~12V to 6V converter to allow opertion from a car battery.
Just take care to keep the shell isolated from ground, it is +!
I get more run time by grounding the - to the RF outer shell, bypassing the series protection diode. Take great care!

I am truly sorry for the lives lost in New Orleans, but also very surprised.
America for its glory and all its power cant even get its act together for there own.
This is so sad, DONT tel me they had no warning about the hurricane.
This just goes to show no matter how big or powerfull or how advanced a country is, a hurricane that size can bring it to its knees in no time.

I truly hope New Orleans gets back on its feet and eventualy gets back to some sort of normality. My heart goes out to all those who have lost loved ones.

Come on Bush get off your f ass and do some thing.
Its ok to go on TV and tell all how they should be, DO SOMETHING talk is cheap. You have no problem in pouring money into invading Irak, how about putting some money into saving your own people.

I will concede that they may be sufficiently deranged to have actually

Well -- I agree that the price bump in the last few days is suspicious. On the other hand, consider the following:

o Forty percent of the nations refinery capacity is at an absolute standstil.

o The main pipeline feeding the entire eastern half of the US for what refined products ARE available in storage terminals is running at less than 30% capacity.

o The Gulf Coast has the landing terminals for 50% of all crude oil consumed by the US.

o Every agency on the ground says it will be weeks before things are back to normal.

Everything we learned in high-school economics tells us: Prices are going to rise. I fear that it is going to get worse before it gets better. If it makes you feel any better, buy energy stock.

> It's time for consumers to simply NOT buy for a few days and see

Well, the trick is not to move your purchase decision - a deferred purchase is still a purchase. The trick is to actually lower consumption -- something that, for good or for bad, my countrymen have not shown a great interest in for decades.

I cannot believe someone wrote that - Do you honestly suspect the oil industry conspired to make a hurricane happen near a busy travelling weekend? Sometimes an amazing coincidence is just a coincidence.

Reminds me "And the second gangster says to the third, `but how were you able to arrange a flood?' ... " [1]

A great idea all the time -- good for one's health, good for the environment. Now if we just had urban planning that put the grocery stores a teeny bit closer to where we lived ...

Of course, I live down in XE land, so we have abundant cheap gasoline (US $2.15 at current exchange rates) and I have three grocery stores within a five minute walk of my house.

Good for you. The closest grocery to my house isa couple miles away.
It is down a busy highway with no place to walk, and I have to use a cane so walking to the grocery is out of the question. Because of this I try to arrange to stop at the grocery when I have to leave the house for another reason.

As I always say, "We all have our bears to cross!" ;-)

WHERE TO BUY YOUR USA-GAS

WHERE TO BUY YOUR USA-GAS, THIS IS VERY IMPORTANT TO KNOW. READ ON-- Why didn't George W. think of this? Gas rationing in the 80's worked even though we grumbled about it.

It might even be good for us!

The Saudis are boycotting American goods.

We should return the favor.

An interesting thought is to boycott their GAS.
Every time you fill up the car, you can avoid putting more money into the coffers of Saudi Arabia.
Just buy from gas companies that don't import their oil from the Saudis.

Nothing is more frustrating than the feeling that every time I fill-up the tank, I am sending my money to people who are trying to kill me, my family, and my friends.

I thought it might be interesting for you to know which oil companies are the best to buy gas from and which major companies import Middle Eastern oil.

These companies import Middle Eastern oil:
Shell..... 205,742,000 barrels
Chevron/Texaco..... 144,332,000 barrels
Exxon /Mobil..... 130,082,000 barrels
Marathon/Speedway... 117,740,000 barrels
Amoco.....62,231,000 barrels
If you do the math at $30/barrel, these imports amount to over $18 BILLION! (oil is now $55-$60 a barrel)

Here are some large companies that do not import Middle Eastern oil:

Citgo.....0 barrels
Sunoco.....0 barrels
Conoco.....0 barrels
Sinclair.....0 barrels
BP/Phillips.....0 barrels
Hess.....0 barrels
ARC0.....0 barrels

All of this information is available from the Department of Energy and each is required to state where they get their oil and how much they are importing.

But to have an impact, we need to reach literally millions of gas buyers. It's really simple to do.

Now, don't wimp out at this point.... keep reading and I'll explain how simple it is to reach millions of people!!

I'm sending this note to about thirty people.

If each of you send it to at least ten more (30 x 10 = 300)... and those 300 send it to at least ten more (300 x 10 = 3,000) .. and so on, by the time the message reaches the sixth generation of people, we will have reached over THREE MILLION consumers !!!!!!!

If those three million get excited and pass this on to ten friends each, then 30 million people will have been contacted!

If it goes one level further, you guessed it ..... THREE HUNDRED MILLION PEOPLE!!!

Radio captures the horror, exhaustion

By Dave Walker
TV columnist

http://www.nola.com/newslogs/breakingtp/index.ssf?/mtlogs/nola_Times-Picayune/archives/2005_08.html#075290

The exasperation, sadness, shock and exhaustion in Dave Cohen's voice said more than the words he was saying, and they were bad enough.

This was midday Wednesday, and Cohen was manning the microphone at WWL AM 870, the New Orleans news-talk station that was providing a lifeline of information to thousands of evacuees around the region, one of them me.

The hole in the levee allowing Lake Pontchartrain to dump into unflooded portions of New Orleans and Jefferson Parish had not been mended. The "bowl effect" was going to be achieved, with the city filling with water, maybe all the way to the brim created by the walls built to protect it.

Cohen sounded defeated by the implications. Toxic contamination, structural wasting by weeks of submersion, the horrific liquid funk that would harbor insects, disease, more death.

The possibility that the city itself would be uninhabitable, even once the breach was blocked and the water was drained and the destroyed trees and houses and corpses cleaned up and the looters at last in retreat, seemed utterly real and likely to Cohen, and, no doubt, many of his listeners.

That WWL had stayed on the air at all was a dramatic tale that will be told here in fuller detail in later weeks and, I'm sure, years.

WWL abandoned its downtown cluster of studios overlooking the Louisiana Superdome after Hurricane Katrina blew out all of the office windows.

Listeners who heard host Garland Robinette's narration of the live, on-the-air retreat farther inside the building as Katrina pounded away, heard horrible/wonderful broadcasting - a horror to listen to, but a wonder, too.

Literally blown out, a broadcast skeleton crew moved to the basement of the Jefferson Parish emergency operations center, according to a spokesman for Entercom Communications, the Pennsylvania-based parent company to WWL and several other New Orleans radio stations.

As last-gasp efforts were underway to remove the thousands of people still trapped in New Orleans on Wednesday, Entercom was making plans to remove its makeshift studio all the way to Baton Rouge, which has become the local media staging area for post-Katrina coverage.

With cable news carrying pictures of the USS Bataan steaming into position to provide a command center for the relief effort, it was hard not to frame the day in Biblical context.

Wednesday began with TV and radio coverage of live prayers by the governor and a collection of holy men. By the time New Orleans City Council President Oliver Thomas joined Cohen and Chris Miller on WWL in mid-afternoon, the things he'd seen in the streets were going to be literally unforgettable.

He'd seen a body, probably many, in the water on a reconnaissance boat trip.

"I still see that body," he said. "I see his position. I see the color of the clothes he had on."

He'd seen looters, too, and asked anybody with ulterior intentions "to get on your knees and pray for intervention."

He'd seen hell where a kind of heaven should be.

He'd heard references to Sodom and Gomorrah.

"Maybe God's going to cleanse us," said Thomas.

No place is that wicked.

TV columnist Dave Walker can be reached at davewala@yahoo.com.

"You can do everything for other countries, but you can't do nothing for your own people," he added. "You can go overseas with the military, but you can't get them down here."

This, of course, is horse shit. Most reasonable people don't deny the evil that was the Saddam Hussein regime or the evil of the terrorist insurgents. But misrepresenting what people believe makes it easier bash the left. Why aren't we battling the evil in Africa or South America or North Korea? You gotta quit listening to talk radio so much KATCHUP, you're beginning to sound like a knee jerk right wing, er, jerk.

I didn't get out and go anywhere today,but yesterday and the day before,there were lonnnggg lines at all of the gas stations I saw that were open and selling gas.On Monday of this week,there was a rumor going around here in Mississippi that all of the gas stations are running out of gas.Of course,the rumor is not true.My car has about half a tank of gas,that half tank of gas will last me about three or four weeks.I am not worried at all about getting gas for my car and my van.There will be lots of gas at all of the gas stations. www.jacksongasprices.com

I have been to New Orleans many,many,many times before.I have walked up the steps and stood on those Levees before in New Orleans.I turned around and I looked at those residential houses on the streets down below me,my feet were as high up on the Levee as the height of the roof tops of the houses.I turned around again and I looked out over Lake Ponchartrain.It was Scarey,I can tell you! I got back in my van and I went to Vieux Carrie (French Quarter) for a while and then I came back home.I was thinking,I sure am glad I dont live in New Orleans,it is a wonderfull city to visit,but not for me.My house here in Jackson is always high and dry.In fact,the side of the street I live on is about half the height of one story houses higher up than the houses across the street from me.It would take a hell of a flood to flood my house.

Left behind or decided to stay?? There's a good amount of both, IMHO.

> If this had been a red State city city full of affluent white people > would the response have been different ??

Nope. Of course, who knows what would have happened in the breakdown of law and order. I've never seen a breakdown in an affluent part of town, but that doesn't mean that it can't happen, either. We got to see our own personal breakdown of law and order up close and personal here in Cincy. Took about 2 days to restore order in the 2001 riots, and that was without the logistical nightmare facing NO right now. When all the police were trying to restore order in the affected parts of town, several houses in the "calmer" parts of town decided it was a good idea to throw huge boozer and marijuana parties, because they knew the cops weren't around to arrest them or break up the parties.

Once enough National Guard troops and Army troops (when they're formally invited in) hit the ground, the lawlessness will get corrected. Besides, once NO is cleared out, all the stolen stuff will have to remain behind anyway. It would look rather obvious if you're trying to get on a bus carrying a plasma television.

Nail jello to a wall,,, push a chain up a hill? Here is a neat little trick.Get an empty glass soda pop bottle and find an inside corner of a bare unpainted concrete/cinder block wall.Bet somebody you can hang the bottle in the corner.Rub the bottle up and down agains't the inside corner of the wall.If you do it right,the bottle will stay right there for a while.Every link of a chain comes to a complete stop as the link(s) are going around the chain sprockets even though the chain and chain sprockets are still going around and around and around,,,,,,,,, cuhulin

As far as I can tell, barnegat is relating a sad, human interest story that is radio related.
You seem to diss that.
You, DX are an asshole of a huge magnitude.
I cordially invite you to go fuck yourself. The scope of your idiocity is staggering.
You are such an insult to humanity that I cannot even find he words to describe it.
Were you to be in front of me at the moment I would tear your head off and

The reason ''terrorism'' works is because they are willing to be more

We can blame him for cancelling the funds for the flood control improvments that everyone said were called for to mee a CAT5 hurricane and for dissassembling FEMA, the agency that was capable of responding if the flood happpened anyway.

Tennessee Titans quarterback Steve McNair teamed with Green Bay Packers quarterback Brett Favre and arranged to fill a tractor-trailer with relief supplies bound for Mississippi. McNair also asked his fans to help him raise money for victims of Hurricane Katrina. McNair, who has a home near Favre's in Hattiesburg, Miss., is offering to swap an autographed photo for each minimum donation of $100 to his foundation.

Actual dialogue between Ronald Reagan and Nancy Reagan (nee Davis), in the movie,
"Hellcats of the Navy":

(standing in front of a stack of naval mines)

Nancy: What are you going to do after the war?

Ronald: I told you a hundred times.

Nancy: I want to hear it once more.

Ronald: I'm going into the surplus business.
I'm gonna buy up all the old mines and sell them to the man in the moon.

Nancy: But there's no water on the moon!

Ronald: How do you know so much about the moon?

Nancy: I know a lot about it. I spend all my time looking at it when you're away.
That's how it still is with me.

Ronald: It's time for me to go now.

Let's talk Shortwave Radio for a while,,, for a change,, just for the heck of it.I still dont see what makes them limeyland Lowe radios so hot.Somebody said they are works of art.Humph!,if I knew how to build a radio,I could carve up a piece of styrofoam and fiberglass it into the shape of Marilynn Monroe for the radio cabinet.Now,that would be a real work of art.Let me seee,the on/off/volume and tuneing knobs would be the nipples,the dial could be,,,, I have to think about that one,, I already know where I would put the antenna.

Yeah, but Citgo is controlled by the Venezuelan government, presently under the dictatorial rule of terrorist ally Hugo Chavez (he let Al Queda use Isla Margarita as a training camp). I'd rather buy oil from Saudi Arabia or Kuwait, thanks! Chavez is our enemy.

From the Chicago Sun-Times:

http://www.suntimes.com/output/feder/cst-fin-feder01.html

On [Dahl's] (105.9) afternoon show Tuesday, he mused about creating a drink inspired by reports of "floating corpses" in New Orleans. And on his Web log Wednesday, he elaborated.

"Okay, so maybe now I feel a little guilty that I wanted to see New Orleans completely covered in water," Dahl wrote. "You have to admit, though, that the helicopter rescues and the looting make for some interesting TV. I guess I understand the looting for food and water. If I were flooded out of my home, I think I would crave a 32-ounce bottle of Dasani water and a can of SpaghettiOs myself. But trying on clothes while standing knee deep in floodwater? That seems a bit much. I'm still waiting on the floating corpses.

"To that end, I have sent away for five pounds of Chocolate Babies to act as 'floaters' in the new drink I'll be inventing this week: The Floating Corpse. ... I'm thinking Creme de Cacao, Kahlua, some rum, maybe a little cream and a floating Chocolate Baby.

"Of course, I'll fine tune that and come up with a 'secret ingredient' or two, but that's the general cocktail framework that I'm thinking of presently. Sort of a Mudslide, without the mud. More of a Muddy Waters.

"Also, just for the record, the Chocolate Baby thing is not meant to be racist in any way.
Yes, there have been a lot of African Americans on TV being rescued and the like, but they don't make anything other than Chocolate Babies or Licorice Babies, and it seemed to me that chocolate was less offensive. It's a judgment call. If they made Strawberry Babies, I would have ordered five pounds of them too."

I nearly peed myself folks.... ;)

Are you done thumping your pud in public? You're as bad as the bastard Bush. When Diane Sawyer asked about people who were taking only food, diapers, etc, the monster had to interrupt her to blow out his oh-so-stallionlike "zero tolerance" Texas bullshit. I thought he

This is the same hypocrite who signed a law while governor requiring severe penalties for minors caught drinking. But after he stole the presidency, his drunken slut of a daughter gets off with "community service" when nabbed. The service she should have done was being turned out while tied low on the hitching post.

RFI (or at least one part of Radio France) buys block time on some big-city US broadcasting stations. It's often just two hours in the morning (drivetime). IIRC they are on 1120 AM in the Wash DC area.
They're on in the Boston area but don't know the freq. One would think there would be a web site that listed these frequencies and times.

Ohhhhh yes and another thing, why on Earth did some one over there shoot at a helicopter?
The helicopter was trying to help,..... wasnt it?

Now give an excuse for that.......

Or is it the total idiotic behaviour of how some react over there when help is given.

Its about time the National Guard was sent in as I read on the news, to give some sort of help.

OK a shoot to kill policy has been sent to the Guard, not a good thing, there has been enough lose of life as it is.
But this shows no matter what county it could have been over here or any where else, that it dont take much for a lose of such control.

Now before you go and say "oh fuck you" listen to the news you fucking moron and hear what the people say. Unless you are to stupid to do that.

THEY are saying "help us, where is the help" Then again what else do you expect them to say, they have lost to much far to much.

Again my heart goes out to them all of them.

Now go ahead and have another go at me, if it will make you feel good.

BUT there are people in other countries saying the same thing, the help should have been sorted out a while before all this terrible thing happened.

So go on say "oh fuck you now" if thats the best you can do.

David - On this we would agree.
The 9/11 Commission was a Total Cover-Up of the Failures of the Clinton Administration [.]
However, the Bigger Cover-Up was Congress own Failures :
* Congress' Actions (Intelligence Fire Walls)
* Congress' In-Actions (Lack of Funding)
RHF's SOAP BOX :
The Real Roots of the current Problems in the US Intelligence Services began in 1975. In 1975, Senator Frank Church (Idaho-Dem) became the Chairman of the Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities. This committee investigated alleged abuses of power by the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Intelligence.

NOTE: This occured under President Ford who replaced Nixon.

FWIW: It was President Jimmy Carter who really built the "FireWall" between the FBI and CIA.

TBL: Every Congress from 1975 to "9/11" has underfunded the Domestic Intelligence Services and continued to foster a Legal

An ID in perfect condition came floating down from wayyyy up yonder in one of the World Trade Center buildings,proof positive they were all Iraqi's.And some of them Iraqi "hijackers" just like magic,appeared 100 percent completly ALIVE in some of those Countries over there.Isn't it amazing how some folks can rise from the dead again? And,and,and isn't it amazing that the black boxes from those Airplanes 100 percent completly disappeared? Will wonders ever cease? And we are not allowed to see the original uncut passenger list of those Airplanes.

I own an old antique Window Box Wind Chime.But you probally dont know what that is.OK,I will tell you.It is a wooden box that has some thin reeds in it and it fits in a window.When a breeze is blowing through the box,it chimes.You ever heard of the Uilleann Pipes before? They are sort of kind of similar to Bagpipes,but not the same thing.You have to sit down to play them Pipes,unless you have four leggs.

OIL
« Thread Started on Today at 1:07pm »

Greens Senator Kerry Nettle today accused Steve Forbes, host of the CEO

conference at the Opera House, of playing deceptive games with the Australian public over oil price claims.

Steve Forbes told the Prime Minister and media on Tuesday that oil prices will come back down to around $35 a barrel within a year, and that high prices are a speculation 'bubble'. Overnight his investor newsletter has advised the opposite.

The subscriber only Forbes Professional Timing Service states:

"THE MOST IMPORTANT ADVICE I HAVE GIVEN IN 20 YEARS"

"expect to see crude move to $65.00 this summer and to $76.00 by early next year."

"..the so-called terror premium in crude prices - which will remain until we see at least three years of peace in the fertile crescent".

And,

"We are at the point where the rubber hits the road, and the only rationing mechanism for whomever gets the available supply will be higher prices."

"What is Mr Forbes up to? It appears he is telling the Australian public and decision makers not to taking the spike in oil prices seriously, whilst telling his investors that the spike is a great profit making opportunity," Senator Nettle said.

"Mr Forbes public comments appear to be about discouraging steps to address the coming peak oil crisis, a crisis he admits as real to his investors.

"Steve Forbes is treating Australians with contempt. He should apologise for his deliberate deception.

"Australians should be worried if the Prime Minister is taking advice from the likes of Steve Forbes on an issue as vital as the looming energy crisis. This embarrassing incident underlines the untrustworthiness of Mr Forbes' advice.

"The Prime Minister should be listening to those who advocate investment in renewable energy and energy conservation measures which are in the long term interests of this country."

EXCERPT FROM FORBES NEWSLETTERS PROFESSIONAL TIMING SERVICE OVERLEAF...

1 September 2005 12:28:37 AM
FORBES NEWSLETTERS PROFESSIONAL TIMING SERVICE

THE MOST IMPORTANT ADVICE I HAVE GIVEN IN 20 YEARS
There are four major opportunities concerning crude oil, gold, stocks, and bonds that will make and break millionaires during the next 24 months.

First: Too late to buy oil? Not on your life!

A couple of years ago when oil was trading at $16.00 to $20.00 a barrel, I pointed out the ground floor investment opportunity developing in oil.

We openly recommended Enerplus Resources (ERF-NYSE) in our publications.

It was trading at $17.00 or less then and was paying a dividend of about 1.25 pc - MONTHLY. That amounted to 15 pc a year. After a brief correction this spring, crude oil is once again trading solidly over $55.00 a barrel. Enerplus is trading over $35.00, a dynamic double from our original recommendation. It is too late to chase Enerplus, and there are better buys out there that are yet to be discovered by the Street. I will tell you about one presently, but first ...

Opportunity #1 - An exceptional second chance to buy energy stocks.

The first of four major opportunities you will encounter this summer - which is also the biggest money making opportunity I have seen since crude oil was $20.00 - is to take advantage of the recent correction in the energy sector and buy some energy stocks. You may be skeptical about this - as investors were when we told them to "mortgage the house and buy stocks" in the spring of 1982. Nevertheless, here it is.

Oil and natural gas are on their way to significantly higher levels. I expect to see crude move to $65.00 this summer and to $76.00 by early next year. However, you can still buy select oil and gas producers that pay 11 pc to 15 pc dividends - and they pay monthly. It doesn't get better than that.

There are many reasons to invest now in oil and gas. Unrest in the Middle East and the so-called terror premium in crude prices - which will remain until we see at least three years of peace in the fertile crescent - are two reasons. I think that will be a long time coming. Now, Iran (a major world supplier) is making the news as a safe haven for terrorists as well as a nuclear threat.

Venezuela (the fourth largest supplier of U.S. crude oil) is becoming our avowed enemy. There is renewed strife in Nigeria. The lion's share of the world's crude is being produced from wells far beyond their prime, and some sources estimate that for every 2 to 4 barrels a day consumed, only 1 new barrel is being brought on line.

There is a major shortfall between supply and demand, and this shortfall is growing on a monthly basis. World demand increased 2.5 million barrels a day over the last year due to increased demand in the U.S. and Asia. India and China are industrializing at a feverish pace, and their energy appetite is increasing exponentially. China is aggressively expanding their infrastructure and their military, and they are developing an enormous strategic oil reserve that will be much bigger than ours. Mushrooming global consumption will easily be 86 MBD or more by the end of this year.

On the other hand, global production is very close to a peak, and there is no longer any near term "excess" production capacity left. Knowledgeable sources estimate that world production will never - that's NEVER - exceed 90 million barrels a day (MBD). With one exception - which we discuss in our updated special report Oil - Slam Dunk Investing For Income And Capital Gains - Updated - alternative energy of any import is years in the future. We are at the point where the rubber hits the road, and the only rationing mechanism for whomever gets the available supply will be higher prices

For the Kenwood R-1000, I want to find a wire just like the one used in the ANT-60 wind-up antenna, because the wire is flexible, black, housed and small.

Does anyone know where I could find about 100 feet of this wire? (Not the ANT-60 wind-up antenna).

Once I have that, I want to make some kind of a dipole in a coil form on both sides. By using PVC tubing. It will look like a T. Then both feeds will connect to a PL 259.

How many turns per inch? How thick should the PVC be? I do not want to make it too long.

I want it for the 160-10 meters.

Also I have a MFJ Deluxe Versa TunerII, could that be connected to this antenna?

Thanks.

Well its been 5 days so far, and so far nothing, or at least things are just starting to happen.

It should not take 5 days should it.
I feel sory for them, I realy do. As for our help, then if Sky news are not lying then Blair has said he will help and why not.

You need help from any quarter, because so far Bush has been an inadequate president. See Sky news and listen to the people they are all saying the same thing and that is. "Where is the help, please help us", FACT

Ohhhhh dont worry Mr Bush has been on Sky news saying "Be pateint"
Its OK for him to say that he isnt in the shit as they are is he.
As for the looters some are just that. Others are looting for food and clean water and medicine, I dont blame them they are trying to survive, trying to get to the next say.

So go on have a go because I have critisized your all powerfull Mr Bush.
He isnt so powerfull in the end is he, 5 days and not alot is happening.
Thats a TOTAL disgrace to all you Americans.

You all deserve something better than that.

Or are ANY of you saying 5 days is OK? How would you feel if you were in the exact same conditions as they are after 5 days would you loot to feed your loved one or partner or starve and not do any thing for your self?

(get ready to tell me "fuck you") saying that to me WILL NOT alter the facts, no matter how you want to defend My Bush.

Here is the complete list of nations offering assistance from today's Washington Post:

"Offers have been received from Russia, Japan, Canada, France, Honduras, Germany, Venezuela, Jamaica, Australia, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Greece, Hungary, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Mexico, China, South Korea, Israel, the United Arab Emirates, NATO and the Organization of American States, the spokesman said.

Also, the Singapore embassy said the Southeast Asian country was sending three Chinook helicopters with 38 air force personnel from military exercises in Texas, to Louisiana to support relief efforts by the Texas National Guard."

I'm planning on tagging along with my wife when she goes to some yard sales this weekend. I have to admit that I'm not a big fan of these things, but I figure that if I can at least poke around to see if anything electronic shows up, it can't be all bad.

My question revolves around the receivers that you see on eBay; a majority of them seem to have come from either an estate sale or yard sale at some point. Would I have any luck hunting around a yard sale for a piece of shortwave equipment, or would my time be better spent going the estate sale route? Not that I want to encourage my wife in this any more than I have to; I just figure that if I'm going to be going along as the muscle, I'd like to know what my chances are for finding something interesting.

For my money, I'd rather look at a hamfest, but I can also see people parting with a shortwave receiver for less money at a yard or estate sale because they don't know what they have.

It's all very well you fella's slagging off Mike, but the view from down here in South Africa is similar:
Here we have the mightiest nation on earth, whose weather forecasters predicted the hurricane Katrina would hit N. O. at least five days beforehand. Your chief forecaster even said it would hit N.O. with winds of 160 mph and a huge storm flood two days ahead of the event. He described it as being a storm that would exceed anything in recorded weather history.

Yet despite these dire warnings nothing was done until AFTER the tragedy

Questions I ask?
Why was the National Guard not fully mobilised BEFORE the terrible tragedy?
The mayor asked people to leave the day before, but why was this not made mandatory and every assistance given?
Why were police reserves and rescue services not activated at the first dire warnings several days beforehand?

I think it was dxAce who said that no one had ever had a tragedy on such a scale before affecting a city of one million.
That is disingenuous - the fact is that the mighty U.S.A. has the biggest and best resources on earth, the best brains, the best technology and logistics, in fact every facility that the best in the world can provide to mitigate and ameliorate such a disaster, yet too little was done too late.

I'm sorry fella's, instead of trying to give poor old Mike a stuffing, you should rather ferret out those slimy bureaucrats and politicians who are responsible for this gigantic SNAFU.

In the meantime my sincere best wishes to the hard pressed citizens of Louisiana.

<snip>

It hasn't been 5 days yet. The storm hit on Monday morning.

Things got significantly worse on Tuesday when major breaches opened in levees.

The disaster area covers 90,000 square miles. (233,100 square kilometers)

Here's a story indicating rescuers were having trouble getting to the area:

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/world/americas/4199350.stm>

It was last updated on Wednesday just after noon in the UK - very early morning in the disaster area. It reflects information gathered on Tuesday.

Sure it would be nice if we could have gotten enough people and supplies in sooner - but it's not a trivial task.

You've got it. I live in a medium sized city and am retired so time isn't a problem and I probably hit 20 sales and find nothing but there is gold at the 21'st. In the last four or five years these are some of the items I can recall picking up at estate sales. McKay Dymek DA 5 $10, National NC140 $1, Sony 7600a $5, DX 380 $8, Sony 2001 $15, DX 394 $30, DX160 $10, MFJ 949 tuner $5, GE Super 1 $2, B&K 1801 freq counter $10, Simpson 260 $5, Mantis tiller (looked like it was used once or twice) $30, Delta 16' scroll saw (still in box) $30.

I know the above sounds like a fairy tale but it's the gospel. There is not a dog in the above, I did have to use the deoxit on the DX160 but it looked like someone used it for a year or two and put it in storage, there was not a scratch or blemish on it. RM~

PS, Most of the above came from non-professional ran estate sales, most of the pro's price things plumb out of sight but every once in awhile they slip up.

Soda pop cans? Here we go again.You can use chocolate to shine up the bottom of a soda pop can to use as an emergency "magnafying glass" to get fire started.Take two soda pop cans (beer cans will work just as good,be sure to drink the beer out first though) and stand one can up on a table,right at the edge of the table.Lay the other can down on the floor horizontally,right under the can standing up on the table.Get a yardstick or tape measure and measure the distance from the top of the can on the table to the top of the can laying on the floor,write it down.Then reverse the positions of the can on the table so it is horizontal and the can on the floor is standing up.Measure that and you will see a few inches difference.I know the reason why.Do you?

Unfortunately most folks simply do not comprehend the scale of the disaster nor what it takes to mobilize relief on that scale and the logistics involved.

They have little patience for anything these days and if it can't be magically accomplished 'yesterday' then there must be something seriously wrong.

I pity them, for they are truly the clueless.

Two million gallon oil storage tank near Venis,Louisiana,leaking into the Mississippi River. www.drudgereport.com I heard from someone earlier today there are two oil tankers (Ships) waiting in New Orleans so the oil can be offloaded for the refineries.Two oil tankers,two million gallons of oil each.Someone shot holes in the sides of the oil tankers and they are leaking.I dont know if it is true or not.I think that is some tough steel plates on the sides of those oil tankers and I think some of them are double hulled,or whatever it's called.It must be some very powerfull Rifles and ammo that can shoot holes in the sides of those oil tankers.

BZZZT - wrong.

St Pierre and Miquelon used to broadcast shortwave and AM to North America. In fact it was one of the pretexts for MacKenzie King's plans to invade the Vichy controlled islands before the Free French showed up and got everyone in a tizzy (including the Americans who were pro-Vichy at the time).

Since then, the islands broadcasted AM programming of Radio France Outremer on 1375 kHz until early 2004.

The antenna is still there BTW ...

>Unfortunately most folks simply do not comprehend the scale of the disaster nor what it takes to mobilize relief on that scale and the logistics involved.

They have little patience for anything these days and if it can't be magically accomplished 'yesterday' then there must be something seriously wrong.

I pity them, for they are truly the clueless.

dxAce
Michigan <

You are right. It's huge, and things take time. But that's not the real problem, at least for the future of NO and for other areas subject to catastrophes (like California and Seattle for example). It's not about relief after the fact - it's about being ready for the inevitable, especially when fair warning is given.

There has been an almost unconscionable lack of good planning in the NO area for decades. The place has been a sitting duck, and people from the rank and file citizen to the federal government have been sitting on their hands hoping that what just happened never would. Oh sure, they (the Army Corps and related agencies) built levees and dikes and canals to move the water around the city, but in the final analysis, a city built below sea level needs not only the best possible system to keep the water out, it needs a coordinated contingency plan, with the feds/state/local governments all involved, as well as an educated and ready citizenry, to be prepared and ready to move when a major emergency happens (as it inevitably will). Neither of these was in place.

This is hardly Bush's fault only (I am no Bush fan, but I recognize that he saw an emergency coming before the storm made landfall, and that in the long term he inherited this heritage from many administrations and congresses before him), but knowing that this socko blast was about to hit the single most vulnerable spot in the country, and having a few days warning, some effort could and should have been mobilized ASAP - and it wasn't. Not by Bush, not by Louisiana, and certainly not by NO, one of the poorest major communities in the nation and probably the most incapable as a result.

Bush, unfortunately to his discredit, also said that nobody could have foreseen the breaching of the levees - but that is really beside the point. In reality, everyone who was familiar with them virtually knew it was coming. This worst case scenario has been predicted for ages. Enough people knew so that a plan could have been in place long before Bush was ever in office.

Levee inadequacy being known, if a coordinated evacuation plan could have started in earnest early enough to get incapable people out, a significant amount of the current sturm und drang could have been avoided. Of course, some people would have been overlooked and some would have purposely stayed behind - that's human nature - but the worst could have been avoided. Even an extra 12 hours would have been quite beneficial, with time to get, for example, a fleet of buses into the poorer sections and out again.

No, we cannot magically accomplish evacuation assistance and a cleanup, not now, with any immediacy. There are too many obstacles in the way. If a coordinated plan was in place before the obstacles were created, however, things would look better right now, at least from a human survival perspective. Either way, though, the city will take a generation to get back on its feet - if another hurricane does not come along first.

A simpler solution to the whole damned problem is to feed the homeless

On WELI this morning, someone (I tuned in too late to get his name) was being interviewed by the local morning guy.

He says New Orleans has the largest ratio of elected officials to population in the world.

The reason?

There isn't enough room in the prisons.

Wish I caught that guy's name...

Do you believe we are fighting evil people in Iraq?

That is how supporters of the war regard the Baathists and the Islamic suicide terrorists, the people we are fighting in Iraq.

Because if you cannot answer it, or avoid answering it, or answer "no," we know enough about your moral compass to know that further dialogue is unnecessary. In fact, dialogue is impossible. Our understanding of good and evil is so different from yours, there is simply nothing to discuss. Someone who was asked a hundred years ago "Do you believe that whites who lynch blacks are evil?" and refused to answer in the affirmative was not someone one could dialogue with.

Here are the responses you are likely to receive:

1. The Bush administration is just as evil: for illegally invading a country that did not threaten us; for "lying" to get us into Iraq; and because it is a war for corporate profits.

2. Some of those we are fighting may be evil, but not all; some are simply fighting against foreign occupation of their country.

3. We cannot call anyone evil; only God can make such judgments.

I will respond to these "responses," but what is most important is to acknowledge that none of them actually responds to the question. Anyone posing this question to opponents of the war must not let them off the hook. They must answer the question: Do you believe we are fighting evil people in Iraq?

Regarding the issue of judging anyone evil, the best response is a question: Can we judge anyone to be good (not perfect, just good)? Of course we can. But if we can't call anyone evil, we can't call anyone good, and we certainly know that there are good people. If there are good people, there have to be not good, evil people.

Anyone who remains unable to morally judge people who slit the throats of innocent people, who place bombs in the middle of markets, and who murder anyone attempting to help women achieve basic human rights is a moral imbecile.

As for the Bush administration being equally evil, this, too, reveals the responder's values. It is one thing to believe the war was a mistake; it is quite another to regard it as a function of the administration's desire to enrich Halliburton or expand the "American empire," or because Jewish neo-conservatives pushed docile Gentiles -- Bush, Cheney, Rice, Rumsfeld -- into waging it "for Israel." Such views are held by people who are so angry and so brainwashed about conservatives that they have lost the elementary ability to identify real evil, which is what Islamic and Baathist terrorists and "insurgents" are.

Finally, the people fighting us in Iraq hate freedom, hate women's rights, hate non-Muslims, and do all they can to murder innocent Iraqis and others in order to undermine the march toward freedom in Iraq. They are not fighting foreign invaders; they are fighting foreign liberators and domestic democrats.

It is worth again noting that none of those responses directly answers the question: Do you believe we are fighting evil people in Iraq?

It is one thing to oppose the war in Iraq; it is quite another to deny the evil of those we fight there. That is what the Left in America routinely does. And that is why the culture war in America is as important as the military war in Iraq.

I'm betting not. WWL is an important regional resource, and I'll wager that when they begin to run low of diesel at the transmitter site that they'll be able to get more diesel delivered to the site somehow. I do know that diesel is being delivered to buildings in downtown New Orleans. I gather from the fact that WWL is still on the air that the site is above water and accessible (the engineers have been and gone since the storm).

Sure, it's a Chavez slam, but it also happens to be true. He (Chavez) is just quoting the American Public Records of those who keep track of such things. W does indeed hold the record as the U.S. "most vacationing president". No bashing, just a simple, straightforward, easily verifiable, matter of public record "almanac-style" fact. (W earned this record before Katrina, so sort of a Chavez cheap shot).

I've been going to garage sales for at least a decade, and if I've ever seen a shortwave receiver, it wasn't memorable.

If you think about the number of shortwave listeners to the general population, that's a starting point. If few have them, then they will be far between at garage sales.
Subtract those who are savvy enough to know the channels to get a good return when selling a shortwave receiver, and you've thinned out the field considerably. What remains will be slim, spread over all the garage sales that do happen.

What you find at garage sales are common items. That popcorn machine that someone bought (or was given) which they never used (much), and they want to get rid of it; they aren't all that concerned about getting much money for it. You will find uncommon items, but not in any quantity and it may take years.
I've seen one CD-I player, and I think only one laserdisc player (which I was tempted to buy when I saw it two years ago, but there were no laserdiscs with it).

If you're lucky, someone will put in their advertising that they have the sort of thing you really want; but that's because they have a real interest in the thing so they feel it's worthy of mention or they have a cluster of them. They want to lure people to their sale, and use what they have.

What you will find is the common items. So you can pick up a good set of small speakers to attach to your shortwaver receiver (this is an incredibly common thing, and they aren't all junk but usually are cheap). You can find all kinds of amplifiers to power them. A great selection of AM/FM tuners, both analog and digital. All the car radios you could ever want. Computer equipment galore (I finally found a 56K external modem for five dollars a month ago, and ironically the next week found another for twenty dollars, yet if I've seen them before they carried a large enough price to move on, and that's been some years). If you're looking for common items, it makes sense to buy them at garage sales (usually things do work, but if they don't, you've not spent much on them), and then use the savings to buy things you can't find at garage sales.

Garage sales are an excuse to get out early on Saturday mornings in the summer, to enjoy being out. Finding things you need, or would like, is like icing on the cake, and the fact that you will find them at good prices makes it even better. You can go a week, and find nothing that interests you (it is amazing how much clutter we all accumulate, and how uninteresting it can be to others), and then get a day when you've got a bunch of things at great prices.

If people are really reselling things on Ebay, likely they are doing the sales on a really massive basis. Getting out as early as possible, every weekend, and getting to as many as possible. By sheer magnitude, they come across the less common items, and since they get to plenty they know how uncommon it is to find such items. If you don't buy it then, you may not stumble on another, for a few years or even forever.

Also remember it makes sense to hit the sales that are clustered. If one street is having multiple sales the same day, that means you can hit more with the same amount of time, rather than spending the time getting to the next sale. While it has faded, a few years back some groups, like schools and the YMCA, held what amounted to fleamarkets, though they called them "community garage sales". Individuals would rent a table from the group, and then sell whatever they wanted to get rid of. Like the street sales, this gets a bunch of different sellers into a small space, and again mean you spend less travelling time.

Not to be forgottten, though again I've never found shortwave receivers (or scanners for that matter) are rummage sales put on by churches and Rotary Clubs and schools. Since the items are donated, the groups may be most interested in making sure it's all gone by the end of the day (so they don't have to clear it out afterwards), so they may not have as high prices as when individuals sell off things they know the original price of.

I guess evil is defined by what side you are on. The Muslims who attack America say we are evil. The Americans who favor war against the Muslims say they are evil. Both use a religious compass. I guess in the end you

It's a group of white racist, in black face, with ghetto clothing on, doing the shooting. Saw it on the news today.

Military satellites are risky business to begin with. It takes a lot of 'infrastructure' to produce, launch, operate and maintain them, and you don't want your military apparatus to be dependent on it. The very moment you start to take it all for granted, something will happen (or someone will do something) to screw it up.

broadcast engineer hat on

They don't usually bother with 'back up' generators. They install ones that are good for the long haul. At KBOO, a 19,000 watt station, we had a 100KW generator installed at the transmitter site. A commercial one, built to run for 10,000 hours MTBF. Also sure they have a preventative maintenance schedule to keep it in top shape. Easy enough to have silent times during the wee hours to do the maintenance.

I've been going to garage sales for a lot of years, and hit just about every one I pass (sometimes a dozen or more on a Saturday), but have never run across a decent shortwave radio. I hear the stories, but it's never happened to me. Maybe it's the area I live in.

You stupid fucking shit. I was talking to DX ace, not you.
Not only do you not know how to follow a thread but you don't even know what you said vs. what someone else said.
God you're a moron.
ROTFLMAO.
But that's ok. Send me a check for gas. I have no problem with that.

No doubt the pickens are better in larger cities but the estate sales (held by individuals) are much better than yard/garage sales that are usually run over with baby items and etc.. I usually run an area of town that has a fairly high income and normally has 8 -12 estate sales on a typical Friday morning. Like another poster stated "it's an outing". RM~

They did improve somewhat - your buddy Dick Carrol went into a vapor lock and bit the big one awhile back.

The speaker is pretty good, although you have to cut a a ground trace in order to bring the AGC connections out to the S-Meter. The preselector was just ok, in my opinion. In the passive mode, the loss was between 3 and 10dB, depending on the range. With the preamp engaged, the gain varied between -1dB to +6dB. They did a nice job on the board layout, but that cheap plastic tuning capacitor was a turn-off for me, especially for the price that it sold for. Looking inside of the PR-150, it appears that it was not designed by the same engineer as the receivers. Construction quality is nowhere near as good as the Lowe receivers.
I traded mine off towards a Lowe HF-225. I did keep the HF-150 though. As far as the speaker, having a notch filter is a good idea but a 150 dollar selling price would have been more in order.
Don't forget the "rack unit". Actually, it looks pretty good when you have it loaded with all of the accessories. Do you remember the advertisement that Popular Communications used to have for the HF-150? There was a photo of the receiver, with a Baby Ruth candy bar sitting on top of it to show just how small the 150 was. There was a caption that said "Baby Ruth candy bar not included", or something like that. The 150 is still my favorite out of the Lowe bunch. Once you install a backlight, the receiver really looks cool.

And Saudi Arabia, the cradle of the 9/11 terrorists, is our friend? That's also the country which won't let our troops be seen with a crucufix or Star of David. Fuck the bastards. Let the undemocratic swine defend themselves.

They might be, I don't know. They'd likely avoid your neighbourhood though as they tend to keep their distance from shitstains such as yourself.

You don't know if your relatives are in town? You guys don't stay in contact?
I guess they see you for the dicksplat that you are and avoid you like everyone else does.
Can't say that I blame them. If you were related to me, I'd deny it also.

Yes I am sorry to hear that bad news, why on earth do they have to shoot at help thats trying to come there way. What is the logic behind that ?

I hear on Sky news that the National Guard has been sent in, good. The ones that are raping should be shot no question, get rid of the scum that do that, Hurricane or not raping is NO excuse.

Black or white it dont matter raping is the lowest form of human behaviour, next to canabilism.

Nah, what you'd probably do is make yet another idle threat that you'd have to try and extricate yourself from, shitstain. Just like you're doing now.
Seriously.

Run along now.

Re-read the thread again Brian, with comprehension this time and you might just see how stupid you appear.
Are there really people in the world as dumb as you?
Unbelieveable.

Actually, there is an application called Acid which utilizes the synthesiser built into most computers, but I'm talking about rubber faces and 7 AM at IHOP.

Ever been to IHOP at 7AM on acid?

There are IHOP's here in Jackson.There is an IHOP (International House Of Pancakes) on Greenway Drive just across from the Wal Mart Supercenter store and that strip mall next to the Wal Mart store at the intersection of Greenway Drive and Highway 18,about one and seven tenths South of doggys couch.I suppose a www.devilfinder.com search thingy would have some websites about the IHOP's and crap all over the World,who knows? I am not going to sweat it looking up crap.I haven't been to an IHOP since back in the 1970's.

Hurricane Pam Exercise Concludes

Release Date: July 23, 2004
Release number: R6-04-093

BATON ROUGE, La. -- Hurricane Pam brought sustained winds of 120 mph, up to 20 inches of rain in parts of southeast Louisiana and storm surge that topped levees in the New Orleans area. More than one million residents evacuated and Hurricane Pam destroyed 500,000-600,000 buildings. Emergency officials from 50 parish, state, federal and volunteer organizations faced this scenario during a five-day exercise held this week at the State Emergency Operations Center in Baton Rouge.

The exercise used realistic weather and damage information developed by the National Weather Service, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the LSU Hurricane Center and other state and federal agencies to help officials develop joint response plans for a catastrophic hurricane in Louisiana.

"We made great progress this week in our preparedness efforts," said Ron Castleman, FEMA Regional Director. "Disaster response teams developed action plans in critical areas such as search and rescue, medical care, sheltering, temporary housing, school restoration and debris management. These plans are essential for quick response to a hurricane but will also help in other emergencies."

"Hurricane planning in Louisiana will continue," said Colonel Michael L. Brown, Deputy Director for Emergency Preparedness, Louisiana Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness. "Over the next 60 days, we will polish the action plans developed during the Hurricane Pam exercise. We have also determined where to focus our efforts in the future."

A partial summary of action plans follows:

Debris

The debris team estimates that a storm like Hurricane Pam would result in 30 million cubic yards of debris and 237,000 cubic yards of household hazardous waste
The team identified existing landfills that have available storage space and locations of hazardous waste disposal sites. The debris plan also outlines priorities for debris removal.
Sheltering

The interagency shelter group identified the need for about 1,000 shelters for a catastrophic disaster. The shelter team identified 784 shelters and has developed plans for locating the remaining shelters. In a storm like Hurricane Pam, shelters will likely remain open for 100 days. The group identified the resources necessary to support 1000 shelters for 100 days. They planned for staff augmentation and how to include shelterees in shelter management.
State resources are adequate to operate shelters for the first 3-5 days. The group planned how federal and other resources will replenish supplies at shelters.
Search and Rescue

The search and rescue group developed a transportation plan for getting stranded residents out of harm's way.
Planners identified lead and support agencies for search and rescue and established a command structure that will include four areas with up to 800 searchers.
Medical

The medical care group reviewed and enhanced existing plans. The group determined how to implement existing immunization plans rapidly for tetanus, influenza and other diseases likely to be present after a major hurricane.
The group determined how to re-supply hospitals around the state that would face heavy patient loads.
The medical action plan includes patient movement details and identifies probable locations, such as state university campuses, where individuals would receive care and then be transported to hospitals, special needs shelters or regular shelters as necessary.
Schools

The school group determined that 13,000-15,000 teachers and administrators would be needed to support affected schools. The group acknowledged the role of local school boards and developed strategies for use by local school officials.
Staffing strategies include the use of displaced teachers, retired teachers, emergency certified teachers and others eligible for emergency certification. Displaced paraprofessionals would also be recruited to fill essential school positions.
The group discussed facility options for increasing student population at undamaged schools and prioritizing repairs to buildings with less damage to assist in normalizing operations
The school plan also calls for placement or development of temporary schools near temporary housing communities built for hurricane victims.
The Hurricane Pam scenario focused on 13 parishes in southeast Louisiana-Ascension, Assumption, Jefferson, Lafourche, Orleans, Plaquemines, St. Bernard, St. Charles, St. James, St. John, St. Tammany Tangipahoa, Terrebonne. Representatives from outside the primary parishes participated since hurricane evacuation and sheltering involve communities throughout the state and into Arkansas, Mississippi and Texas.

On March 1, 2003, FEMA became part of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. FEMA's continuing mission within the new department is to lead the effort to prepare the nation for all hazards and effectively manage federal response and recovery efforts following any national incident. FEMA also initiates proactive mitigation activities, trains first responders, and manages the National Flood Insurance Program and the U.S. Fire Administration.

Yes, I heard Paul Hogan on Coast To Coast last night asking hams to check certain channels for jamming and report back to him if they hear the hum or strange noises. I only remember like 3 stations since that's all I wanted to recall.

2333 area.

Then I think he mentioned 10325. He said all the FEMA and emergency channels have been jammed on purpose it seems. He has some Hams in the field doing listening work for anything out of the ordinary. He can be contacted via his web page or George at CTC.

That, "Whomever created the hurricane wants the body count to pile up for a reason"

Like some country is blackmailing the U.S. and showing us what they can do. Like let's take China  IF HYPOTHETICALLY they can produce certain weather condidtions like a hurricane. They could say to us, leave Taiwan ALONE and don't try and protect it. It is ours, period. If you don't, we will continue to produce more hurricanes and send them your way.

Now, how would the U.S. respond to that IF it were real? They couldn't nuke China just like that and say "China produced the hurricane so we nuked them"

So just HOW could we react and protect ourselves from "bad weather" ??? How do we prove it? Who would believe it?
I'm not saying this is true, but I'm also not saying it's not true. What would be so hard to understand that man has finally learned how to dabble with the weather??

It's not so far fetched as one would think.
Have a good day guys.

Ron! I said I would pay it. I'm a man of my word. And IF you win the match there's also a monetary prize. Plus there's a real doctor on hand at these competitions so your chances of survival are fairly high. I don't think you could say that about all the other ass kickings you've taken? And I would think with your mouth you've taken a few but if not you'll be one step closer to being a real man and when you grow up you'll thank me. Or you could do it on your own and stop threatening people.

I know and agree. I post less and less now. I don't want to get involved with the political posts in here though I read some. I came here in the first place to read and learn about shortwave radios.

And guys like RHF, Mark Holden, dxAce, Dale and Pete helped me out. That was like a couple years ago. Since then, I noticed a big change. More depressing OT posts that just ruin your mood and bring out the raw brutality of your heart and soul whether it be right or wrong.

On top of that, many of us are mellow fellows getting up there in age and don't need to get our pressure up for something not necessary.

Number one posting here about political beefs will not change a thing about them.
You can post here 100 times a day, 24/7 about your grievances and illegal actions of our gov't and it will not change anything but the longevity of your keyboard.

Plus you'll get into arguments with nice folks in here that were your radio buddies and people you looked forward into reading from everyday. Now that you've disrespected each other, inside yourself knowing their political views don't match yours, you "don't like them as much now"

Now you already have alienated them. By doing so, you're also alienating yourself from the radio hobby itself by coming to a radio forum for *enjoyment and reading about *deep OT politics. There are places just for that. People who love to argue all day long.

WHY people insist on coming here to post about shit other then SHORTWAVE RADIO is beyond me.

So, I still come here, do some reading but don't hang out here like I used to. Plus, there are some guys in here I really like and respect so they keep me coming back too.

Have a good one Lucky

I think you guys are right about what can be found.
We ended up at 7 yard sales (one was a street sale, so 4 in one fell swoop), and I found a few interesting items in the others, but the last one I scored a PRO-2035, a couple of CB radios (one with SSB) and a Sony ICF-9650 AM/FM radio for $40 total. The Sony needs a little work on the board, and I need to scrounge up some stuff (like an antenna) to get the CBs operational, but in general, I could have done worse. They were asking $20 for a pair of Optimus Pro-7's, but I really didn't need one at the time.

No shortwave radios, but I'm sure that I'll survive.
When I finally get the Sony fixed, I'll probably give it to my son (4 yo) and put it in his room, so he has some music in there. As long as he doesn't decide to play with the power cord....

No, but I have been to Ed's Cantina at Estes Park, CO, at 7AM after spending a night camping at Rocky Mountain NP when the temp was 15F (0F with wind chill). Some would say that you have to do acid to enjoy camping in the winter.

Saggytits Lloyd Davies Lee wrote:
> But that's not surprising from someone who things that long hair is a head > covering for religious worship.

Where else would long hair be covering but on your head, dumbass, Davies?
Oh, that's right you are jealous of anybody who still has their hair.....
Which is part of the reason you are so undesireable to women.
So.....
Keep taking those bible verses out of context, fake xtian Davies.

Men with long hair is something some Christians like Little Saggyttits don't like at all. Some even say, like Saggytits, that it's unbiblical to have long hair and refer to the verse <1 Corinthians 11:14>

BUT, to understand this scripture we need to understand what the situation was like in Corinth. At this time Corinth was known for it's immorality and perversity and the men that were sexual perverted had long hair. Paul that wrote this letter didn't want the men in the church to be taken for perverted and that's why he wrote these words.

So this is NOT God's commandment to all people throughout all times, but Paul's SPECIAL ADVICE for the people in Corinth, at that time!

Another interesting thing is that the whores in Corinth had short hair or shaven heads and Paul didn't want the people in church to be taken for whores so that's why he told the females in church to not cut their hair off. <1 Corinthians 11:6> Again that was Paul's SPECIAL ADVICE for the women in Corinth in that time and NOT God's commandment to all Christians throughout all times.

With this thing clarified, let's look into another scripture that talks about long hair. <Numbers 6:1-5>

The LORD said to Moses, "Speak to the Israelites and say to them: If a man or woman wants to make a special vow, a vow of separation to the LORD as a Nazirite, he must abstain from wine and other fermented drink and must not drink vinegar made from wine or from other fermented drink. He must not drink grape juice or eat grapes or raisins.

As long as he is a Nazirite, he must not eat anything that comes from the grapevine, not even the seeds or skins. During the entire period of his vow of separation no razor may be used on his head. He must be holy until the period of his separation to the LORD is over; he must let the hair of his head grow long.

This scripture talks about the Nazirites. The Nazirites were people that had devoted themselves to God and given Him a pledge. As a sign of their pledge they didn't drank wine and they LET THEIR HAIR GROW LONG!! Yeah, they let their hair grow long and their long hair was the outer sign to people around them that they had devoted themselves to God. Their long hair was the SIGN OF HOLINESS to speak clear!

(Samson was a Nazirite from the moment he was born. He let his hair grow and didn't cut it, and through God that was a source of his strength. <Judges 13:5, 16:19> But when he played with his annointing and cut his hair he immediately loosed his strength. <Judges 16:19> Another man in the Bible that seems to have been a Nazirite was the prophet Zamuel. <1 Zamuel 1:11>)

So here we see that God have nothing against long hair. The Bible also saids clearly that God doesn't look on our outer look but He looks at our hearts! <1 Samuel 16:7> So God doesn't care if you have long or short hair, what's important isn't your hairlength but that you are living for Him.

To sum it up we can see that God have nothing against men having long hair.

But only losers who can't make their own decisions blindly follow and need the Bible like Lardass does. The thing is, Roger doesn't have long hair, Davies. So as usual, you don't know what the fuck you are talking about.

Saggytits Lee aka Lloyd Davies steps on his own tiny dick when he tired to correct somebody else's English use, first by saying one "operates" a dictionary instead of reading it, then uses "things" instead of "thinks" in <jewish.reggae.rocks@houston-hunks.com>:

"Translation: Woger can't figure out how to operate a dictionary, let alone correct someone else's language. But that's not surprising from someone who things that..."

Cuhulin,
Bush may sign a Bill passed by both Houses of Congress into Law.
It is Congress (The House and Senate) that write the Bills; and it is Congress that either puts the money in or took it out for any Federal Funding.
RHF SOAP BOX TIME - More importantly :
Should not the City of New Orleans have built and repaired its own Levees to Protect the Citizen of the City ?
Should not the State of Louisiana have built and repaired it's the Levees around "The Major City in the State; and Protect the Citizens of the State ?
Oh that is right - Everyone wants someone else to pay for something.
WHO PAYS - And Why Nothing Happen !
* The Governor of the State of Louisiana could have Called-Up the Louisiana National Guard before the Storm Hit
- Did the Governor NO!
* The Governor of the State of Louisiana could have Called-Up the Louisiana National Guard right after the Storm Hit
- Did the Governor NO!
* The Governor of the State of Louisiana could have Called-Up the Louisiana National Guard when the Levees first broke
- Did the Governor NO!
* Why - Because if the Governor did the State would have to Pay for the Guard.
* The Governor waited and waited and waited for the President to Nationalize the Louisiana Guard so that the Federal Government would have to pay for Guard.
WHO TAKES RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME { And Why Nothing Happen ! }
* The Mayor of New Orleans could have Order the Police to Shoot Looters - But Mayor never has done so.
* The Governor of the State of Louisiana could have Order the Louisiana National Guard to Shoot Looters - But the Governor never has done so.
* Why - Because neither the Mayor nor the Governor wants to be Blamed for the Shooting and Killing of African-Americans {Poor Black Folks}.
* Neither the Mayor nor the Governor wants to accused of an Act of Racial Genocide against African-Americans {Poor Black Folks}.
* Both the Mayor and Governor were quite willing to wait and wait and wait to let the President Do It (Give the Order to Shoot Looters) and stand ready to call the President a Racist against African-Americans and a Murder of Poor Black Folks.

WHY THE PEOPLE OF NEW ORLEANS ARE BEING SHIPPED OUT OF STATE.
* If they were simply being shipped within the State of Louisiana then "The State" would have to bear the cost.
* However if they are shipped outside the State of Louisiana to other nearby States then it is the Federal Government that will be Paying-the-Bill for Everything for the next 100 Years.
WHY THE CITY OF NEW ORLEANS AND THE STATE OF LOUISIANA ARE IN SUCH A MESS : {NEGLECT AND CORRUPTION}
* The City of New Orleans has been controlled by the Democrat Party and it is a de-facto One-Party-Town with all the Power and Corruption that comes from such a system of One Party Rule.
* The greater problem is the State of Louisiana which has been controlled by the Democrat Party and it is a de-facto One-Party-State with all the Power and Corruption that comes from such a system of One Party Rule.
* The Result is that of all the Major Cities in the South,
New Orleans has the reputation for being the most corrupt and backward.
New Orleans : It ain't about Bush
- Its About the Money and the Blame !
so say i - my opinions stated as facts ~ RHF

Acid is primarily cut-and-paste program for assembling pre-programmed .wav files. It has SOME support for VST synths, but I don't think it uses soundcards' GM synth.

The idea of a psychedelically-enhanced Huey using ANY kind of electrical apparatus scares the living shit out of me. Set that boy in a big empty field with a berimbau for 12 hours, that's the safest course. And I'm sure it will amuse him no end.

I'm glad I gave up using psychedelics long before I ever actually owned any synths.

This is the headline from this BBC report
http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/world/americas/4210674.stm

I am proud to say that as a little old South African in a third world country at the Southern tip of darkest Africa we had a devastating flood in my little town in 2002.
The skies had not even cleared from the raging storm when the air force choppers arrived in force.
They rescued those in need, brought in emergency personnel and special riot police to prevent looting.
Although the flood put out water supplies, washed away our connecting roads, power and sewerage systems, mighty teams of specialists arrived within hours and all services were restored within 48 hours except the roads that took a few days longer. The choppers brought in food until the roads were reconstructed.

I felt very proud to be a South African at that time and was immensely grateful for the smooth running and super national rescue effort that took place seemingly so easily, like a well oiled machine.

What happened to mighty America...???
What did the Federal Emergency Management Agency do...???
Heads should roll for this debacle - it is inexcusable in a superpower with all America's vast resources.

Well, we're still here... and guess what? You're still in a third world country that can't take care of it's own problems... do a Google on AIDS or a host of other problems. And guess where your little third world country has begged in the past? The USA. Guess where it will continue to beg in the future? The USA.

We'll be OK... I can't really say the same for South Africa.

> What did the Federal Emergency Management Agency do...???

Exactly what they're supposed to do, considering the enormity of the problem.

I guess we'll have to decide that issue. It certainly won't be up to you or a third world country like South Africa to decide whether heads should or will roll.

Have a pleasant evening.

I can't believe how many scumbags there are profiteering off of Katrina on e-Bay right now !!

Alot of them say that some of the proceeds will go to Disaster relief when everyone knows these fat smelly opportunistic bastards won't send one single dime in to any charity anytime or anywhere and will just pocket the proceeds and walk away laughing.

I knew these gypsy dealers we all used to see at the hamfests each and every year were lowlifes and scumbags, but this really takes the cake and the silverware! What a bunch of cheap ass lying bastadts !!!!

(Wonder how may of em are pulling the same crap on the many other swap-and-shop boards?? Not all hams do this of course but the ones who are really stink like shi+ - disgusted.)

707. Signal to noise in re.radio.shortwave

The signal to noise level has been very high the past few weeks but hopefully it will settle down now that we are almost in the back to school season.

The regulars might want to reassess responding to the Trolling faction as it has, in my opinion, suppressed any new responsible people joining the news group. The number of posts of new people asking where else can they go for SW radio information and not hearing from them again should be a clue that the growth in new responsible posters has not increased but the trolling faction has certainly increased.

Lately the news group has even descended to the pathetic point of threatening bodily harm over Usenet.

I'm not sure the news group can recover to even the appearance of on topic discourse as the Trolling faction appears to have reached critical mass. In other words there is enough Trolling idiots carrying on amongst themselves that this could be an indefinite state of affairs in the news group even if all the regular on topic posters were to ignore them, which they don't.

Statistically the news group has moved from about 1/3 off topic to about 1/2 and now for the last few weeks about 2/3 of posts are off topic but that's not all. The usual political ranting has turned more and more toward disgusting sexual innuendo, racism, threats and really nasty flaming.

I find it psychologically interesting that people, which otherwise have an interest in the short wave radio would want the news group to deteriorate to this level.

I rationally can't expect that NEW people or the thin skinned would want to post here if the wide majority of posts are flaming, threatening, foul and off topic. I figure that many of the people that lurk here for information have also left.

OB Shortwave: It's terrible how SW is going the way of the dinosaur with stations cutting back or completely eliminating their on-air broadcasts. Some have moved to the web for the broadcasts, but I miss the day when you could hear the BBC or many other stations quite regularly at almost any time of day.

My frequency of visits to this NG is down to a couple of times per week from daily.

I've been spending the summer nights with the old standbys of RN and BBC-WS, with Radio Australia in the mornings. We had lots of northern lights last night and RA wasn't its usual clear signal this a.m. I've never been completely clear on the relationship. Sometimes it seems to disrupt N-S signals and leaves E-W untouched. I was picking up home improvement advice from somewhere east (sounded American) on 570 MW at ~ 1100 UTC , they started playing music when an ad was expected and the dog wanted out, so never did pin it down. I've been getting some good MW dx at night, including KSL Salt Lake City, Vancouver and Seatle, St Louis. I think I should be able to get Chicago and Minneapolis if I looked for them. I haven't typically chased MW, but occasionally it's interesting to spin the dial.

War is hell. If you are fighting a war, you're in hell. Hell is evil. Anyone in hell is evil. Evil people fighting each other in the hell that is war. The sophistication of this is at the level of two kids fighting over a pail and shovel in a sandbox. I don't care whose stuff it is, both are going home - no more play. It turns out one child isn't from the neighbourhood and wasn't invited into the other's backyard. But he's got a lot of older brothers who can beat the hell out the kid whose sandbox it is. So they do. Then they bust a few windows and rough up his mother. And they go home with the pail and shovel. And then we wonder why Iran of North Korea wants nukes. No problem that India, Pakistan, UK, France, Israel do. They will help with the roughing up, well, most of then, most of the time.

I think that basically you fail to grasp the enormity of the situation.
It will take time for enough resources to get there to make a difference.
This is not a little town but a large city with several 100,000's of people that did not make it out in time. It's going to take years and billions of dollars to rebuild that city and infrastructure and many billions more to make sure it does not happen again.

FEMA had supplies in place the day before the hurricane made landfall in the gulf but getting those supplies in or the people out became a logistical nightmare with the city flooding. Early rescue attempts by chopper were thwarted by looting and sniper fire. The city was not under control of its own police force.

The order of blame in any delayed response should be on the city New Orleans then the state, which have a first responsibility in the disaster. The city and the state failed to have situation in hand giving enough time for a federal response to take place. It's not surprising that it takes time for large amounts of supplies and personal from other states to make it there.

I've been listening to the international SW coverage from several countries and although they convey the severity of the damage it is hard to get an idea of the scale of the damage.

Well, it depends on the band along with conditions. Australia and New Zealand were both weaker than usual on the 15MHz band but New Zealand was stronger than usual on 11,820. Last night during a G2 event they were S9+10dB peaking S9+20dB. They are usually S9. I went to bed so I don't know about Australia later than that but I would expect the same thing when they changed to 9,580 in the early hours of the morning my time.

Indeed, there are not so drastic measures consumers can take. Of course, when the price of a commodity rises beyond the price the public as a whole is willing to pay, then the demand falls with an often matching fall in the price. If we just stop in our harried schedule to think, "Wait a sec. Is THIS trip really necessary?" Or, "Can I combine this with an other errand tomorrow". If we made a conscious effort and goal of saving ONE gallon a week in our own driving, how much would that impact the demand for fuel?
One gallon--even two--for every vehicle in the USA saved. How about a more ambitious goal? One gallon per DAY=5 gals per workweek X how many drivers on the road at a time = what? Of COURSE, there are trips and business that must be made/done. OTH, how many times do you just hop in the car without a second thought to run down to the Radio Shack and pass the SAME store the next day going to the grocery store? How about slowing down to 55-60 instead of 70 per?
How many Escalades do we see each day with ONE person when we could carpool to work (some DO carpool but there are untold numbers that "prefer" to have their car to themselves Heck, I press in the clutch on my little truck and coast down long hills often maintaining 55 while the engine is idling at 600 RPM; at steady state, the engine is at 1700 @ 55, 2100 @ 70. If I don't just HAVE to go, I will just stay at home, piddle in my shop and watch TV. We ALL have to do a little to prevent the profiteers from taking advantage of our spoiled habits of yore. I KNEW "them" Surburbans" would come back to bite us eventually!! :)

Are you "sure" about that? Somewhere in the news I heard that E-Bay was setting up a program where the proceeds from sales could be sent directly to them to be put toward the relief effort! Maybe the sales of these items ARE for this purpose. "I" could be wrong but that is a possibility.

Is there a DISASTER CLOCK?
Does anyone know the story of how the Category 5 Levi was sidelined for a Category 3 Levi because of the difference of $1.5 Billion? It was a category 5 Hurricane which finally hit.
Are the media in Australia preparing their questions for Philip Ruddock whose Attorney General's Dept. is responsible for ' Emergency Management Australia ' whose organisation is run by Director David Templeman?
Does the media in Australia recognise the Newsworthyness of a series of stories on Australia's most likely Natural Disaster - a Tsunami Wave hitting the East Coast of Australia?
Do journalists realise their vast importance, in warning the people of the East Coast of Australia that a warning system using sirens in all Coastal Communities, and linked to the EMA Tsunami Warning Centre, is an absolute requirement for the 500,000 people who face death if a wave hits?
Does any editor/producer out there realise the giant story they have in reminding people how the man who warned the Thai Government about an imminent Tsunami Event was hounded out of his job to ' protect the Tourist Industry ' AND THEN show how warning sirens for the East Coast of Australia (which faces live, yes, LIVE, volcanos in N.Z.) are being denied Coastal Communities and City Populations to protect a believed(but not real) Real Estate devaluation in the ' Wave Zone '?
In Byron Bay a man, speaking in Public Voice on 22nd February 2005, made a cogent and impassioned plea for Byron Shire Council to implace Warning Sirens and establish an Evacuation Plan with the recruitment and training of 200 Evacuation Volunteers, to save Byron Residents from the devestating and lethal effects of a Tsunami Wave or Cyclone Event killing most of the residents, with even a small wave.
Does the Media in NSW realise the importance of Premier Morris Iemma's statement made to TV that Sirens and Evacuation Volunteers would be used in the case of a Terrorist Threat in the CBD of Sydney? He may be new but he's no 'rookie'. Ideas travel fast in this age of info..
Has anyone put it together, that the Aceh Tsunami occurred on 26th December, and the Newcastle,NSW, Earthquake happened on the 28th December? On the hottest month of the year, the continent of Australia expands, putting pressure on the sea floors around it. Although the Australian continent is stable, the Sea Floors around it aren't.
Australia 65km thick - Pacific Ocean and Tasman Sea 5km thick.
Get it?

Their towers and transmitter site did survive the storm. They are broadcasting from a different studio location (LSU?)

The Ace hit it on the money when the subject of "the enormity of the problem" was brought up. We had the chance of viewing local feeds (not the network magazine) from the various areas of disaster. The total affected area by Hurricane Katrina is in the THOUSANDS of square miles --- not a few hundred.

So, where do you start? What with?

Tough questions to answer when life hangs in the balance.

NBC reported the other night that "several" of the N.O. stations had combined their resources at a central location to keep broadcasting.

Unfortunately, a large-scale disaster like this will cause the worst sort of human (inhuman?) behavior to show it's ugly face. However, an inhumane response to inhuman behavior is never warranted. Shooting looters on site is never warranted; arresting them and prosecuting them for whatever degree of larceny they are guilty of is sufficient. However, shooting at rescue helicopters does warrant a response which includes the use of deadly force. Those helicopters should start carrying door gunners to return fire if fired upon.

If anyone is using diesel, the local Giant food store here in Laurel, Maryland is selling their brand name vegetable oil and Crisco oil in bottles of a little over two quarts (as of September 2) on sale. It works out to be about $3.10 per gallon.

(Today, diesel fuel here was priced at +/- $3.65 per gallon.)

A friend of mine is using Crisco in his diesel powered Dodge Ram 2500 pickup truck.

He says he gets 25 to 27+ mpg on the highway (about 10% less than diesel fuel), vegetable oil provides better lubrication for the fuel injectors than diesel fuel and it doesn't stink of diesel. He says the diesel engine exhaust smells like McDonald's french fries.

I am listening to a United Radio Broadcasters radio station of New Orleans in New Orleans right now,I just now tuned into the station,I think the guy said WWL 870.Folks are calling into the station about there are still folks trapped in their houses and they need food and water and medical aid and they are worried about Martial law and in 72 hours they think will be folks knocking on their doors and they will be told they will have to leave their homes even though they are in a safe unflooded area.Some folks are calling in and saying they haven't seen the red cross or any other help yet.A woman in Algiers (New Orleans metro area) is saying she isn't allowed to go to the other end of Jefferson Street to get ice.The 17th Street Canal breach has been repaired.There are still many people in New Orleans without any help and they are worried sick.

fed govt will be pointing their fingers at each other or looking for a scapegoat,as usual.bush gives billions of our tax money to the super rich,the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.They have their own pet projects (dust on Arkansas roads,build a bridge in Alaska to an uninhabited island,crap such as that) and they give the finger to New Orleans.bush actually said/intimidated,raise the money for relief and help and rebuilding through private/public donations.

The scope is not easy to imagine.
We got hit here in FL with the thing at Cat 1, and it was ripping things up.
I went through typhoon Pamela on Guam and that was a doozy, winds close to 200.
Power was out a month. But there wasn't flooding.
And there was no crime to speak of either!
Alot of little tussles in the ice lines is about all I remember.
After Andrew in Florida, Miami didn't go crazy.
Still, these guys killing and raping after a couple of days,
I don't think they just all of a sudden decided, hey, lets go fing nuts.
And there was food in stores, and most likely water, Seems alot of people didn't bother to go get at least some supplies.
And as far as Africa is concerned, didn't you guys just have some little incident. Lets see 500,000 hutu and tutsi dead at last count.
I read about it, the German magazine,Stern had photos.
So don't be so cocky. You have nothing to be cocky about.
And the criminals in NO are not representative of what America is. Hopefully they will get caught, or shot , even more hopefully.

My carpet bagger friends from New York City tell me all is well. Their newly acquired houses are very nice and left in VERY good condition by their previous owners. Labour is also dirt cheap, so cotton production for the northern factories continues unabated and at GREATLY reduced costs.

Dear Mr Plimmer,

I hope that you have paid attention to the words of messers dxAce, Steffes, Telamon and others. You need to turn your TV set off and give yourself a break. The media will never tell you the whole story. They only like to tell the bad.

America will rise up and do everything it needs to in order to ease the suffering of those unlucky souls who found themselves in the path of Katrina. Whether the disaster is the handiwork of a group of totally misguided subhumans from the middle east, or a very unfortunate collection of weather events which happen from time to time, we will prevail. The people of America are a kind and benevolant bunch. When the need arises we dig deep into our pockets and give with a warm heart. Our motives for giving are true. We realize how fortunate we are and we give to ease the pain of those who are less fortunate than ourselves. Our generosity is worldwide and does not stop at our borders.

Our leaders are Human. They are not wizards who will wave a magic wand and the problem is gone. As the others on this board has told you, this is a disaster of the largest proportions. Give those in charge a chance to show what they are made of. Perhaps as the days go by you will see that they have done a good job. This my surprise you, but it will not surprise me.

There is no shame here in America my friend.

Regards,
Bob

I went to the wal mart supercenter store (there are about eight wal mart stores around here and they are all wal mart supercenter stores) food department yesterday.The MurphyUSA gas station was sold out of gas and there was a block long line of fools waiting for the gas station to open.Those fools are fools,they still think there is some kind of a gas emergency or something and they better tank up while they can.I have almost a half a tank of gas in my car (the gas gage needle is about the thickness of a pencil lead on the low side of the gas gage) and I can easily stretch it out for at least two more months or four more months if I ease off of going to the Goodwill store six days every week.A guy in New Orleans put 80 gallons of gas in his truck last night.When he checked his gas gage today,it was bone dry.Somebody had siphoned/stole his gas.

That's actually not true. Several years ago, CBC's website foreswore advertising on the main news pages (as had always been the case for the children's programming site, kids.cbc.ca) feeling that the co-opting of readers' attention was not in keeping with their mission - advertising was relegated to areas of the site where advertising was very much part of the equation (Sports, financial, etc.). But prior to that decision, cbc.ca had as much advertising, in as many places, as it does now.

Frankly, without financial support from Ottawa, I'm surprised they gave up the revenue before.

Yes. This applies to studio facilities. The transmitter sites themselves are mostly still intact, and being fed remotely. They could get special permission from the FCC to relocate transmitter facilities, but that takes quite a while, they certainly would not be operating already under that authorization.

WWL's AM TX is the primary for what is now called the "United Radio Broadcasters of New Orleans".

This from Radio Online http://news.radio-online.com/cgi-bin/$rol.exe/roundup

Groups Form United Radio Broadcasters of New Orleans

In response to the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, 15 area stations including those owned by Clear Channel, Entercom and local independents have joined together to form the United Radio Broadcasters of New Orleans. The joint effort is meant to provide the region with complete, reliable and consistent broadcasts of emergency recovery and relief information.

The group is comprised of outlets operated by Clear Channel, Entercom and independent stations KLCL-AM/Lake Charles and KJEF-FM/Jennings. The collaboration features Entercom's WWL-AM 870, enhanced by the resources of the other Entercom and Clear Channel outlets in the region. The Louisiana Network out of Baton Rouge is also providing facilities support.

The effort began Thursday night with a broadcast at 10pm CT. Programming consists of continuous news, information and coverage of local relief efforts, and will include live feeds from street reporters and interviews and updates from local officials and relief coordinators. A toll-free 800 number will allow listeners to call in with their experiences, eyewitness reports and questions.

Additionally, the stations will share a helicopter to transport engineers to transmitter sites and assist in the evacuation of employees as needed. Independent broadcasters in the region interested in joining the effort should call 225-231-1860. (09-02-05)

Sorry about that. I was thinking of my dx390. I'd just sent a question to an eBay seller and it was still on my mind. The ATS 803 appealed to me because of the 'poor man's 2010' description. I fit the category to a 'T' as I don't have any beer can refund money to buy Drakes with.

About a half hour or so ago,a guy in New Orleans on WWL said they have eight large portable pumps (I suppose they are great big humongous pumps that were trucked in and run on diesel engines or whatever) and they are going to use those pumps to pump out water in some areas where their main City pumps can pump the water on out of some areas of New Orleans.

It's the crappy mechanical tuning encoder that the tuning knob operates. Drake should have stayed with the higher quality optical encoder like the old R-8 had. This problem is common in the SW-2 also because it uses the same encoder.

Drake told me they had a problem with the optical encoder and that's why they changed to the mechanical one. Replacing the mechanical encoder is pretty easy for someone with basic electronics skills. The part costs less than $20. Part # is 3260012

Now that the long awaited event has happen to destroy New Orleans.
Phase One - Has begun with the Depopulation of the City.
Starting with the mass movement of the majority of African-Americans (Poor Black Folk) out of the City that was once their home. The deportation of these African-Americans (Poor Black Folk) to other area's in the State of Louisiana or better to other States.
Phase Two - The Democrat Party Controlled State of Louisiana will get the Federal Government to foot the bill for compensating the former Citizens of the City of New Orleans for their Property after the City and State takes it from them.
Phase Three - The Re-Population of the City of NEW "New Orleans" with the 'right kind of people' according to the Leaders of the Democrat Party of the State of Louisiana.
- - - Translation : Very Few Poor Black Folks.

I remember one time when I was at Vieux Carrie (French Quarter,to y'all non believers) one night in New Orleans at a place called (I wonder if the Fanny Butt Cafe survived?) the Cat's Meow (or something like that,the joint was packed solid with people,you couldn't even hardly breathe in there,it was that good) and that was when I used to have a goatee on my chinny chin chin and two wimmins from Belgium was sitting up there two or three steps up there behind me.(they were humdingers too,let me tell y'all that) One of them Belgium wimmins tapped my shoulder,she said,I like your goatee.

Roger is ever the laughingstock. Even on Nimbusters where living low, being part and parcel of a group of infantile one-liners with IQ's bordering on single digits is the norm, poor Woger has been relegated to the lowest of the low.
Yes, even the Nim low-life's have their pecking order, and Roger has been shunted to the bottom of the heap. So much so that Roger's posts are now being transferred to another board by the administrator.
Has Woger gotten the hint? Has he learned that he is unwanted?
No.

He continues as before. Undaunted, unswayed, and as stupid as ever, this rectal cavity from West Virginia persists. And yet this social misfit continues to boast that he is pursuing higher education, a claim that is difficult to believe in light of his hundreds of spelling errors and outright lies.

If there is any consistency to Mr. Wiseman it is that, one, he is a congenital liar and two, that he is in dire need of a concentrated dose of mental health assistance.

For a 49 year old man to act as he does...well, it is sad. You have to pity the guy.

Wrong! RHF.The most corrupted city in America is D.C.Louisiana tried and tried over and over again to raise enough money for flood control,but there is just so much taxes they can levy on the Citizens of New Orleans and Louisiana.Do you live in a large City? A City as large as New Orleans? If so,which City is that? Does your City need any money for preparations in the event a "Hurricane Katrina" might happen to your City? And if it does and in the aftermath of such a tragedy,y'all do like bush said a couple of days ago and y'all raise the money through private charities.We pay taxes,fed taxes and City and State taxes.y'all dont ask fed govt for any of your fed govt money back,y'all hear! The SW pirates chatroom Hello Everyone.
As we all know there is not reall a stable chat room related to free radio, only one i know of witch could be usefull for sw pirates is the irc chatroom monitor (you can log in on 3 irc chatrooms on the www.alfalima.net/start page) But now we do have one, with great visual effects, Could be that some of you don't have flash installed but most of you have i guess, It is a very stable chat room, you can go private with someone, you can create your own chatroom (also pasword protected) and can modify the scins, fonts and the list go's on. You can log in on the www.alfalima.net page or the www.alfalima.net/start page or to the login frame at http://www.alfalima.net/chat/inloggen-chat.htm

Sunday mornings it can be very busy, on other days very quit but due good promotion i hope to see more visitors in the future.
Greeting from the sw pirates(1100 members) and radio and transmitters tech group (1300 members) moderator. Alfred Zoer

PS,,, we give away short urls for radio and listening related webpages (www.alfalima.net/yourname) Just ask for one, info@alfalima.net

Why is it typical bigot shit if its true? Are you one of these Do Gooders who stick up for the scumbag brigade. Wait until your daughter or mother (or even you) gets raped or beaten shitless for a mobile phone or a few quid. Well see how quick you are to defend them then.
There was a survey done in the UK about rape, the facts were 80% of rape were by Afro Carribeans, 10% Asian and 10% white. Now...why do you think that may be?? Whenever these animals protest about something theres a riot, they set cars on fire, attack the police, loot buildings and set upon anyone who isnt like them, and in a few cases rape women.
If im rasist for saying this then so f*$king what. You get 20 times more rasism from them and whereas if they complain you get done, if we complain nothing happens... open your eyes. We live in a country of supposedly free speech so isnt it our right... or does that only apply if your black?

To those considering leaving this group...

I ran OE, clicked newsgroup r.r.e status said 89 messages not downloaded, I got the headers... result: 1 on topic unread message killfile and subject filters deleted 88 messages... about 99%

I've had other similar results, but never 99 percent... more like 60-80 percent, but the point is... filter and PLONK the crap you don't want to see

What needs to be realized is that New Orleans has long been one of the most corrupt and lawless places in the world.
Much of the NO police department, and local government, is as criminal as those they are supposed to oversee. The greatest problem is that no one is allowed to discuss the situation honestly.
I am a Southerner by heritage, I know I am part Native American, and also that I have African American relatives. I am no racist bigot. New Orleans is simply a failed experiment in multiculturism.
We are only seeing the surface now, I believe the stories yet to come will be even more sickening, but it will not be a failure of core American culture, but rather a scarcity.
It will be interesting to see if many of these displaced people will now go after the jobs the illegal Mexican workers are doing, or just go back to hanging on the first government teat they find. I often suspect that Presidente Fox was accurate in his assessment.
Mexican labor may well have a big part in rebuilding New Orleans, just doing those "jobs Americans refuse to do".

There was a gas station owner interviewed on a national tv news broadcast (he was an obvious foreigner, India, or someplace like that) and admitted he increased the price to keep people from buying gasoline. And get this, he said he might increase it more (it was already over $3 a gallon!)! So yeah, they are gouging us for gasoline.

However, for someone visitng the group for the first time this may not be realistic. A newbie will see politics, name calling, bigotry and other off topic posts and immeiately write off the group as worthless.

It would be much better if some individuals would have enough respect for others and not post the garbage that is outside the subject the group was created for.

Even with filtering, I still see a lot of junk, seriously limiting the value of this group.

Do a search on SVO (straight vegetable oil). It is a good match for most diesels, but it usually won't start the engine, and at room temperature is borderline too thick to safely pass through the injectors. The solution to these problems is to start the engine on diesel, and use the engine coolant to preheat the SVO. When the engine is up to temperature, switch to SVO. When you are a couple of miles from the end of your trip, switch back to diesel (to clear the filters, pumps and lines of SVO)

Also, if your friend doesn't want to have to fill his truck bed with empty VO bottles, he can buy the stuff in 55 gallon plastic barrels for a much reduced price.

-Chuck

OBTW, using SVO in an on-the-road vehicle is illegal both federally, and in most states, as you aren't paying the required per gallon road taxes. The road taxes amount to about $1 per gallon of the price of fuel. It is also illegal to run a hybrid using a battery charger, for the same reason... non commercial use is unlikely to be caught in the near term, however. As SVO becomes more popular, I am sure that the local constabulary will find ample time to pull over any vehicle that smells like a fryer. The fines for running untaxed motor fuel on the road are very steep.

It's acidic enough that it will eventually corrode the fuel injectors if he does this for too long without adding some buffering or cutting it with diesel. But that should be fine to get us through the current shortage.

Likewise my local paint store is selling VM&P naptha for around $2/gal.
A gasoline engine won't run on it alone terribly well, but you can cut gasoline with it without any harm. (Admittedly I say this as a guy with a car that predates catalytic converters).

Hmm... what are alcohol prices slike?

Lawrence,there used to be a big new foodstore right there at the intersection of Highway 80 and Highway 18,within two blocks of me.I remember when the foodstore was being built.There were dumptrucks hauling out the dirt and from Pearl,Mississippi,dumptrucks brought in some red sand dirt and then the building was built.I used to walk over there several times every week and buy my food thingys.About 13 years ago the foodstore closed down for whatever reason.The nearest foodstore to me now is at the wal mart supercenter store on Greenway Drive and Highway 18,about one and seven tenths mile South of me.So nowdays,I have to get in my vehicle and fight that heavy crazy traffic and wait on half a dozen traffic lights going there and back to my house just to go to the foodstore once a week.I always stop off at the Goodwill store too because it is right on the way to the foodstore.Otherwise,I wouldn't be driving anywhere.

Um, Jack, you gotta realize that if you criticize our country a lot of people, like the Drakeman, are going to get pissed. You're going to catch a lot of heat. It's the "our country is better than your country" attitude.

The truth is, the enormity of the problem is more than the emergency agencies had ever planned for and they are still, at this late date, having trouble getting their arms around it. The lack of leadership, starting with the president and FEMA head Michael Brown is so appalling that even conservatives are calling for their heads. The Prez, probably at the urging of his handlers, cancelled his vacation and flew over the hurricane ravaged Gulf Coast. After considerable criticism he started making more appearances on camera with other federal and local officials, with lots of back-slapping and promises. But relief is slow and sporatic. Michael Brown admitted on a television interview that he was unaware that 20,000 people had been told to go to the convention center and wait for help. They were abandodned there for days without food & water. He said in the interview he would take immediate action. It was several days before help finally arrived. Michael Brown belongs in prison. Despite what the right-wing apologists on this NG might tell you, the truth is if Bush were running for re-election he would be soundly defeated, as a result of his lack of leadership in this enormous tragedy as well as dissatisfaction with his handling of the Iraq situation in the opinion of the majority of Americans.

Brace yourself - gratuitous flaming to follow.

Diesel engines love vegetable oil.Almost any kind of clean filtered oil makes diesel engines happy.In Brazil there are certain kinds of trees that put out an oily substance and they tap those trees (sort of like tapping Maple trees to make Maple syrup) and get that oily substance and they pour it straight into the diesel fuel tanks of their diesel engine vehicles.I dont remember the name of those trees.

Nobody is calling for anybody's head except that dumb ass mayor in New Orleans. Truth be told, the actual problem is the mayor's lack of preparation. Everybody wants to point their finger at the federal government. What New Orleans residents need to do is take a long look at themselves. There they might find the root of their problem.

On a side note, I love where Celine Dion donated one million dollars and the proceeded to bash the US government. Nothing like using your heart felt donation to bash the war in Iraq. You might not agree with the war but you should at least separate the two. It was a typical stupid canuck ploy. The kind we are used to here on RRS.

I dont know about nowdays,but back in the late 1950's/early 1960's when foreign diesel engine cars (Mercedes Benz and such like) started getting popular in America,some folks would use their home heating oil in their diesel engine cars because it was cheaper.I own a four cylinder Mercedes Benz diesel engine I bought fom J.C.Whitney company back in the 1960's.I was going to put it in a small 1962 International step van I used to own and make a camper out of the van,but I never got around to doing it so the diesel engine just sits in my old shed in my back yard and gathers dust.

As I recall, GE SupeRadio is a superhet. RS's attempt is a TRF.
There will be substantial differences in DX performance.

About 30 years ago, Popular Electronics had an article about an AM radio on a single chip. The chip is a ZN414 (three leads, power, common and RF in), at the time available from Circuit Specialists, Tempe, AZ, and with a tuning stage added, produced a very nice tuner/preamp for a TRF receiver. I bought three of them for a pittance, and built one up in a previously gutted Charles Freshman case bought at an auction as part of a lot of TRF's my mother in law paid $1 for. Using the tuning coils and caps which were attached to the front panel, and a piece of breadboard to hold the chip and battery, I built up a solidstate TRF in a 1924 Freshman case. (the other 8 radios have been restored over the years, and work daily, btw)

The sensitivity was far more than I expected out of this chip. With only the tuning coils in the case, I got all the locals, and many stations at considerable distance. From my location in St Louis, I got WGN, and WLS, as well as several of the regional station in and aroud the midwest. Of course this was before NRSC-II, so stations were still transmitting full bandwidth. KMOX on Sunday nights did a couple of pop music shows. And the audio was magnificent.

Not so much, with station specs today.

With a random length of wire antenna, the band came alive. But selectivity was too wide to make much sense out of most of it.

Even a wideband superhet like my McKay-Dymek AM-5 could separate more signals from the mess than this ZN414.

But on locals, like the RS TRF Super Radio, it was, and still is, a very pleasant and solid performing receiver.

For those who will doubtless ask, ZN414 has been discontinued. Some years it was upgraded to ZN414A, which lowered noise, increased gain. But that, too has been supplanted by yet another chip that's still current, though the designation escapes me.

Do a websearch for ZN414, you'll come up with some interesting results.

The current chip is available from Circuit Specialists.

Pricing anything, including gasoline, according to the Law of Supply and Demand is not "gouging." If that station owner had priced his (and that is the operative word - "his") gasoline too high, he wouldn't have sold any. And if he didn't want to sell all of his (there's that word again) gasoline at something more than his replacement cost, why should he have to?

When YOU have something for sale that is suddenly much more in demand, and there is much less of a supply of it, you will sell it at a much higher price too - your labor, for example, or your real estate, or your wheat crop, or your rare Rembrandt painting, or your ... gasoline.

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him.

You sure didn't, Lardass, you shouldn't jack off over your

You never did tell us how somebody "operates" a dictionary instead of

Well well, such a cowardly statement from some nigger loving cocksucker who decides to change his news id to hide who he is.... Im not hiding anywhere Nigger lover.... so your allowed to say what you think and im not eh..... you have to use capitols too because your a bigmouthed coon lover.
Ive got love in my heart for anyone whos descent, i feel sorry for those who have died or lost their properties and livelihoods but that makes it ok for some to kill, loot and rape does it???
You have love in your heart for murdering raping scumbags.... well thats fine, you can have them all living next to you...

Now you slovernly sack of shit you can tell me what i lied about and what deceit i said... Niggers are worthless sacks of shit. Even black rappers diss other black brothers who are worthless by calling them niggers.... niggers is a derisery term for worthless blacks... its not a term for all blacks... anyhow i dont have to defend my opinion to you.... go shovel some graves for the dead if your that upset

Oh yeah? You obviously didn't catch Cigar Dave yesterday (12:00 noon EDT, 970am, Tampa)! He's a conservative, Republican, Bush supporter who was so hot with criticism he was lit at both ends.

Seriously, a common theme I'm hearing on conservative radio talk shows, as well as the opinion mongers n the "liberal" mainstream media is that FEMA, Homeland Security, and everyone up the food chain to POTUS his-very-self, are ill-prepared and slow to react. This bodes ill for any more catastrophes, natural or terrorist-made, in the future. I agree with that assessment.

I don't think this is true. While TRF, ie Tuned Radio Frequency, was used to denote a receiver with a couple of tuned amplifier stages going into a detector stage decades ago, I think the TRF in the Radio Shack radio was a marketing thing. At least the term. I was always under the impression that the TRF was indeed a superheterodyne design, but unlike many/most portable radios, had a stage of tuned amplification ahead of the mixer, and that Tuned RF stage is what the name refers to.

For that level of radio, it was something relatively unique. It wasn't unique to receivers that were primarily shortwave receivers, and it wasn't unique for car radios, but most lower end am receivers, certainly portables and maybe even a lot of home base receivers (the famed All American Five had not stage ahead of the mixer for isntance) did not have that extra stage.

Done well, the extra stage would help reject images, and improve sensitivity.

The point of the ZN414, and the later MK484, is that by having good AGC there is vast improvement over a what one would expect for a single tuned circuit receiver. In effect, turn down the gain when a decent signal is there, and as long as adjacent signals were weaker to start off, they are now way down.

I wonder how you used it as a preamp, given that the design doesn't really make for using it for anything but a TRF receiver. Only three pins, so the output comes after the detector stage.

It sure was convenient that that hurricane hit, otherwise they wouldn't have a legitimate excuse to gouge. He priced it high on purpose so he wouldn't sell any. That is what he said. And he was going to raise it higher. Some stations around where I live have fluctuated the prices on a daily basis. None have gone to unreasonable lengths to gouge.....
Yet.

No, he was doing it to keep people from buying it. He was doing it to make all the profits he can on somebody else's shortfall.

I've not been following because I do tune out the junk posts.

But it can sometimes be very hard to not respond when people routinely post off topic junk. Because the off-topic becomes the norm, so you post without thinking.

As so often is the case after some big event, the newsgroups are loaded with off-topic discussion of the hurricane. I've caught myself a number of times as I'm about to post a reply, and then realize that no matter how much I'd like to discuss some of it, I will not reply where it doesn't belong.

I've seen mobs in operation, and it takes a certain awareness and even willpower to step back and not be a participant. The first time I noticed it happening, I was all set to run with a bunch of other people, and realized just as I started what was happening. The next time it happened, I was fully aware, so didn't move one bit. But oddly, it was a really weird position to be in, and I very clearly saw why it was easier to follow the mob than to not be a part of it.

SOme of what is happening here is a mob mentality. Something has become so common that it's difficult to stand back and not get sucked into it.

The only way to fix it is to speak up (since just standing there while the mob moves on in a newsgroup doesn't show you still there but not posting), in the hopes that it will trigger others to realize what is going on, and to resist too. And yes, once enough get rid of the mob mentality, it will be easier to get rid of the junk posts.

I can barely pick up WWL 870 but it is so faint and so much static,it is next to impossible to hear them talking now.I suppose they are broacasting with lower power.Usually (before Hurricane Katrina) WWL would come during the daytime pretty good and I could listen much better.Most of the time last night,WWL sounded like they were right here in Jackson.It will be better tonight,I am sure.

We need a revolution in this country. The first thing is all citizens must arm themselves heavily. The army has guns, so, under the Consititution,the citizens by right can own arms too. You see, when the gov't, {in this case the bush administration} allows certain laws to be established and a certain corporate mentality to sell out the country and it's people to be "they way they want it", it's time for a major change.

The administration uses the army and police to enforce these laws and the "way" they conduct themselves and treat U.S. citizens. So if you object to something, like having your house taken away from you by force to have a mall put up, if you refuse to leave, they will use FORCE AND ARMS to make you leave beyond your will.

I say in a case like that, you and the other citizens of the county or city should all come out with their 50 cal machine guns and other automatic weapons and take a stance. Once ONE SINGLE BULLET is fired from the army or police towards you to KILL YOU from not giving up your home, we return FIRE.

If they want to fight us honest citizens who earned that home and all the rights that once went with it, they will have a fight on their hands. They want to shoot to kill us, well we shoot back to kill them. Simple as that.

When the people of the Ukraine saw their election was fixed, they all came out into the street to protest and FIGHT BACK till they WON.

BUT, in this country since we have such a diversified society that have no real alligiance to this country but to their "main country" like mexico and other foreign places they came from, no one stands together anymore.

Part of this problem is due to the WIDE OPEN BORDERS we have and lax immigration laws that are not even enforced. If we all stood together with ARMS in hand, we could fight back against laws we don't think are fair and just, plus stop other corruption this administration dumps ALL OVER US.

Remember this first step is mass accumulation of arms and heavy weaponry by individual citizens which is our right under law.

P.S. I hate getting involved in these OT posts, but after reading seeing how this administration handled the New Orleans tragedy and bush's "speeches" on this issue, I just can't keep it inside anymore.

Hello, John --

I always enjoy your radio-related posts. I'm a little surprised to see this post from you.

Of course, everyone in America is asking the question, "How could this possibly have happened?" This precise eventuality has been discussed widely in the last few years. When a more-active-than-usual hurricane season was forecast for this year, there was lots of discussion of New Orleans' exposed southeast flank -- there's levee protection from the lake and the river, but no levees to stop a tidal surge from the ocean. The proposed solution was to build an immense network of levees to the southeast of the city, to complete the ring all the way around.

In the end, that wouldn't have helped, because it was the failure of an existing levee that caused the problem. It wasn't the direct effect of the hurricane -- the city actually did pretty well with that. But when the levees broke, all bets were off.

There should have been a better contingency plan for the levees breaking, sure -- but, let me ask you -- do levees ever break unexpectedly in South Africa? Are all of your public works projects flawless after being in existence for well over a hundred years? Can SA spend billions to build levees which have a one-in-a-thousand chance of ever being needed?

Also, John, when floods hit small towns in America, the rescue and aid efforts are well-oiled and take place easily. It happens yearly, and we're very proud of the efforts of all of our rescuers, both government and private. I'm happy that it's the same for you in South Africa. How about you report back to us after a South African city with a population of 1.3 million, located in a basin 6 feet below sea level, and with few ingress or egress routes, is suddenly submerged under 10-20 feet of water, with no immediate way to pump it out? Oh, and it has to happen immediately after a hurricane which knocks out all power and destroys many of the already-limited ingress and egress routes. Let's compare notes then.

For RA, it seems that the worst signal comes when it's local midnight at the transmitter. 6020 and 5995 are coming in better here (Seattle), lately, than 9580/9590. (But the Catholic station in the Philippines still stomps on 6020 from 12:30-14:00). 5995 was 20 over s9 at 14:00, declining down to only tolerable at 16:00.

Hello, again, John. You're really on a roll, aren't you?

There was a surge in military enlistments after 9/11/01, because people wanted to participate in the effort to hunt down the people who did it and bring them to justice. When those kids joined the military, they were ready to make the ultimate sacrifice to make sure that there would never be another 9/11.

Now, fast forward a couple of years, and we see that they are not being used in an effort to track down and bring Al Qaeda to justice. They're being used in a war that has no bearing on the national security of the US, and which does nothing to find Osama bin Laden and put his head on a pike. Of course we're fed up. I'd be proud to see my sons serve in an effort to protect this country -- but I'd be indescribably angry if they wasted their lives in a war that served no useful purpose.

Enlisting in the military does not mean that you're consenting to be led by fools, or worse.

Bush was not elected by a large majority. Election to a presidency does not mean that the electorate has automatically consented to every subsequent action taken by that president. Your logic would dictate that every president would necessarily have to be re-elected, because since we voted for him once, therefore he represents our will. Bush does not express the will of the American people. The latest polls demonstrate that clearly. Many of us feel betrayed because we believed, just as the military enlistees did, that we were on an all-out mission to get Al Qaeda.

If conditions in South Africa are truly as you describe them, then I'm sure awful goddam glad I don't live there! It's too bad you didn't have Joe McCarthy there, apparently he would have been right at home.

There is an AF gain stage before output on the chip. So only a line level AF amp is necessary to drive the loudspeaker. It drives a high impedance headset quite nicely. When I first put it together I used a pair of Brush Clevites. Later I used my first pair or HD414's which were also 2k

A single AA standard Eveready would last 90 days 24/7 at the time.

A Duracell more than twice that.

Hey, 'tard boy... one does NOT get to join the military on a 'mission specific' basis. I hate to be the one that breaks that fact to you.

If you've got to replace it, you might see what it would cost to change to an optical one.

My guess is you could get one heck of a nice one for under $50.

I believe that simple understanding hasn't been made to a good number

Ha Ha Ha Ha .,.........

Support for National Public Radio is brought to you by niggers, faggots, liberals & jews

By the way you dumb liberal idiot the joy in my life and love in my heart is being destroyed by the niggers in my neighborhood, the liberals telling me that faggots and dykes can marry !?!?!

If I could go back in time I would vote for Hitler!

This experiment of equality for all non White races is continuously being proven to be a big mistake.

It has been and will always be the White race that builds real and meaningful institutions.

And no, I do not want my tax dollars being spent on a bunch of starving & dying, dumb screaming niggers in New Orleans - I do not care what happens to them.

Who cares about the cess pit of New Orleans anyways! It is a filthy, vile place - worthless to the moral value of this country.

Despite the encroachment of the 'garbage' races we still have time to reclaim and realign our country.

Back to your isolation from reality you faggot liberal! Prepare to meet your end!

Might be a good idea to get a locking gas cap for your vehicle(s).I dont know for sure,but some auto parts stores might sell some sort of a barrier screen thingy that fits down inside the gas tank pipes so as to prevent anybody from sticking a siphon hose down in there to steal gas or diesel fuel.I think I know how I can make a few of them for my own vehicles. www.jcwhitney.com might sell something like that.It would be a good cottage industry for some people to start making and selling things like that.Sir/Mam,why is it that your breath smells like gasoline/diesel fuel?

Yes, I subscribed for the first time last week and was a little ``surprised'' at what I found. I considered dropping the group

Digi-Key used to have a Grayhill optical encoder in the 30 dollar range. The mod should be pretty easy. You just need to connect it to a source of +5V and probably remove the pullup resistors that are connected to the Up/Down tune lines.

I've got a couple of questions?

1. How exaggerated was the TV coverage of the sniping?
How many incidents, and what areas were actually effected?

2. Did the media coveage cause the FEMA executives to shut down access to New Orleans on the grounds of safety? If not safety, why? And why where highway style busses needed to evacuate the Superdome? Wouldn't a "Dunkirk with Dumptrucks" have worked several days earlier? (Who go the contract to provide the busses?)

3. Would a lot of this not have happened this way if federal bureaucrats were banned from watching any 24 hour cable news channels?

CNN lost all credibilty with me during the coverage of the First Gulf War that the local TV stations were rebroadcasting. Sloppy, overdramatic, inaccurate, and STUPID. And to get FOX news, just add a large factor of blatant lying and partisan propaganda. They're not news, they're a form of "Reality TV" where the news editors and meat puppets out in the field are making up a "story" to add drama to real events.

I'm not talking about that article in particular, but how long it took the bush administration to get help to those people. It took 5 days for them for to get ANY food or clean water to United States citizens with dead bodies floating along side them in the streets as well.

I'm talking about the poor people who just didn't have the money to buy a plane ticket out of the state nor a car to drive away to the next state or safety. These poor people are honest but stuck. They deserve respect and the utmost consideration. Seems bush cares more about illegal foreigners or just foreigners then his own people.

I'm not talking about the scum looters that took more then just food,water and dry clothes and other needed necessities for a human being to exist every day. Of course there were droves of gangs ruining things for everyone but that still had NOTHING to do with help taking so long to get there. Also, there were reports of white racists involved in the shooting at U.S. helicopters trying to bring in help. Makes more sense to me then the residents doing it that were starving to death.

5 full days to get help to a local city. 5 days to drop food, water and medical supplies to human beings in America. I'm also disgusted by some of the people in here's attitude and racist comments and remarks about the black race of people.

Do these people actually believe they will be welcomed by Jesus or Abraham or whatever faith they are with feelings like they have? To the people who called black people "negroids" and "animals" and other names. Do you actually believe in your hearts that Jesus or Moses agrees with you and gives you the "ticket" as a warm, considerate GOOD person that deserves the best in heaven now that you have passed on to the other side if there is one? So do you believe that in your heart??

We dropped food and water for the people of Thailand in 2 DAYS, but it took us 5 DAYS to get it to a city in the United States. Had this been a terrorist attack, you can see how this president would handle things. Face it, he's a dumb, inept, deer caught in the headlights airhead. He bankrupted 2 companies under his control once and he is bankrupting this nation, it's economy, people, borders, culture, foreign atitude towards us, laws and environment. He is also a war criminal and muderer.

BTW JD,
as soon I see hear someone attack me personally or try to belittle me aside from the topic I posted, I put them on my low self esteem, uncontrolled emotionally, not very intelligent or deep human beings list.

BTW, what you have to say about me personally has no effect on me whatsoever so save it. Don't waste your time unless to have some to waste or want others who think like you to "look up" to you as their hero.

I have an old Mother Earth magazine around here somewhere that has an article in it about hooking up one of those three cylinder (I dont remember if it is gas or diesel engine,I think the brand name of the engine starts with a Y) Japanese small lawn tractor/mower engines to an old Triump (brit car) car.I dont remember the gas milege claims in the article (the magazine dates back to the 1970's) but it is somewhere around 85 miles or more per gallon.I also have some plans here that I ordered from somewhere back in the 1960's or 1970's about hooking up an electric golf cart motor to a Volkswagen car and I have some plans I ordered back in the 1960's or 1970's about building from scratch a double compound (something like that,the same compressed air is used twice) compressed air powered two wheel vehicle.

This is what happens when you put a PR director from the Arabian Horse Breeder's Association in charge of disaster preparation.

While Americans were drowning in Louisiana, Bush was mugging for the press in San Diego, completely oblivious to the gravity of the situation. He is disconnected. But even worse, his handlers are disconeected.

To add insult to injury, Ms. Rice refused to cut short her New York

The problem with a monitored group like rec.radio.broadcasting is that sometimes a post takes a day or two before the moderator is able to read it, approve it, and then allow it to be posted.

Having a time lag would totally eliminate the real time frequency chasing that happens here sometimes.

Truth is I ignore most of the stuff I hear. I do think that people are way to quick to assess blame. It seems to me that the Mayor and Governor could have helped prevent some of the tragedies. Don't you think people need to start helping themselves and quit depending on a government handout?

I then hear what dion says and I've really got to laugh. She can sing but she sure can't think. She makes it sound like going to war happens in a few short minutes. She does not realize that it was months and months in the planning stages. I think the what has happened in a mere week is truly a miracle. Can you imagine the logistics involved in the relief effort?

977. Wall warts and PSU's

A recent thread highlighted the problem of cheap wall warts creating a lot of RFI - radio interference hash.
I think for the uninitiated some of you may not be aware of just how much radio noise your wall wart is creating.
A quick check is to run your radio on batteries. Check a couple of free spots up and down the bands and note the level of noise.
Then switch the wall wart on and take a note of the radio noise at the same spots you did with it off.
There is an excellent article as to how to rectify a noisy wall wart in the article:
http://www.dxing.info/equipment/wall_warts_bryant.dx
I'm not at all technical, so this article was beyond my limited soldering/technical abilities, but I took it down to my local TV repairman and it seemed quite a simple job for him to fix a noisy wall wart.

Another thread that often arises is that of radio noise from PC's. Firstly, no name obscure brands of PC's and monitors nearly always give out a lot of RFI, but the better named brands can be very noise free, although they are obviously more expensive than the no name brands.
My daughter donated me an IBM ThinkPad laptop to drive my radio's with and it is ABSOLUTELY noise free, whereas some of my pals laptops create an enormous RFI hash.

PC monitor's are a great source of noise, so when I last upgraded I chose a monitor that is rated VLF (very low emission) and it is very noise free. It cost more but is so much better than my old noisy monitor it has been worth it.

Then there is the noise from the PC itself. When I last upgraded my PC I noticed a huge amount of extra noise. It took me awhile to figure out that this source of noise was coming from the PC even when it was switched OFF. What to do about this as I am very non technical. One of my more knowledgeable pals suggested it might be the PSU, so I carted the PC off to my friendly small town dealer and he had about six other types and makes of PSU's and offered to try them. Using my portable we spent about half an hour testing the various other PSU's until we came across one that was markedly less noisy than the one in my PC.

So now I can DX noise free scanning my radio from the PC using the excellent ERGO system linked to the ILD database = great fun.

This is a frequent thread with protagonists each way.
I started DXing in the sixties when there were hardly any SW stations to be heard here in Africa at all.
Today there are more bands and they are all jampacked with broadcasters.
There are plenty of English language broadcasts to Africa from a wide variety of major broadcasters.

I was just listening to the Voice of (N) Korea and it was absorbing - some really nice Chinese opera followed by a travel slot in English = captivating stuff.
Some of you seem to think if the broadcast is not in English then it is not worth listening to.
This is wrong as there is much fascinating stuff to be heard in foreign languages, particularly their music.
Have you ever heard the lovely flute music from the high Andes put out by Chilean broadcasters?
The lovely classical operas and concerto's from Radio China. Their "Great Wall Concerto" is a must, I even bought the CD.
Try listening to Pidgin English from Papua New Guinea or Solomon Isles.
I've even listened to early morning aerobics from Indonesia.
How about some beautiful Indian music to add to your repertoire?
Then there's the Russian/Ukraine/Georgian local stations with spellbinding dances.

I could go on, but try for yourself before you consign shortwave to the graveyard. It's certainly not dead - the bands are full of interesting programming and captivating music = give it a try.

There are still billions of people in the world who do not have access to the internet and first world gadgetry who will continue to rely on radio for very many years to come.

Happy listening and enjoy your shortwave radio.

Ok thanks everybody for input. I just sent Drake Email to see what kind of service they offer. I would like whole unit checked out soup to nuts. I want to make sure running AOK to present config and so forth. Unit is very nice and I will probably keep, but if I decide to sell I would like to tell potential owner that factory has recently blessed unit.

I did a www.devilfinder.com for,Square Miles Area of England.The Straightdope.com link says England is 50,400 square miles,Scotland is 30,400 sq miles,Wales is 8,000 sq miles,Northern Ireland is 5,500 sq miles,Isle of Man is 225 sq miles,the Channel Islands about 75 sq miles all together,but not officially part of the U.K.The White House estimates an area of about 90,000 square miles (234,000 square kilometers) has been affected by Hurricane Katrina.Prepared or unprepared,it is a huge task getting help and aid to that large an area especially after a tragedy such as Hurricane Katrina.

Dave,

this is a typical shallow minded bush supporter and follower. Just like you can't make a animal comprehend something, it's the same sort of analogy. His mind is on another level of consciousness. In other words he is just on a lower level of awareness of what's going on around him.

And if you notice his reply has a ME involved in almost every one. He has the capacity and approach of childs mind to defense and problem recognition. He also makes lots of assumptions that he already knowns the answer is no to but the tiny, tiny meat in his head thinks this is a approach that he might be able to pull off as a defense to make me look bad. I thought he was a lot smarter then this. What a pathetic joke.

I wouldn't even attempt to debate things with him cause I can see I'd be wasting my time. You don't try to talk to a cat about the morality of killing and eating a mouse. The same holds true with him.

Sorry, I now see I misread the part about a preamp. On first reading, "produced a very nice tuner/preamp for a TRF receiver" came to me as you used it ahead of a TRF receiver.

1000. Initial Observations on the Eton S350DL and the Kaito WRX911

Source record: 37244

After looking at the S350 for at least a year, I just purchased the Eton S350DL and I also picked up a Kaito WRX911. After using them for three days, here are my observations:

Eton S350DL:

This radio has been used using 4 D-cell batteries and the whip antenna from the Dallas,Tx area. It seems to be very sensitive across all three shortwave bands. I have been able to pull in many stations. It performs well on the AM band as well. The FM band is ok, it does not appear to be very sensitive on FM. The large speaker on this radio makes the stations easy to listen to. The built in S-meter is nice but not really of much use. It has two built in bandwidths, wide and narrow. The wide bandwidth has worked best for me so far. It is an analog radio with a digital frequency display. The display seems to be off about .02 kHz. Many people have remarked on the excessive drift on the original S350. I have not noticed the drift is an issue on the S350DL. They seem to have fixed this problem on the new version. It has connections for both an external SW and FM antenna. I have not yet tried these. In my opinion, this is a better radio that the Grundg YB400, The Sony 7600G and the Sangean ATS-909, all of which I own. The S350DL does not have any SSB capability, if you want that, you must look elsewhere. The radio came with an external power adapter so you can run it from a wall socket. The radio also appears able to run on 4 AA batteries. I have not tried running it from the AA batteries. It would probably eat these in short order.

Katio WRX911:

Don't waste your money. It is a small shirt pocket radio that receives AM,FM and many SW bands. On SW I was able to pick up only the biggest on the SW broadcasters. Same for AM and FM. It is almost impossible to tell which SW band you are on. Generally speaking it performs as you would expect a $22.00 radio to perform, poorly.

This is exactly my point in another thread. Someone new to the news group will just write it off because of all the nasty off topic Trolling.

I think this is a valid concern as just today 156 kill filed and 40 articles to read so that's only 20% of the posts being on topic.

Someone new is just going to drop the news group and it explains why no one new, other than some Trolling sock puppets, have shown up the last few months.

There are good people here I don't want to kill file but they answer the Trolls on a daily basis so I found a way to filter their responses when they answer the Troll posts most of the time but most people are not that sophisticated with filters.

That's not what your link says. I got this:

NEW ORLEANS - Police shot and killed at least five people Sunday after gunmen opened fire on a group of contractors traveling across a bridge on their way to make repairs, authorities said.

Deputy Police Chief W.J. Riley said police shot at eight people carrying guns, killing five or six.

Fourteen contractors were traveling across the Danziger Bridge under police escort when they came under fire, said John Hall, a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers.

They were on their way to launch barges into Lake Pontchartrain to help plug the breech in the 17th Street Canal, Hall said.

None of the contractors was killed, Hall said.

There you go again...

My butt speaketh thusly:

''The current War on Terrorism is widely considered to be an attempt to create a state of perpetual war, as terrorism is rarely under the control of a single authority who can clearly surrender - and usually can keep recruiting even under extreme pressure. The Bush doctrine of preemptive strikes against nations with certain technological and military capacities that 'may threaten' the United States also implies a perpetual war, as these capacities proliferate into the hands of greater numbers of less friendly nations, and a greater number of noni¿½state and antii¿½state (but not anarchistic) radical groups, and become cheaper to exploit in a threatening way. President Bush said in August 2004 that he believes the "War on Terror" is "not winnable," implying that he plans to wage a perpetual war without end. To some extent this is a definitional problem - calling something a war does not make it a war. War in the conventional sense implies that there are battles between combatants, that there is a definitive termination of hostilities, perhaps with a winner and loser, as is the case with some wars, or simply relief for the opponents, as in the Cold War or the war in Lebanon. This appears not to apply well to the politician's use of the term as in a War on Drugs (Reagan), or a War on Poverty (Johnson), or a War on Cancer (Nixon), and now a War on Terrorism (Bush). Perhaps it would have been better (however unlikely) for Bush use the Arabic term jihad in its greater sense, which means struggle but which implies neither victory, defeat, nor termination.''

''The novel 1984 by George Orwell was written (in 1948) from the (fictional) viewpoint of a citizen of one of three world-dominating superstates. These nations are in a state of perpetual war with each other. The state of war is used by each of the states to justify the control of their populations using Stalinist or other methods. There is some doubt as to whether an actual war is being fought or if the whole conflict is stage-managed by the three factions in order to control their respective populaces.''

Very poor on 21,740MHz today. Their signal has improved over the course of this time segment. They are for the most part inaudible earlier and they are understandable now but noisy.

Lately the lower bands have been better than the higher bands and I expect that is due to the Geomagnetic field being unsettled to storm conditions over most of the last week.

And of course, even if every major broadcaster disappeared tomorrow, there would still be plenty to listen to on the shortwave bands. I do a lot of listening, and I can't even keep track of it all. It's fun, but also exhausting.

I think it was WWL but it's been a while. So...no, I'm not sure but many stations have streaming. Just have to look and see I guess.

That would seem to make sense, but the way I understand it, the rule is supposed to look for a particular word in a subject line, so it shouldn't matter if the word is the first word in that line or any other word in that line. If it sees the word, then it should delete it.

John:

Thanks for your interesting comments re SW. I wish I could be as optimistic, and at the same time I'm not sure there is any reason to "wish" that SW continue.

As a near 30 year news correspondent for Voice of America, as well as a near 40 year SWL, I can tell you that SW is definitely not long for this world.

This has been covered by others on this discussion group in the past, but there is no longer much incentive for anyone to use shortwave, except for the few broadcasters in Latin America who still do it in remote regions of Peru and similar places.

Major broadcasters may still be found on the air (ironically, and in a statement that reflects very closely the state of affairs on the international stage, the major broadcasters that are left are China which has been seeking to expand its influence to overcome the U.S., and Cuba -- which appears to be clueless).
You also have the bizarre ones, such as Croatia, and Czech Republic, who still think there is a reason to do so.

For the most part, however, SW is on a steep nosedive, and this has been shown statistically to be true in recent surveys by one of the better known veteran SWLs in Europe (whose name I can't recall right now).

It is interesting, however, that as SW continues to decline (although you will find those who cite sales of cheap crappy Eton/Grundig radios as proof that it is doing very well), in the recent New Orleans crisis, some of the best reporting can be found coming from BBC and Deutsche Welle (inlcuding BBC reading emails from people in the Gulf region).

Anyway, I think it's an interesting topic for discussion here on this group and I would welcome input from others.

If you don't want an ipod, but want to enhance your shortwave system, get a free ipod (using the information below), sell it on e-bay, and then take the cash and upgrade your shortwave system :-) I just sold my free iPod 20GB on e-bay for $250. The xbox 360 and 60GB iPod are each worth around $400.. Check it out..

www.customsoftwarezone.com/free

Use the above link to get a free xbox 360, 60GB photo iPod, AND a 1GB iPod Shuffle. Don't settle for 1, get them ALL. I've personally received a free Sony Vaio laptop, a 20GB iPod, and 4 days ago, I got a Panasonic 42" Plasma TV!!!

Police Kill Five Contractors on La. Bridge

NEW ORLEANS - Police shot eight people carrying guns on a New Orleans bridge
Sunday, killing five or six, a deputy chief said. A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers said the victims were contractors on their way to repair a canal.

Funny, I followed that link and this is what is says:

Gunmen Attack Contractors on La. Bridge

1 hour, 28 minutes ago

NEW ORLEANS - Police shot and killed at least five people Sunday after gunmen opened fire on a group of contractors traveling across a bridge on their way to make repairs, authorities said.
ADVERTISEMENT

Deputy Police Chief W.J. Riley said police shot at eight people carrying guns, killing five or six.

Fourteen contractors were traveling across the Danziger Bridge under police escort when they came under fire, said John Hall, a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers.

They were on their way to launch barges into Lake Pontchartrain to help plug the breech in the 17th Street Canal, Hall said.

None of the contractors was injured, Mike Rogers, a disaster relief coordinator with the Army Corps of Engineers, told reporters in Baton Rouge.

The bridge spans a canal connecting Lake Pontchartrain and the Mississippi River.

No other details were immediately available.

Funny the link says the polcie responded to an ATTACK up on the contractors and smoked some sucm. WWL (870) gave a report that said one attacker was directly killed and all the others where wounded.

In your hast to spread hate you got your facts wrong.
Nothing new with that from idiots like you.

And please note, I have very little respect for any LEO and the New Orelans badge wearing scum are near the bottom of my list. NO LEO are as bad as the gangs they are supposed to control. Remember when the FBI taped some LEOs setting up a hit on an informant? But in this case the LEOs did their job. If you are going to hammer people try to get the facts straight.

I did provide the information as reported by the AP which was directly quoted in my original post. The AP reported it as ACE contractors being shot by NOPD. Then, the AP changed their story, which "Honus" righteously

However, in your rush to try and hammer me, you failed to get your facts straight.

Perhaps YOU should perform a mere modicum of due diligence and read the existing thread before spouting off prematurely. Yes, I will accept your apology, "Terry", if you are man enough to offer it.

I also am fully aware of the nearly institutionalized corruption that was once the norm for the NOPD. However, I had heard that they had been reformed, or were well on their way.

Here is the running story of how the report developed:
http://alendalux.blogspot.com/ 2005/09/why-i-hate-msm.html

The AP wasn't the only bureau that got it wrong either.

I responded to the thread as it appeared on Google Beta.
Sorry I stepped on your toes.
I guess I am tired of the "Bush Haters"(TM) spouting their hate.
I pride my self on accuracy and I am tired of the left telling lies, and in this case I responded to the only part of the thread that I could see.
Not that you are a Bush Hater, or Bush Lover, I was just tired of lies. I don't havemuch use for any of the ellected scum who populate the various halls of power and ineptitude.

I am sorry.

Yes and it has been pointed out that:

1. Internet connection equipment can break.
2. The Internet is overloaded anytime a big event occurs.
3. It can be turned off or information sources cut off or limited.
4. You have to be at a connection and a computer not just anywhere.
5. Satellites can fail or be turned off.
6. Satellite links are disrupted by the sun similar to SW.

Every communication solution has its problems. Short wave is the hardest medium to control who can broadcast and who can listen to it.

BTW- You don't really need the small PC board that comes with the encoder. You can remove the encoder from the board and solder the three wires coming from the connector plug directly to the pins on the encoder. Keep track of which wires go to each pin on the encoder before you remove it from the PC board.

WWV and or WWVH was poor most of the day for me on 10 and 15 MHz.

Now at 02:02 UTC WWV on 10 MHz is S9+20dB and WWVH15 MHz is S9 still favoring better reception the lower the frequency.

What was the time and frequency of reception of bupkis?

Good points. I've noted before that shortwave has been languishing on its "deathbed" for several decades now. It's the slowest, most prolonged death I've ever seen! My guess is that a couple of hundred years from now people will still be talking about the death of shortwave. Maybe this is a good thing. It's something our grandchildren will be able to bond with their grandchildren about.

You sure didn't, Lardass, you shouldn't jack off over your cum-encrusted keyboard so your space bar sticks like that.

You never did tell us how somebody "operates" a dictionary instead of reading one, or weren't you "thinking" as is your standard operating practice.

After reading the original post I am of the opinion that the poster intended to say what he did. His comment that Roger cannot "operate" a dictionary is apparently lost to Roger. 'Operating' a dictionary is an open definition, and the very task of opening such a book could be looked at as 'operating' same.
Of course Rogie is unable to grasp the subtle humor and the use of a dictionary is obviously a foreign concept to him. Heck, he has a difficult enough time as it is with learning how to utilize the space bar.

I have both the original Grundig S350 and the original Grundig YB400.
I prefer and use the S350 as it is just as sensitive on SW as the YB400, but doesn't have the hissing sound, so SW is just plain clear sound. Also, I find the bandwidths are slightly better on the S350.
After getting my S350 and comparing it to my GE Superadio III, I sold the GE. My S350 also outperforms my CCRadio on the lower part of the MW band. I am sure I will eventually get the improved S350DL.

Don't be so touchy. He probably didn't hit the space bar hard enough.

But we'll do what you want, Woger. From now on, we'll be sure to refer to you as a "laughing stock" with the proper spacing carefully observed.

It was the "liberal media" that clued FEMA director Michael Brown about the 5,000 (20,000 - estimates vary) people abandoned in the Convention Center without food & water for several days. He told Night Line's Ted Koppel he wasn't aware of them. Said he would respond immediately. Help arrived two days later.

The new media is doing its job. that's where you get your information. If you don't like it, don't read/watch it.

It is interesting, however, that as SW continues to decline (although you will find those who cite sales of cheap crappy Eton/Grundig radios as proof that it is doing very well), in the recent New Orleans crisis, some of the best reporting can be found coming from BBC
and Deutsche Welle (inlcuding BBC reading emails from people in the Gulf region).

It is interesting, isn't it? It's not so surprising, though.
Shortwave's greatest strength is that it's marginal. It's not a commercially viable medium in the way that FM or broadcast AM is.
Consequently, all the mindless crap that sells well finds its home elsewhere. What's left for shortwave is variable, unpredictable, sometimes plain weird and often fascinating. Shortwave's 'death' is precisely what keeps it going.

I have an excellent performing R-1000 with the following modifications:

1. AM filters are 9 kHz (wide) and 5.5 kHz (AM narrow)
2. The LW input bandpass filter has been modified to allow reception down to 100 kHz.
3. The attenuator switch is in 10db steps for shortwave (still 20 db for MW/LW)
4. The AGC is not slowed down in the AM mode as originally designed.
5. The tone control has extended low end (bass) range.
6. A small 20 uH inductor has been placed internally from the MW/LW antenna input to the coax input so you do not have to switch antenna inputs when changing from SW to MW/LW (the rear switch still has to be changed to the proper position, however).
7. An input jack is available for 12Vdc in on the rear panel.

The unit is very sensitive and calibration is excellent with USB/LSB being exactly 1.5kHz above or below center frequency. The only drawbacks are a few minor nicks and scratches on the cover and front panel edges and the large handle is missing. All lamps, functions, switches, etc. work fine and the radio is an excellent and stable performer.

I'm asking $190 shipped in US. This will not be put on Ebay!

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him.

Cousin of televangelist Jimmy Swaggart. Twice, he has overlapped his marriages. The 1957 marriage to his very young cousin was particularly troublesome in England, where they don't take kindly to that sort of thing as they do in the South. He was booed offstage and cut the tour short.

29 Sep 1935 Jerry Lee Lewis born, Turtle Lake, Calhoun Plantation,

Then there are the ones who stopped "looting" at Walmart, then took the place over as a "command post". Looting under color of law enforcement. Donuts were seen running around in a panic, screaming for their lives as the monstrous pieholes attacked.

WHAT THE MAYOR DID NOT DO - SEND IN THE CITY's PUBLIC BUSES [.]
I am still wonder why the Mayor of the City of New Orleans did not send the Public Transportaion System Buses and the Public School Buses that were all under his control within the City into the Low Lands of the City of New Orleans to get the People to High Ground.
One Bus Full of People, Ten Buses Full of People, or Several Hundreds of Buses Full of People; could have saved many lives just by the Mayor exercising his Emergency Powers as Mayor of the City of New Orleans. The Mayor was there on the ground and he knew best what was happening and what needed to be done. More than the Governor and much more then the President.

I can't speak for the mayor of New Orleans, nor for the local school district there.. but it's been my experience for several decades that most school busses (especially in larger cities) have been contracted from private companies, thus saving the school districts the costs of maintaining the bus fleet and of buying the actual busses.

If this is the case, then the school bus fleet would not be under the control of the mayor or even the school district, and the contractor would be under no obligation (other than a moral obligation, which holds no power for most businesses) to allow use of the busses for the evacuation.

My -W-21 (at the current exchange rate) is that they should have used the busses... but again, I'm not the one who was in charge of them.

I believe there was something early on that the Mayor could have done which would allow him to order the commandeering of 'any' vehicle for emergency use.

I don't recall the exact terminology, but it was mentioned on the radio early on in the crises, perhaps even the day or two before Katrina hit.

Bottom line here is that the Mayor of NO is a bumbling fool, and the authorities in Louisiana are not much better. It was their responsibility to make sure that steps were taken prior to any Federal involvement.

Well Mr. Plimmer...New Orleans could swallow the size and infrastructure of any city in South Afirca (ever been to New Orleans or the states - qualified opinion, eh???) Second, the utilities alone draw any three of your cities capabilities. Third, you do not live on a delta or a massive river like the Old Muddy (Mississippi)....or at sea level or slightly below.....

Fourth.... SHAME ON YOUR IGNORANCE OF AMERICAN POLITICS...you have a nice little quagmire of socialism...we are a Republic (not a democracy, but neither are you)..and our syayes are sovereign (the city of New Orleans and the State of Louisiana dictate what and when and where these bad things happened...not the federal government or Mr. Bush).

Fifth, and most important of all...more whites were devastated and flooded and injured than the blacks....did they loot televisions because they were hungry???? The shame belongs to the people of New Orleans and Louisiana....freedom means good and bad coexist....once the White House was mobilized at the request of the female governor of Louisiana and the black mayor of New Orleans, shit happened fast.

FReedom is more important to Americans than security....Marshall Law shouls have been declared by the govenor of Louisiana...it is not Mr. Bush's right or duty under the Constitution of the United States of America....and those black caucus leaders of the House and Senate were full of hot air....their ass never served a day in the military, nor went to the disaster areas....the sahme is on the black citizens of New Orleans, and the leadership there...not the USA or Mr. Bush.

Look at the blacks and whites and all colors in between in Alabama and Mississipi...they had major problems, but the difference is that all people in these "Heart of Dixie" states work for a living, and not beg from social assistance programs for 5 generations of their family.

SHAME ON YOU PEOPLES OF NEW ORLEANS FOR NOT PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE DESPITE WARNINGS FROM THE ENGINEERS AND OTHER POLITICAL FIGURES....you can spend money on welfare and stadiums, but on common sense necessities for your city, you failed to think and now work together.

Perhaps God did all a favor by showing the true nature of the "poor" denizens of that once great city....wonder when they US government offer jobs to rebuild the city, if those lazy, immoral, and undisciplined looters and slackers will sign up......probably not.

We the people of the United States of America owe these disgraceful losers NOTHING...we owe their children a chance to be what ever they desire, but if they desire to be as shiftless and criminal as their parents, then whose problem is it. My solution is to send the National Guard and military in there, disarm everyone, and if they shoot, kill them all. Time for the gangs to be removed or killed...if they were working, they would not have time for such mischief...my friend entered his house only to find a gang in their who beat him nearly to death...POOR BLACKs MY ASS...it is time to quit kissing up to the "...I was a slave.." tune, and put them to work, or out to sea...to many other people, especially in Inida and the Middle East would gladly trade places with these UN-AMERICANS. So be it....we have poured over 6 trillion a year into a worthless pit ofwelfare with no return but what you see on television...enough is enough.......

And by the way, the expanse and volume of water prohibited any ground transport from reaching those people...Naval Auxiliary Field New Orleans was nearly devastataed even for small helicopter operations let alone the heavy H-53's in Cherry Point, NC, Norfolk, VA, or North Island.....so unless you South African heroes could swim in, or have a vessel that could travel in that rubble ridden waters and carry enough supplies or people beyond its crew, the reasoning and logic behind your argument was made in pure ignorance of military or civil logistics and capabilities.

I served 26 years from enlisted through officer in the US Navy...talk to me about disasters and evacuations...we have been all over the world, and in some terrible places between civil war, typhoons, and even cannibalism (Liberia)....experience is the better judge of this disaster than some liberal CNN news network (screw Ted Turner...super democrat once married to a seditious woman, Jane Fonda), or some amateur passing judgement on a country that is measured by the jealousy and misunderstanding of other foreign nationals.....I am close to your country, and my best friend is from South Africa...let me tell all of you what Mr. Plimmer does not....Brian, and his family of four are leaving there for future citizenship in Australia...he has a nice and safe job waiting for his technical skills in New Zealand.....his prediction is for an eventual civil war in South Africa...do a little research and you will discover what he already knows and has experienced beyond the Aids problems.......

We have our micro-problem in New Orleans...Mr. Plimmer better wake up and smell the coffee in your own country...and pray that I do not start a campaign to cut of your nation due to a lack of discipline and moral leadership from our aid....10 billion dollars last year given to combat Aids in Africa...the largest amount of any President, and you criticize Mr. Bush and America ??????

And all you have to do is keep your organs under control.....go complain to your countrymen about your own problems, sir.....see what happens.....and where are you in Afghanistan...Indonesia....YOU TALK THE TALK BUT DO NOT WALK THE TALK !!!!!!

God bless America.....and maybe it is time to disengage from the world, and take care of our own peoples and our real allies...let the rest self-destruct through the greed and barbaric behavior.....Rome did so for a thousand years...maybe we should do likewise, only keep the barbarians outside our blessed world, and protect our hard working people from these inhuman, immoral, and thoughtless nations. If France and the western powers want colonies again, let it be so....we did not foul up the world, and divide it along our biased lines, nor did we sit on our posterior to build a powerful nation...nor do we enslave our people....freedom of choice....and look what the losers, looters, and "I want compensation...I want money now" chose in NEw Orleans.....there is where the blame lies, Mr. Plimmer.

There is something wrong in the system when a judge, any judge, can vary his decisions based on political leanings. The Law should be non partisan and NOT open to interpretations favouring one's chosen Church or Political Party.

The political appointment of Judiciary taints the process, as it's human nature to favour the people who gave you the job.

Yeah,those buses should have been prepositioned (I reckon I am talking after the fact now that it didn't happen) somewhere on higher ground before Katrina hit.But after seeing those buses in the water and that oil slick all around those buses,one spark and they would all be toast.If the engines had taken on water inside the cylinders or the electric systems (ignition systems) had drowned out,those buses wouldn't crank up anyway.You ever try to start a little lawn mower engine before that had too much gas or oil in the engine? d..n thing will rip your arm off!

Prove it. Whether the levees ''initially held'' (which I doubt) most of the city was underwater Monday night and by Tuesday morning everyone knew the flood was was rising.

Bush should have cut short his commemoration photo-op in Coronado, not mugged for the cameras with his guitar of shame, and high-tailed it back to DC. Instead, he went into denial mode, like it would all go away.

Hi there Andrea

Thanks for the pictures and info. They all look cool. Now, DRM is the only thing lacking on the new Eton E1 IMO. I was almost sure the E1 was going to have DRM. But, I think it's much more popular in Europe plus they have more stations to pick up and better reception too then the U.S.

So, the lack of DRM on the E1 is not as big a disappointment to me since I live in Miami and have a Ten Tec 320-D for the few DRM frequencies I can get anyway.

But these radios look nice. I'd love to hear them and play around with em!

Thanks again for the pics and info

And what are the buses worth now,especially sitting in that water and most likely the engines and transmissions and differentials and brakes and wheel bearings and wireing harnesses are probally full of crappy swampy water and the foam padding in the seats? Will they be written off or rebuilt.Would you knowingly buy a vehicle that has been under water before?,I wouldn't.I think those buses are toast anyway.The junk yards in New Orleans and the other flooded areas are going to have a field day with those buses and the other flooded vehicles.

Now calm down R, I only come here to get info on what's up on shortwave.

But I just can't resist stirring up the pot when I see the holier-than-thou right-winger and Bush appologists preaching their talking points like it was their holy duty or something.

As far as the debacle in NO, there's certainly enough blame to go around. I just don't see how you can defend the federal officials in light of the abandonment of all those people, especially when they continue to make excuses and refuse to accept responsibility. Aren't there any real leaders left in this country, Democrat or Republican? The entire world is looking at us, shaking their heads, saying what is going on there?

Who do I hate? Let me mull this one over. Right now it's that fat little fuck on the Dytech commercials.

Maybe he did, I'm still waiting for an authorative time line of what Bush, the Gov, and the mayor did.

IT DOESN"T MATTER.

As Soon as the Nat Weather Service declared a CAT4 storm on or near NO pre-loaded FEMA trucks all over the country are supposed to start the drive to marshalling points at the edge of teh storm area and then romm forward as soom as the storm passes. 90% of the trusks could be

Emergencies & Disasters Preparing America

In the event of a terrorist attack, natural disaster or other large-scale emergency, the Department of Homeland Security will assume primary responsibility on March 1st for ensuring that emergency response professionals are prepared for any situation. This will entail providing a coordinated, comprehensive federal response to any large-scale crisis and mounting a swift and effective recovery effort. The new Department will also prioritize the important issue of citizen preparedness. Educating America's families on how best to prepare their homes for a disaster and tips for citizens on how to respond in a crisis will be given special attention at DHS.

[5] FEMA MASH Hospital delayed

http://apnews.myway.com/article/20050904/D8CDLUJO0.html

[6] http://www.dhs.gov/interweb/assetlibrary/NRPbaseplan.pdf

The National Response Plan was accepted and implemented by Bush Administration in December 2004. According to the PREFACE, President Bush, "directed the development of a new National Response Plan (NRP) to align Federal coordination structures, capabilities, and resources into a unified, all discipline, and all-hazards approach to domestic incident management. . . .The end result is vastly improved coordination among Federal, State, local, and tribal organizations to help save lives and protect America's communities by increasing the speed, effectiveness, and efficiency of incident management."

Efforts by Chertoff and other Administration spinmeisters to pin the blame on the delayed response on State and local authorities does not hold water. Although the NRP recognizes that State and local authorities have a responsibility to ask for help, the NRP correctly provides a provision to take proactive steps to deal with a threat. On page 43 of the NRP the section is titled, "Proactive Federal Response to Catastrophic Events" (which I have copied and pasted below:

The NRP establishes policies, procedures, and mechanisms for proactive Federal response to catastrophic events. A catastrophic event is any natural or manmade incident, including terrorism, that results in extraordinary levels of mass casualties, damage, or disruption severely affecting the population, infrastructure, environment, economy, national morale, and/or government functions. A catastrophic event could result in sustained national impacts over a prolonged period of time; almost immediately exceeds resources normally available to State, local, tribal, and private-sector authorities in the impacted area; and significantly interrupts governmental operations and emergency services to such an extent that national security could be threatened. All catastrophic events are Incidents of National Significance.

Implementation of Proactive Federal Response Protocols

Protocols for proactive Federal response are most likely to be implemented for catastrophic events involving chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, or high-yield explosive weapons of mass destruction, or large magnitude earthquakes or other natural or technological disasters in or near heavily populated areas.

Guiding Principles for Proactive Federal Response Guiding principles for proactive Federal response include the following: Y The primary mission is to save lives; protect critical infrastructure, property, and the environment; contain the event; and preserve national security. Y Standard procedures regarding requests for assistance may be expedited or, under extreme circumstances, suspended in the immediate aftermath of an event of catastrophic magnitude. Y Identified Federal response resources will deploy and begin necessary operations as required to commence life-safety activities. Y Notification and full coordination with States will occur, but the coordination process must not delay or impede the rapid deployment and use of critical resources. States are urged to notify and coordinate with local governments regarding a proactive Federal response. Y State and local governments are encouraged to conduct collaborative planning with the Federal Government as a part of "steady-state" preparedness for catastrophic incidents.

Implementation Mechanisms for Proactive Federal Response to Catastrophic Events The NRP Catastrophic Incident Supplement (described in the Catastrophic Incident Annex) addresses resource and procedural implications of catastrophic events to ensure the rapid and efficient delivery of resources and assets, including special teams, equipment, and supplies that provide critical lifesaving support and incident containment capabilities. These assets may be so specialized or costly that they are either not available or are in insufficient quantities in most localities.

The procedures outlined in the NRP Catastrophic Incident Supplement are based on the following: Y The pre-identification of Federal assets and capabilities; Y The strategic location of pre-identified assets for rapid deployment; and Y The use of pre-scripted mission assignments for Stafford Act declarations, or individual agency authority and funding, to expedite deployment upon notification by DHS (in accordance with procedures established in the NRP Catastrophic Incident Supplement) of a potential catastrophic event.

Agencies responsible for these assets will keep DHS apprised, through the HSOC, of their ongoing status and location until the JFO is established. Upon arrival at the scene, Federal assets will coordinate with the Unified Command, the SFLEO, and the JFO (or its forward elements) when established. Demobilization processes, including full coordination with the JFO Coordination Group, are initiated either when the mission is completed or when it is determined the magnitude of the event does not warrant continued use of the asset.

While the Bush Administration is to be commended for coming up with a plan for dealing with terrorism and large scale disasters, it must be condemned for its abject failure to implement the NRP. And, specific heads must roll starting with Michael Chertoff and the head of FEMA.

True, but the Fed is the one government entity that has the money, the manpower, the vehicles and hardware to get relief to the victims. and a federal emergency was declared the day before Katrina hit. IMHO, someone on the federal level should have taken control immediately. Speeches and photo ops don't help the victims. FEMA turning away supply truck doesn't help the victims. Blaming the victims doesn't help the victims.

I don't get your point. and I don't know who directed them to go there, but someone in authority told them to seek refuge at the Convention Center and they would be rescued. Never happened until two days after Ted Koppel bitch-slapped Michael Brown on National TV. Once FEMA took over in NO it was their responsibility to evacuate the victims. FEMA looks really bad, and Michael Brown's whining about the media only reporting the bad news makes him look even sorrier. There are bodies floating in the streets, girls being raped in public, anarchy, old folks being abandoned, and only the federal government has the resources to take control. Too bad they don't have the will. The media would be derelict if they didn't report this.

I've seen a lot of positive stories too, mostly about the courage of the survivors, or the private citizens and groups that are making sacrifices and offering what aid they can. The reporting is excellent.

Blaming the media won't work RHF, try a different ploy.

The desperate help his people needed was not under his power to control. He needed more the NOPD and it's few hospitals and workers. Most of NO was EMPTY. Most of the owrkers who could have helped were long gone.

He COULD NOT order the massive emergency help the city needed with his authority. He needed massive supplies of food and water dropped into streets flooded over your head.

He need massive law enforcement since 1/2 the NO police force *worked off their jobs. They did this to save themselves and their families since they saw what was in their capabilities to do was useless and poinless. Plus they had NO FOOD OR WATER to keep them alive.

So, what you're telling me is that the Mayor and Governor of NO could have handled this disaster all on their own with no FEDERAL HELP huh?

Yes you're right. This was a case for local authorities only. Why don't you TELL US and the Mayor and the Governor of LA what they should and could have done without federal aid to "help" the citizens of LA??

Please I'm waiting on your answer. So is the Mayor and the Governor of LA so next time they can do something. I mean if this was terrorist attack, your leader would be reading the sequel to "Farm Animals and How To Milk Horses".

With the creation of "Homeland Security" everyone feels so so secure since it only took 5 days to bring food, water and medical supplies to a city in the United States. I mean only 5 days. How long can people with rushing flooding water swirling over the heads with no help or electricity survive without food, water and their medicines?

Many died due to help taking so long to get to them. Many unnecessary dead bodies are floating in those waters that could have been avioded had help come in 1 day, 2 the most.

Like they have said even on the conservative Repub channel Fox.
If those were 500 blonde, blued eyes models stranded in NO, help would have been there in less then 1 day and everyone here knows that;s the truth.

I and those that said that are wrong too eh RHF?

And to those that replied negatively to my post. Notice how they offer nothing *intellectual to say. That's because they either have a hangover, their bellies got in the way of the keyboard, or they enjoy trying to upset me. That's also because they know I'm smarter, faster and better then them.

But it won't work since I know they lead the lives of dead air and depression. My post was the peak of their day. Now be good boys and go have a beer and don't forget to put on your Diego Garcia radio caps and dream of being a normal person who doesn't live off society like a leeching blood sucker. Now that's a real republican! Yeah!

Too freaken funny....really.

An antenna switch would be a good choice.

Then again, most any antenna will work on your 800. A length of wire will get you there.

If you're really looking for a commercial antenna, hit the Universal-Radio website. They've got a bunch of them.

I have an Eavesdropper, a trapped dipole, up for my rigs (distributed between them with an active multicoupler.) I've also got an A-D DX Ultra. VERY large...REALLY sensitive.

And as an experiment, I put up an RF Systems MTA. Also very quiet, and virtually impervious to man-made noise, but not as sensitive.
Usually requires the built in preamp on the receiver.

Hi Greg

a .22 is a good start and better then nothing. If aimed properly, it can do the job. And ONLY if shot at first like defending your property or people getting out of control in a panic. Yes, they label and blame us for their brains of a donkey leader. The thing is you can't talk to these people. They are just too shallow to understand or comprehend.

If bush offered to shake my hand on national T.V. or give me an order to do something, I would NOT shake his hand and refuse any order he gave me.

but WHY would any woman turn down a Diego Garcia Cap wearing "man" who sounds like a "Mini me" kid?? Those who have heard him on Ham stations have stated so themselves. So with all he has going for him including the Cap, how can they resist him? Must be in good shape too.

Some people,especially elderly people,have vision problems,they have a hard time reading the little words onscreen.For those people,some people type in Capital letters so they can see the words onscreen easier.In that case,it isn't really shouting onscreen.

1186. WWL on SW

Newsgroup: rec.radio.shortwave

 U S A. WWL is on 5835, 250 kW from South Carolina. Heard with good sig here in Gilbert, AZ (Kevin Redding, AZ, 0306 UT Sept 5, WTFDA via DXLD)

That would be WHRI; checked at 0335 and it is not // 870, but I think it was running about a minute behind, as I heard a URBONO ID go by. 5835 is scheduled 0300-0500, then switching to 7315. [Later:] 5835 still going at 0545, contrary to the posted WHRI schedule, so what else is new? Timed the delay behind 870 and it is about 70 seconds. Internet feed? 73, (Glenn Hauser, dxldyg via DX LISTENING DIGEST)

WWL website http://www.wwl.com/Article.asp?id=114239 gives this schedule (local times) [CDT = UT -5]:

Monday
10PM-Midnight on 5.835 MHz 0300-0500 5835

Tuesday-Friday
Midnight-6AM on 5.835 MHz 0500-1100 5835
7AM-9AM on 11.785 MHz 1200-1400 11785
9AM-3PM on 15.285 MHz 1400-2000 15285
5PM-7PM on 9.840 MHz 2200-2400 9840

Saturday
Midnight-7AM on 5.835 MHz 0500-1200 5835
9AM-Noon on 15.285 MHz 1400-1700 15285
6PM-7PM on 9.840 MHz 2300-2400 9840
7PM-9PM on 5.835 MHz 0000-0200 5835
10PM-7A on 5.835 MHz 0300-1200 5835

Sunday

Midnight-7AM on 5.835 MHz 0500-1200 5835
9AM-Noon on 15.285 MHz 1400-1700 15285
1PM-5PM on 15.285 MHz 1800-2200 15285
(via Andy Sennitt, dxldyg via DX LISTENING DIGEST) gh added UT, kHz

I just heard URBONO switching from 11785 to 15285 at 1400 (without any announcement so listeners would know!). This is Monday, not Tuesday.
On weekdays 15285 is normally in use instead of 11785, a weekend-only frequency at 1200-1400. Fortunately today, the usual Chicom jamming on 15285 is not a factor.

For the first time in its history, LeSea is performing a public service. The fact that they are able to blow away most or all of their usual programming for this on at least one transmitter speaks volumes for the value of their usual programming.

BTW, they are running what are called ``commercials`` now, but they all seem to be related to the emergency situation, such as insurance companies, etc.

This also puts CBS Radio news on the hour on SW, and WHR must have been pulling their hair out when the reviled Pres. Clinton was on for a few minutes around 1415.

But who knows about it in the general public? I have heard NO mentions of the SW relay on the URBONO feed.

WHRI IDs are stuck in abruptly every half hour, interrupting programming. Fortunately, they have saved us from having to listen to the entire Onward Christian Soldiers each time, but they are still longer than necessary.

This transmitter is now developing a squeal, but it is slight so far.
73, (Glenn Hauser, OK, DX LISTENING DIGEST)

15285 just went off at 1500 UT after being on only one hour, contrary to its all-day schedule on the WWL site! Then I checked the WHR site which of course has not been updated to include this new service, but it does show this for Angel 1 at 1500 UT weekdays:

1500 Mo-Fr 1100 AM 0200 PM Monday - Friday Off the air until 1800 UTC today - - 15.285 Mhz

So they are following their usual 3-hour break anyway! It looks like most of the programming replaced is LeSea music and preaching, so that can be done at no financial loss. Presumably the gaps in the posted URBONO relay schedule are times when they do have paid programming to keep running.

Now I wonder if this is being done as a sheer public service, or is URBONO buying the time, even if their anchor doesn`t know about it?

At 1456 a caller from Houston asked if he could hear WWL on SW, but the host did not know the answer, referred him to online streaming! (Glenn Hauser, DX LISTENING DIGEST)

WWL on shortwave ï¿½ WHY? Regarding the new WWL relay from "WHRI" --- The real question is "why?" Anyone who has access to a working radio in SE Louisiana, coastal Mississippi and Mobile can hear WWL crystal clear on 870, not to mention the plethora of Clear Channel, Entercom, etc. stations on AM and FM now simulcasting. I can hear them (WWL) here in Clearwater, daytime. And they are now streaming beautifully on the Internet, for anyone who might actually have access in the affected area, and for all of us outside the zone. Who needs (or would tune, or have the ability to tune) to SW? How foolish to waste kW $$$ on such, vs. WHRI (WHSB?)'s LeSEA parent donating the wattage-per-hour cost to where it's needed most (Terry L. Krueger, FL, Sept 5, DX LISTENING DIGEST) (Glenn Hauser, DXLD)

We all knew it was a filter problem. You obviously have a defective filter which unfortunately you can't return to the manufacturer.

The topic thread names is "Who is to blame?".
Real simple, the idiots who choose to live BELOW sea level.
The same idiots who lived below sea level protected by a flood wall/levee system designed for a class 3 huricane who stayed put when a CLASS !4! was forecast to come ashore where they lived.

So you support niggers who kill and rape, mug and eat corpses do you, and shoot at people who are there to try to bring sanity and rescue to the people of NO.... you sound a very sensible and well balanced person. We would remove these scum from society but its do gooding half whit tits like you that scream for the "rights" of scum like these but would shit a brick if you had to live next to them. As for inbred, were only inbred because of wan$&#65533;rs like you inviting all the worlds scum to live with us..... Enoch Powell said in the late 60's in the UK that the influx of blacks and asians would bring rivers of blood to our streets.... he was branded a screaming rascist of his time but his words are coming true.
I personally dont want to live in a neighbourhood filled with loads of blacks and asians and peurto ricans etc etc... dont i have the right to live with who i want or do i have to live with these people because the likes of you say so....
Every single place in the world where these people congrigate and take over become a "Toilet" of rape,murder,crime and filthy squalour. They hant a clue how to co-exsist in a civilised society so why the F+*k should we put our lives and the lives of our familys at risk because you, and your sort say we have to.... SH*T on you PAL.

While I cannot say where I went or what I did, suffice it to say that I have finally gotten to DO many of the things I have thus far only TALKED about doing. I had a "killer" of a time!!!!

It cost me a bad case of sunburn, an awful lot of bug bites, a few dollars for ammunition and a whole lot of sloshing around in a filthy, dangerous environment!

Let me just say that I personally scored ninety-one (91), confirmed.

There are dozens of others where I know I scored something, but maybe not with the thoroughness I would have liked.

The first one was hard; wondering if I had done the right thing, fearful about how I would explain what I had done to God when my time comes. The second, third and fourth ones happened devestatingly fast. Caught 'em red-handed.
The rest were easy. In fact, it became like a game; "White Law."
But this game was real and there's nothing anyone can do about it. No way to get caught. No way to prove anything. The satisfaction is indescribable!

Pasty faces?? Were all colours in the UK you halfwit. We dont treat any foriegners like shit, we just treat the shit ones like shit. The Chinese intrigated with us fine because unlike inbred niggers they are civilised and made an effort. They didnt come to the UK with a fucking huge chip on their shoulders...
If it was "for the likes of me" these scumsuckers wouldnt be in the UK so how would it blow up in our faces..now go shag your nigger wife and get over it.

Predudice is alive in every country in every creed. Please dont blame it as a "White" trait. Everyone who is true to their heart and belief would support their own people before others, whether it be black, white, asian, indian or pink with blue spots. Most people who would disagree with this are basically Liars....

ABC Professional Tree Services guys are on my street cutting up and clearing out those three trees that fell down across the street last Monday.I stepped over there and I told the guy about the big tall pecan tree in my front yard that has that big tall branch/fork on the tree that is trying to pull the tree over onto the front roof of my house.I could see the base of the tree trunk really dancing a jig at ground level last Monday.He said when they get through,he will knock on my front door and talk to me about the tree in my front yard.I have about sixty dollars cash on me,maybe they will nip that tree branch fork down for me.

You usually deride people who do what you just did as "typo pouncers," Woger. I guess you're really desperate, aren't you? (That was a rhetorical question, so don't bother to answer.)

But what is this stuff about Jewish reggae? Are you still hawking the to like Ron's song titled "Measure for Measure." What's your favorite?

Saggytits Lee whined and made more pathetic excuses for his misuse of the word "operate":

> [straw grasping skipped]

You wrote it, Fatass.

Saggytits Lee aka Lloydie Davies steps on his own tiny dick when he tried to correct somebody else's English use first by saying one "operates" a dictionary instead of reading it, then uses "things" instead of "thinks" in <jewish.reggae.rocks@houston-hunks.com>:

"Translation: Woger can't figure out how to operate a dictionary, let alone correct someone else's language.But that's not surprising from someone who things that..."

Saggytits Lee manages to fumble again when he tried to backpedal on his improper use of words by once again mangling the sentence in reply <gweasy.long.hair@houston-hunks.com>:
"The word "operate" can be a synonym "use" in certain contexts"

That incomplete sentence is priceless as an archive.

>What <bitchslap>

What about the fact that houseofnames.com pegs YOU as being of Jewish and Welsh origin Davies, while Wiseman is one from the British Isles and Germany?

You'll just make more pathetic excuses and try to change the subject, won't you, Jewboy Davies?

You just stood there screaming
Fearing no one was listening to you
They say the empty can rattles the most
The sound of your voice must soothe you Hearing only what you want to hear
And knowing only what youï¿½ve heard
You youï¿½re smothered in tragedy
Youï¿½re out to save the world

Misery
You insist that the weight of the world
Should be on your shoulders
Misery
Thereï¿½s much more to life than what you see
My friend of misery

You still stood there screaming
No one caring about these words you tell
My friend before your voice is gone
One manï¿½s fun is anotherï¿½s hell
These times are sent to try menï¿½s souls
But somethingï¿½s wrong with all you see
You youï¿½ll take it on all yourself

Remember, misery loves company

Misery
You insist that the weight of the world
Should be on your shoulders
Misery
Thereï¿½s much more to life than what you see
My friend of misery

You just stood there creaming
My friend of misery

He should have at least acted like he was capable of helping, instead

You don't read very well do you. Yeah, we're mad they didn't do anything for 5 +days and in my previous post I said: "They do nothing anyway." That means they haven't done anything for a long time.

> Sheesh... you stupid bastards are even dumber than we first thought.

Why don't you take a deep breath and then recite to me what FEMA did for 5+ days that made a difference.

Then recite to me why it took 5+ days.

The tell me how we are supposed to somehow feel confident that when the next terrorist attacks happens that we will be taken care of.

Well, It isn't just about NO. Here is a report on neesler AFB in Miss.
Notice they didn't get out 'til 9/1.

Anyone familiar with La, Miss. etc knows the states are heavly forested.
Especially the northern parts. I heard a news crew say it took them 19 hours to get to the Miss. coast from Atlanta. They had to cut their way through the downed trees across the interstate with a chainsaw to get through.

Latest word we got from Keesler (1 Sep 05) is that though the base is pretty messed up there was NO loss of life. The commissary and BX are toast as is most of family housing and most of the rest of the base.
The folks that rode out the storm at Keesler just came out and had their first hot meal since it hit...6000 meals on the first go around. They currently have no phone, land-line or cell, and their runway is the only one open in the area...only daylight, VFR flights allowed.. Bout it, though we get a couple of updates per day.

And yes, there are mumblings about doing to Keesler what was done to Homestead, but only mumblings, not even rumors.

Wow! You can cut and paste....Like I said, Jet A/C don't use gas and it's rated in lbs not gallons.

This is good information Ace thanks for posting it. I'm not able to hear WWL due to a local broadcaster on the same frequency and on a similar heading so even if a had a small loop to null out the local I still might not be able to hear them. 15,285 MHz is a really excellent signal today and I'm also listening to KGO on 600 KHz where they are interviewing the disaster victims.

I'm not interested in the Internet streaming audio but I have been reading plenty about this disaster on the Internet.

I've just started listening to SW again after almost two decades away from it and find it as honest as it was the day I last listened. I love listening to the same news stories from all corners of the globe, it helps to build a more realistic picture of the real event without all the spin.

Tell me, If oil production does hit a peak next year and energy demand exceeds supply from then on, will the internet or radio survive? Does anyone see where I'm coming from?

The tales of SW's slow death is very similar to VMS. Let's ask the NT guys where SW will be in twenty years time!

I'm a little slow on the uptake there. You should get nothing on Australia since they go off the air at 00:00 UTC. They are on 21,740 MHz 22:00 to 24:00 UTC. It is usual that they are weaker around 22:00 and get stronger toward 24:00 UTC. Yesterday they very poor throughout that broadcast segment but as usual they were better toward sign off.

This is basic radio technology that keeps on working and does not depend on special IC's and digital coding techniques with millions of radio receivers world wide.

Holland has 2 major cities below sea level. Amsterdam and Roterdam.
One big difference is that Holland doesn't have huricanes.
Another is the moral and work ethics of the people.
Talked today via Email to a Dutch SWLer who lurks in this group and he pointed out that while the Dutch government has it's share of idiots, unlike LA general and New Orleans in specific, thier politicians are pretty clean (cooruption wise) and also rather competent.
The Dutch have evacuation plans and FORCE residents to participate.
When a breach occurs the Dutch will likely do pretty well. They have lived below the sea for ~400 years and have learned the hard way that you have to think things out, make effective plans and execute them when something bad happens. IF NEw Orleans was 1/10 as orgnaised as teh Dtuch, there would have been no problem.

As to lving below a damn, yea that is pretty damn dumb. The Mulholland impoundment failed in Californica and it killed several hundred back in the 1930's or so. US damndsby and by are well built and fairly safe.
But last spring, in Californica again, a city had to be evaucuated because heavy rainfall had causeed the empoundment to rise threatening to crest the damn. They got the water edown, wiht no major trouble, but it was scarey for a while.

As to cities on the moon,or other hostile planets, I doubt that will happen for a while. With todays technology only the truely dedicated and brave will live in a "space statio" or even fly on the shuttle. OK strike brave because if NASA called me tonight and asked me to take a SW receiver up in the shultte and study ionosphreic RF leakage.

Many in this group doubt your wisdom, but tell us, do you live BELOW sea level? With 800K other poeple? In an area with too few roads in and out? Do you have enough water and food on hand to get by the few days needed unti outside help could arrive?

As to Venis (did you really mean Venice?), I have been there and yea they are idiots. To live in a poop filled city,the order is there, that is sinking every year, only the really stupid live there. The only thing it has is some wonderfull art.

Mexico City risks? Other then being the capital of a hostile nation, run by poeple that make New Orleans look like a honor brain trust.
And the corruption makes New Orleans cops look like BoyScouts.
My friends who were raised there all speak of how vile and ugly Mexico City is. So for an Anglo to live there, yea would be pretty damn stupid.

Sunday - 1PM-5PM on 15.285 MHz?

The times might be eastern time but even then it would still be off as they went back to talking religion at 20:00 UTC or 1:00 PM pacific my Guess I'll try again later. Back to coverage on KOGO 600 KHz.

The Dutch are Masters at reclaiming land from the Sea.They get some pretty bad weather over there too.I think fed govt should ask some Dutch Engineers to come to America (New Orleans and the Wetlands around there) and study the situation.We could lean a lot from them.

My understanding is that their levee system is much large in scope, and that the districts surrounded by levees are smaller, thus limiting losses.

So what I have been doing since you can not resist answering the Trolling idiots is to kill file them in the reference header. That way I don't have to Plonk you entirely. Does not always work because sometimes you generate a new post in the thread but it works most of the time. Still not sure if you are worth the trouble though.

However, you should consider that responding to them keeps them around and conditions in the news group prevent many normal people from posting here since the majority of posts are off topic, flaming, racist and disgusting. Most people will not subject themselves to this kind of language. You should consider that most people would expect some of this in a public forum but not to the current level of being the majority of posts, which they have been for weeks now.

They are still victims. If a woman gets raped there is a mentality that she asked for it because she dressed too sexually, or was in the park jogging at night, or she flirted with a guy and he took it as a go signal. Would you say that a woman had the choice of wearing something less sexual and therefore it's her choice to get raped? Or that she shouldn't flirt because she then made a choice to get raped?

If I walk outside and get mugged, is it my fault? I made a choice to leave my apartment so it's my fault. I made a choice to live in a not so nice area so it's my fault.

The full story is out there for anyone who wants to find it. My opinions are based on interviews from the people involved - the victims and the local officials. It's all on public record. Victims at the convention center said they were told to go to the convention center and they would be rescued.
Then no one was allowed out and no one was allowed in (except media) for several days. Food and water was dropped willy-nilly from a bridge.
Emergency vehicles passed by and wouldn't stop. Again, FEMA dir. Michael Brown said he didn't know about this situation - I just saw (again) the video of him giving that statement 10 minutes ago on MSNBC. The former FEMA director (I don't know his name) said the fact that prior to his political appointment, Brown had no emergency management experience and that might have contributed to the enormous problems on the ground in NO.

Again, I'll take your word for it. That was then. My concern is, once martial law was declared and the Nat'l Guard federalized, and FEMA took over, why the enormous SNAFU? Why the lethargic attitude coming from POTUS, and the silly, defensive excuses from Michael Brown and Homeland Security Chief Michael Chertoff? These folks are good at organizing photo ops and speeches. They're telling the victims "We're with you" and "Just be patient".

Bush is doing what he does best - making speeches, and it ain't pretty.
FEMA is like a bull in a china shop and their performance in NO is much worse than their embarrassing performance in Florida following last year's hurricanes.

This is getting pretty boring jd. It's obvious you are not so concerned about the victims of Katrina as you are about covering for the incompetent POTUS and his lackeys. They are suffering a public relations meltdown.
Dubbya's legacy, which was shaky before Katrina, is in the toilet now. I don't think you can save him.

Thing is though,Lousiana is losing many thousands of acres of land (wetlands in South Louisiana,do some research on that,and the Mississippi Gulf Coast is man made) every year due to natural erosion.No telling how much of that land Katrina wiped out.

Yep,I mispelled Venice.I remember seeing a Movietone news reel in the Paramount theater that used to be on Capitol Street here in Jackson.It was back in the 1950's when I sat there and I watched that Movietone news reel with my little hazel blue/green eyeballs (our eyeballs are the same size eyeballs we were born with) and the Movietone news reel was about the Nederlands (Is your Dutch buddy lurking now?) Queen Wilhemina <--< (spelling) Now,that auld broad really was "crackers".She would make klintoon (if she were alive today) look like a Saint by comparison.

You are still wrong dufuss.....The point is it does not matter where he is at in the country he still has the ability of command and control. He can sit on the tarmac at any airport and he might as well be in Washington. Give it a rest! You are evidently too stupid to How does one force them to participate? Hold a gun to their head?

My understanding is that their levee system is much large in scope, and that the districts surrounded by levees are smaller, thus limiting losses.

?Fines if they don't? I will try to find out. Perhaps if you don't and you get stuck you ar left to fend for yourself.

And yes, that is the POINT.
IF you are going ot lvie below see level, you had really, really, and I mean really think it through. New Orleans just happened. All too little planning. The Dutch knew they were recovering land from the sea.
New Orleans just kind of slipped beneth sea level with way too little attention. Yes Holland has "thrown" a lot more money, but it was a cost benifit thing. They got many benifits, IE 40% of their land, from the sea. New Orleans was one large aparty barge or whore house.
Not too valuable and no one rally thought about ht esex workers. Bad anology, but I will stand by it. New Orleans was a transhippment, ports, rail nexus, pipes etc and NO ONE thoght of the city it self having any real value.
And it didn't

History?
In the first 4 years it was DESTROYED 3 times by hurincanes. Then for 200+ years yellow fevor and Typhoid stalked the land killing, by one reffernce, 40K a year. I want to research that figure, but one of my many history books give 40K.

So please forgive me if I no longer bleed purple over this event.
Too much whining and bithcing by the truely lame about events thier action, or inaction casued.

Floods are a LOCAL issue. In Dayton OH the 1932(or 33?) floods where bad. The locals built their own system of levees and redirected the Little Miami river. It costs each perowsn(or household) about a $1 per year.

If they wanted higher levees then THEY should have built them.
If they needed more pumps, with a better backup power system, then THEY should have build them. Because they did nothing they got the screwing they deserved and many died. I am willing to bet that when this is all over more will have died as the direct result of violence from other locals then from the waters.

In any event I have stopped feelling much sympathy for New Orleans, or the many who suffered and died. They took no action and reaped what they sowed, or not so to speak.

It is like people out west who want to live amoung the pretty trees. And when forrest fire comes along they act so damned shocked. Call me a cynic but the government helping by rebuilding will only insure this happens again. Until FEMA stopped rebuilding homes along the Mississippi and other river, flood planes people just kept getting washed out year after year.

Move the damn city or live with the certaintity that you will get nailed by the next cat 4 or 5 huricane that comes along.

Sad, yea but natures a bitch.
Way different from a woman getting raped. Nature doesn't rape anyone. It takes the action of a man, OK I guess a few women have raped but damned few, to rape. Tehwoman may have been foolsih, stupid or just ignorant of the danger, but the preditor still decided to rape and foolwed throguh on that action.

Big difference between rape and getting washed away, burried in snow or stranded on a mountain. We try and imprison, or execute rapists.
We have to bow, or at least pay attention to mother nature.

Live below sea level, stay in a storm and drown.
Very simple. You can save yourself by LEAVING.

Katrina and rape could only be confussed in a liberal's mind.

My Dad who was a radio man in WWII enjoys his shortwave at bedside.
The following are criteria-
LARGE dials and easier to read, not too complicated
No need for FM quality or super sound system
Had a radio shack I bought years ago and it worked OK until broke High quality for the money
Price point up to 300 dollars?

I do not know a lot about these radios so any suggestions for radios would be greatly appreciated!!!
Thanks

Yeah, fuck those people. Too bad they didn't all die, then we wouldn't have to rebuild. Maybe we could just force them back there and drown them for good. They were poor people, no one would notice.

Exactly. It's time the Federal government got rid of this FEMA thing. It doesn't work and costs us a lot of money. Next time they should just drop shotguns to the "suvivors" and let them shoot it out until they kill everyone.

Yeah! And if they get attacked by a nuclear warhead from China, it's their own damn fault they didn't install a anti-ballistic missile system to save themselves!

What was the name of that Hurricane about a year or so ago and I think the name of the City in Florida is Port Charlotte that the Hurricane tore up? Not long after that I saw a tomsblogspot (something like that) and some people were blogging/talking away in there and there was something about many of the dead bodies didn't get reported and some fema guys were riding around in that area with a sort of a look on those fema guys faces as if,If you even look at us we will ruin your day! And the people who live in that area were wondering where is the help.

Actually, neither one of your examples is about nature, it's about choice.
They chose to ski outside the area or chose to climb the mountain.

It's choice.

The Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium is a fine radio. Not too complicated, pretty darned big, and I bought mine brand new on sale for less than $400.00.

If you're interested, scour the web, and eBay. You might be able to nab it for less than $300.00.

Bush's fault..

He took the money needed to repair the levees anbd spent it on his vanity War in iraq

Bush's fault..

He took the Louisiana National Guard troops and equipment and shipped them to Iraq.

Bush's fault

The National Guard was there 24 hours after Camille devastated the area..
Now all the Louisiana National Guard troops and equipment are in Iraq fighting his Vanity war

Bush's fault

Greg - It was a day may be two and then the Levees began to break.
FWIW - Hurricane Katrina actually tracked East and then North around the City of New Orleans. So the City of New Orleans did not get hit directly by Hurricane Katrina. However, this ended up dumping a lot of Water in to Lake Pontchartrain.
The resulting High Water and Wave Action in the Lake caused the Levees to Fail in at least three major places. Then the real trouble began inside the City of New Orleans with the wide spread Flooding of the City.
NOTE - CCN has a good time line on what happen when and what was done and not done to help in this emergency.
* So Yes the Mayor and Governor both had Time to Assess the situation and React : To Plan for the use of Emergency Services with their Control.
* But both the Mayor and Governor seem to have forgotten about the Poor Black Folks in the City of New Orleans.
* Clearly the Mayor and Governor did NOTHING to Help the most needy of the citizens of New Orleans to get out before it was way to late - - - and people died.
The Mayor was in the City - On the Ground and Did Nothing.
The Governor was in the State - In the Area and Did Nothing.
Both the Mayor and the Governor "Failed-to-Act" and Save Lives while they both waited for the Federal Government to come in and spread some Money Around for Them to Spend Freely.
there is more than enough blame and shame for both the mayor and governor to share ~ RHF

There is a difference between blacks and niggers.
Some notable blacks (those who didn't loot their way through life) :
Richard Pryor
Tina Turner (Ike would fall into the nigger catagory)
Oprah Winfrey (she's an idiot but she worked to get where she is) Dave Chapelle
- Feel free to add your own.
It's the niggers who are looting not the blacks. Not those who chose not to live the stereotyped lifestyle.

First I am sorry for my vitrolic OT posts this weekend. This is not the place to debate appropriate survival strategies. You all deserve an explanation.

For sometime now I have been the target of an ongoing rather vicous email attack. Anytime I offered an opinion on antennas in this group, the yahoo synchdetector, swl antenna, r2000 and a few other groups I have been blitzed. Thursday I was the victum of a Email flood attack. The mail server barfed with the 1023rd email to me. It was a BAD day. I got called on the carpet. The email admin people were most unhappy. I had bailed from all the yahoo groups but Friday my hotmail account was full. I contacted several friends, most are IT gurus. One is a clinical shrink. The shrink helped me write posts that would enrage the cyber stalker. The IT tigger team would backtrack him. At 6:30 we nailed him. I know who he is, where he lives, I know more about him then I realised you could find out so fast on the net. A good investigative service only charged me 100$ for data I thought you needed a court order to obtain.

While I know who, I don't get the "why". The posts that started the attack and resulted in the most email up until Thursday were about antennas, and especially the "Doty" antenna which I think is the best simple wideband HF antenna you can build. Not like I was spouting any hot topic political issue. Each and every mention of an antenna would result in a flood of furrious email. Even if I am wrong and the "doty" antenna is a real POS, it just isn't that big of a deal. I certainly wasn't making money off the concept. My shrink friend tells me I just can;t look inside a really warped mind and hope to understand what drives them or how such actions give any reward. And the damnable thing is that he won. I removed all my posts from the yahoo groups, refrained from posting here and the effected groups, and the attacks continued. We searched and found no posts by this er person in this or any other group. A silent lurker.

Anyway I wanted to let you all know why I was being such a jerk, and I will post a lot less and lurk a lot more. I have learned just how easy it is to torment the living hell out of someone via the net. I think I have said all that needs to about antennas,so it has been, while not fun, certainly very interesting and educational. Remember there are a lot of nuts out there just waiting for someone to fixate upon. When you voice on unpopular or contraversal topics be aware there are some real sickies out there.

Take care

Terry

I think the problem is that there seems to be prevalent poverty and high unemployment. It's not easy to reverse that. It makes me very angry to know that there's people who think it's ok to go on a rampage and hurt your fellow man and the people trying to save you.

Yeah, I can see where you are coming from, no sarcasm intended. I think there's a lot of anger out there and it's easy enough to just get it out on the intrenet with someone who's anonymous.

Finding your the recipient of a e-mail flood is annoying and grating. Take it easy man.

Thanks for the options will check both out...
By the way What about the Palstar R30? I know it is expensive but I like the made in USA part. Will this require an antenna or does it work out of the box?
I would pay for a unit that is high quality and looks easy to use with a big knob and few options...
Would this be money best spent for higher quality listening?

Someone who used to post here had a Palstar and didn't like it because the buttons were rather small for his fat fingers.

You might also look at a used Drake R8.

Thanks,
The Drake does now exceed my price range.
The Eton S350 looks good if it will be easy to operate.
The Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium looks cool and he may enjoy it. I will have to look for deals under 500 bucks though. Would this unit be worth the extra money compared to the Eton? Or would money be better spent on a cheaper radio (Eton)and some sort of antenna option that would not require a lot of logistics to set up?
I would like a nice unit for him w/o wasting $ on options he would never use such as computer interface.
He enjoys listening to the Netherlands/ German/ Spanish stations...

Thanks again for your time

Of course not, what else does he have to do with his time? I think he's still under house-arrest, wearing his mark-of-the-beast radio collar and GPS system, waiting for that other angry father to either prosecute or give up.

No, he impregnated a pair of 16 year olds, and gave them genital warts into the bargain. He's pled guilty to one (lesser) charge but I think the other is still waiting trial. He has to wear a combination radio collar and GPS system on his leg, so the local cops know he hasn't left the trailer house he's bailed out to.

Do a Google search on "brother stair", you'll get a slough of sites by his enemies giving all the details. www.rickross.com has a collection of newspaper articles.

Well I think you've put your finger on the problem without realizing it. Emergency response shouldn't be political. There are people who get paid to do their job in the public sector and when they fuck up, people die. Where do you and JD get the idea that I'm giving the mayor and the gov a pass? I just think it's laughable that you are so supportive of Bush and his lackeys. Is it the white men in suits that so impresses you? The wealth Are you afraid the Democrats will find someone with leadership skills to fill the vacuum in Washington?

I went to Radio Shack today looking for a pocket radio. I came across the Eton E100 Radio for $99.00. It offers am, fm & many SW bands. (No Side band).

After I asked the sales person to bring me one of these radios so that I could read the box, I notice that there was a little tape on the box saying "power supply not included." Yet, when I opened up the box there was a space large enough for a power supply. Hmmm!

So I bought the small radio and the power supply for about $15.00.

After leaving the store, I go to a little park to try out the radio. In the box was a nice little booklet, batteries and ear plugs. The ear plugs were a bit to big for my ears (and I am a large man), but some how I got them on. They looked like a rip off copy of AWAI.

The plastic craftsmanship and buttons of the radio is very impressive looking. After reading the booklet I then turn to 770 am WABC. It came in good. I then go to other stations both weak & strong. Then FM and then SW.

Everything was fine. Finally, I turned back to 770 am to listen for a while as I walked around heading towards the river area. Then all of the sudden, I hear strong interference and can not hear 770 am. I move the antenna around, nothing but interference. I change stations, then bands , reset button, took the batteries out then put them back in, I even walked away from the area, but nothing but interference all over the radio.

Finally I turn the thing off and went to McDonnell. Then I turned the radio back on and everything now was fine.

After I got back home. I tried the radio again. I turn it on to 770 and it came on. But after about 15 minutes the interference came back. And I go through all of those steps or changes that I already mentioned above. I even used the power supply. Nothing.

I then realized that I was near my lamp. So I then take the radio to the other side of the room and I turned it on and it worked until I tuned on my PC. Then the problem started again.

It seems that the radio as nice as it is, it can not tolerate any interference.

So, I may just take it back to Radio Shack and get a refund. Or find a better pocket radio. If not I might exchange it for Grundig S350.

I hope the Grundig S350 is a little better.

For someone who hates communists, it's amazing how easily you try to cash in on insurance claims. Insurance is just another form of communism. It spreads the liability over a large group, so that the individual pays less.

Why don't you just look after your own problems without being a leech on the rest of us? Be a MAN. People like you make my rates go up. You even had the gall to say that there is nothing wrong with your neck that thirty thousand dollars wouldn't fix.

Given all that, I'd say your qualifications for leechdom are very impressive.

I'll say it again, I don't now who told them. What difference does it make.
Wouldn't you expect that when FEMA arrived they might be curious as to what needed to be done. Maybe they could have done some recon, an assessment maybe? Or they could have just turned on the TV and found out what everybody else in America already new - thousands of victims were holed in in the convention Center without any support. Hey, is your dad a FEMA

I don't know if any reasons were given. If "it" were you? You mean, if you were a victim in the Convention Center you would have kept moving? What about the elderly? What about the injured and those in wheelchairs? What about the children?

Yes, that thousands of people were holed up in the convention center waiting for help. It was almost funny, if it weren't so tragic, when he admitted that on Nightline, after everybody else in the US had known about it from watching TV. (Except you I guess.)

It's not about me. I'm safe at home. I just hate to see such unnecessary tragedy. In one of Bushg's dog & pony shows he actually turned to Brown and said "You're doing a great job"! There's already opinion polls out and Brown is not doing well. I'll bet he's outa there when all this is over.

FEMA is a ponderous bureaucracy, like social security, or any federal agency, when you have to deal with them. Some hurricane victims from last year who are eligible for reimbursement from FEMA still haven't gotten the money to rebuild. And many who have are now odered to pay back what they

By human standards. With a national emergency he was pretty slow to cancel didn't visit in person until he started receiving criticism. His first

You might want to run that jive by some of the NOPD's who remain on the job.
Or the families of the two that committed suicide. True, some did resign.
Some are just missing. I'll reserve judgement.

She abandoned him at the age of five. She got tired of being called

Why can't you believe it? The states and feds want their road taxes even more than they want a solution to the fossil fuel problem.

Diesel for off the road tractors, and earth movers is untaxed, and is dyed red to make it obvious if a vehicle has ever used the stuff. (It stains the tank red, and the filters. Truckers get checked for this problem at weigh stations. On this I have first hand experience, as I run farm tractors, and earth moving equipment.

Here is a cite on that:

I like the Moonshine idea better.Back in the 1970's or 1980's,Cadillac experimented with running an engine on powdered coal,coal that was ground up to the consistency of baby powder,they had a vibrator (no puns,please) gadget hooked up to keep the powdered coal moving along to the carburetor.How about putting a same size gear on the camshaft as the same size gear on the crankshaft and removing the generator and hooking up a steam pipe where the carburetor was and useing a boiler and running the vehicle on all of the trees that Katrina knocked down? That would work.Rudolph Diesel nearly got killed (he did eventually mysteriously disappear off a Ship out there in the Atlantic Ocean,I think somebody threw him overboard) when his first Diesel engine blew on on coal.

I have the Grundig Satellit 800. It is an interesting radio. I got it from www.universal-radio.com But I think that the ICOM R75 is better.

Since I live in an apartment, I use a VHF/UHF antenna on the roof & a CB magnet mount atenna all connected to my antenna switch box for AM/SW.
For AIR/FM I use a scanner antenna.

For the Grundig Satellit 800, make sure you get the model with the ball bearings on the dail. You will also need an F to PL259 adapter for air/FM.

Not a perfect radio, but fun to play around with it. And it give you a good radio base feeling. LOL!

I have an old Popular Science magazine around here somewhere that dates back to the 1960's and it has an article about a guy who built his own home made compressed air vehicle.(I think the guy lives in Italy) He used a small pickup truck and mounted some second hand high pressure compressed air scuba tanks for an old high pressure compressed air motor.He installed the tanks in the bed of the pickup truck.He was geiting way over 100 miles from the tanks.

An existing group could be used for all off topic postings. There is an ......alt.radio.shortwave.....group in existence with hardly any traffic at all. We could take all the irregular postings there and leave this group clean.

There are so few postings at that group that this action wouldn't bother anyone. The 'alt' prefix would seem to condone this behaviour. I haven't checked the group charter yet.

That would make Telamon very happy and he may even unplonk me.

780? You mean KKOH out of Reno? They like to call themselves KOH.

Yes they come in well here most of the time. I used to listen to Art Bell on KOH in the car evenings in the back country mountains where the coastal stations would not do as well due to phase distortion causing the worst selective fading I have come across. Sure wish the car radio had sync detection.

Night time AMBCB is terrible most of the time on any of the LA or San Diego coastal stations with out sync detection.

Dale Sommers www.trucknbozo.com in an email to me this evening said he gets his news from reliable sources that he has depended on for years and he said I am listening to one of the most liberal radio stations (WWL 870) in America and although they are still on the air,that doesn't mean they are on top of things.(hang on a sec,let me read what else he said,be right back) he said they are on generator power and they are having to steal from (brb) CNN,MSNBC,Fox, (brb,be right back) and the other networks that they can still receive via satellite.(brb) He says they dont get out very far in the daytime because they are AM,he said he guesses that doesn't have anything to do with the truth (brb) as long as you think you know what's going on.(brb) He said if WWL is trying to cover Governor Blanco's ass,they might wind up being called to task by the FCC at some time in the future.

Hey,I am listening to WWL 870 in New Orleans and he! doesn't think I! know what's going on in New Orleans.

I think the water over there in Ventura,California is much more toxic and polluted that that swampy flood water in New Orleans.Los Angeles is spraying filtered raw sewage water on the park grounds and other ground areas over there and some folks say the ground in New Orleans will be toxic and polluted!,I dont think so! I would like to improve the audio in my shortwave receiver. I would like to find a device that I could plug into the headphone hole in the radio and my headphone to the device.

The type of device I am looking for should have filters and work in SSB. To help cut down on static, radio and noise. And if it has a tone & tuning button that will be good too.

How does this work and what could I use?

The Eton E100 is the same as the Tecsun PL-200. Do a search in this group and you may find some interesting things.

The Eton E10 is the same as the PL-550. You may find it performs a bit better than the E100.

The G4000A or YB-400PE will probably perform better in general than both of these. Also available from Radio Shack.

The S-350 is single conversion super hetrodyne. It is subject to a lot of images. If the original version (not the 350DL) it will drift a lot as well. It does have a substantial ferrite bar, although some say that the 350DL is less sensitive than the 350.

1444. Australian Social Security V US Social Security

I cant understand how Americans can survive without a decent Social Security System
We have a very healthy economy
and a very significant surplus which can sustain the social program.

In the US There are five major categories of benefits paid for through your Social Security taxes: Retirement, Disability, Family benefits, -- Survivors, and Medicare. (SSI benefits, which are not financed by Social Security taxes, In Australia we have Unemployment etc all here

http://www.centrelink.gov.au/internet/internet.nsf/filestores/co029_0507/$file/co029_0507en.pdf

How is the US system different to Australia?

True a social security system should provide food, clothing, shelter and basic health care; but it should not be providing cigarettes, alcohol, illicit drugs, designer label clothing, or elective surgery (for cosmetic reasons alone). It should also only be provide whilst people are UNABLE for reasons beyond themselves to care for themselves.

The problems today are that many feel that social security should provide all the comforts of society as well as the neccessities and that it should be available when they choose not to care for themselves. That is where the current systemi s at fault and where most people complain about the bludgers.

In my community we have a number of people who are always whinging about not being able to get a job, but they turn up for interview in dirty clothing and unbathed because they know they will not be employed. We also have many businesses screaming for people to fill vacancies.
Why do we have unemployed people and unfilled vacancies becasue the unemployed cannot be made to take any employment for which they are capable of filling, they are only given the choice of taking the job. well that should change and hopefully it will, then we should see a large reduction in unemployment.

But we only have 5% Unemployment in Australia and no poor people really thanks to our Social Security system.
Which is available to all unemployed people by Law

Isnt that a Good Thing ?

Plus a Rent Subsidy and Cheap Bus and Train travel

A reply to

I cant understand how Americans can survive without a decent Social Security System from tsiya at

http://www.aussieseek.com

Who says

How can anyone in the USA speak of an unemployment rate while people stumble across the desert by the millions, and get work almost instantly?
One of the requirements here, for drawing unemployment benefits, is to show proof that you are actively seeking a job. Before I retired, I could expect, several times a week, for someone to shuffle up, and ask, "you don't need no help, do you"? Then, they would hold out the little government form I was expected to fill out, to prove that they had asked for a job.
Most of them, if asked what they can do, turn out to have a bad back, can't lift more than 10 pounds, or a bad knee, can't stand for long, or walk very far, or maybe a bad back, bad knees, and hemmroids. Maybe some of them actually do, but the biggest problem many of them have is a lack of guts and pride.
I draw social security, and feel no shame, but I worked from the age of 15, for 45 years, took asprin for the pain, kept my moaning to myself, dragged my tired butt out in the morning, and did what needed to be done. Excuse me, if I reserve my pity, for those who honestly deserve it.

I read it again. It talks about the heavy machinery as not being useful but avoids mentioning the ligher wheeled deep-water vehicles that I have seen a specific references to as being in Iraq. I forget the designation and I can't give a citation right now.

Have you checked a hardware store like Home Depot or Lowes? I've gotten wire in all sorts of gauges from Home Depot, in the electrical department.

Obvious to you, even though you weren't there, haven't heard about the problem, made up your mind in advance, and don't care. the people at the convention Center said it was secure. they also attempted to march up to the bridge where rescuers were dropping a few supplies, some of which were destroyed when they hit the ground. They were forced to turn back by the rescuers (armed NG's I think) who were afraid of them. All this was related in interviews by the victims. Maybe they were lying. Maybe the scene at the Convention Center was all fun and games. Maybe they really didn't require food, water, or medical attention.

The people that have waited over a year for relief and the ones that rebuilt on money from FEMA that now have to cough up tens of thousands of dollars to repay money to FEMA. That would be enormous if it happened to me - or you, I presume.

Again, your have a reading comprehension problem. I've seen what real leaders do in times of emergency. they go to the scene. they talk to the people invloved - victims and rescuers. They cut through the crap and expedite what needs to be done. Bush makes speeches. Bad ones. He does photo ops. That was my criticism. It's not that difficult to understand.

I have run my Degen De1105 (purchased from Liypn) right next to my powered up Computer monitor and picked up 1170 WWVA, Wheeling West Virginia off the whip ; (~400 miles away)

Degen De1105 will pick up interference BETWEEN stations but is VERY interference resistant ; possibly double reduction and some other stuff..
similar to Sangan 606A but with some bells & whistles..

As for Shortwave, I have picked up WWCR while setting it on my car dashboard & driving around ; (Great conversation about roswell conspiracy, BTW :))

Anyone here copying the NAVTEX signals at 518KHz?

I'm hearing a lot of the transmissions on a 7' shielded loop (not nearly as many on a long dipole) and wondering if anyone has a recommendation for software that is easy to configure- Windows only please.

Well, "RHF"...

I didn't bring race into this. You did. It's got nothing to do with race. Absolutely zero.

Clinton was indeed gadding about. So was Joe Sixpack. So was Susy Snotface. So what? Not an issue because they are not in power and do not have a public face to maintain. A non sequitur.

Bush was gadding about.

Condi was gadding about.

They are in power and do have a "public face" to maintain. For better or worse, that comes with the territory.

This is not W (or Condi or race) bashing or blaming (and why you and jd keep insisting it is, is beyond me).

It was an observation that, from a PR point of view, "gadding about" was not the smartest thing they should have done.

If you still don't get it, let me give you the closest analogy that I can:

Can you say "Vlady Putin not coming home from vacation during the Russian sunken submarine crisis"? Sure you can!

Not the smartest PR move Putin ever made.

Not the smartest PR move W/Condi ever made.

No race, no bashing, just an observation.

Gays Defiant In Katrina's Wake by 365Gay.com Newscenter Staff

Posted: September 5, 2005 12:01 am ET

(New Orleans, Louisiana) It was a scene like something from a Fellini movie. Amid the death, the destruction, and suffering in the aftermath of hurricane Katrina a small parade behind a tattered rainbow flag made its way up Bourbon Street on Sunday.

The marchers said they were celebrating Southern Decadence. The group - about two dozen people - all said they lived in the largely gay French Quarter. Defiant, they said they were not about to flee the community despite orders from the city to do so.

The French Quarter, the oldest neighborhood in New Orleans, sits on higher ground than most of the city and escaped the worst of the flooding. Still water permeated the first floors of most buildings. The winds that accompanied Katrina ripped signs from buildings. Windows are shattered and broken, and many buildings had their roofs blown off.

Most of the marchers were among the poorest citizens of the neighborhood - the barbacks, clerks, part-time waiters and the unemployed who lived above the shops and clubs in the Quarter. The rainbow flag was taken from the front of one bar. It was ragged and worn but it had survived the hurricane, just as the plucky marchers had.

Southern Decadence would normally have filled the streets of the French Quarter this Labor Day weekend. The biggest LGBT event in the South it normally attracts thousands of people from across the country and pumps millions of dollars into the local economy. Last year more than 110, 000 attended the event. This would have been the festival's 33rd year.

Last week an evangelic group blamed Southern Decadence for causing the hurricane.

Single strand insulated wire of almost any convenient diameter will work very well as a simple random length wire antenna and can also be used to construct a dipole.

Chris Mooney: Yes. I mean, you've essentially articulated what I would say is possibly the central argument of my book. And I think that actually although there's been a lot of complaining about the politicization of science during the Bush Administration, this explanation about the two constituencies that you've discussed has really not been adequately expressed by the scientists complaining, because I think that they're hesitant to get into the realm of political analysis. But it is the gist that I feel.

The modern conservative movement, which now dominates the Republican Party, has a lot of key constituencies, but among those are the two that you just mentioned -- religious conservatives and regulated industry. And they want very different things, but their desires frequently stray into scientific areas. So the religious conservatives want to challenge evolution. Many fossil fuel interests want to challenge anybody who's suggesting advantages of reducing global warming. And when you cater to these constituencies, as the Republican Party and the Bush Administration have done, that essentially leads politicians and political appointees to conduct pseudo-scientific lobbying. And that doesn't mean that no other advocacy groups and no other interests ever politicize science. Science is always to some extent politicized. But it does mean that in today's Republican Party, what we essentially have is a perfect storm of science politicization and abuse.

And that's especially the case because there's no check on the Administration's abuses of science from Congress, because the Republican Party controls Congress as well. And a lot of people are very concerned about what's been happening to science in the federal agencies, where the oversight role should be played by Congress. There is clearly a huge threat to the integrity of scientific information coming from the EPA or NOAA [National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration]. You'd think that Congress would investigate and that some heads would roll, but that hasn't happened.

That is the big picture, very central to it. I think that there are a lot of other things going on as well, and I'd have to talk about that if you want. But that is very, very essential.

We seem to be doing very well so far. What makes you think we will not survive.

What kind of surplus are you using to fund social program(s).

Actually you must be wearing blinders (or trolling) to make a statement like that. You need to research the numerous other social support services available at the federal and state level. Social security is only one of many tax funded assistance programs that have been available in the U.S. for a very long time.

The President can use any Federal asset during a major disaster without anyone's permission, including regular active duty military as long as they are not used for law enforcement. They are allowed to shoot in self-defense.

The governor declared a disaster before the storm hit. She should not turn over her National Guard to the President.

It's an outdoor antenna, but I'm using it indoors because I do not have the natural finesse, or physical prowess to install it properly on my current home. It's a Diamond X-50 fiberglass antenna.

The best I could really do as far as a SWL antenna is concerned, is probably lining my ceiling with coated speaker wire. My property is quite small, also, I live astoundingly close to the entire neighborhood's power supply. MUCH to my infinite irritation, but alas...

Then how do you explain that we've had fewer Cat 4/5 hurricanes since the heyday of the 40's and 50's??

Don't be so quick to assign this to global warming, when the main difference between 50 years ago and now is that more people live in hurricane zones.

Who said anything about Global Warming?

The Atlantic has a multidecade cycle.

But the Gulf of Mexico being 90 degrees certainly contributes to the ferocity and the size of the storms.

The French Quarter is on almost the same level that the Mississippi River is.That area is as flat as a table top,no hills.There is a little park area by the Mississippi River where you can walk up some steps and about fifteen or twenty feet beyond that area,there are a lot of seats and some steps where you can step right down to the edge of the Mississippi River.

I can't recommend any Windows progs but I've been receiving NAVTEX on my Welcombe loop for some time. I've heard and decoded NAVTEX from as far west as Newfoundland and as far east as Turkey.

It's a fascinating aspect of the radio hobby. Weather forecasts, emergency messages about drifting buoys, oil-rig moves etc.

I use a commercial amateur decoder, whose name I have forgotten!

Morning Greg

And how the head leader of "HomeLand Security" Michael Chertoff that the bow legged hick put in charge. Even Bill O Reilly said this guy should be fired. He had "no idea" what was going on even though it was ALL OVER THE TV ON EVERY CHANNEL and ON THE FRONT PAGE OF EVERY NEWPAPER. He had "no idea" people were abandoned in the Superdome.

Of course, we know he is a blatant liar like his boss bush. That has to be the lamest excuse I ever heard. Everybody knew what was going on in NO, BUT, the HEAD of our "Homeland Security" didn't know what was going on. If it's true he's the most inept moron in the world in charge of our protection. If it's a lie, he is still the most inept moron in charge of your families protection but is also a biggot and doesn't actually believe in his faith. Gee I thought bush {Flight Suit Man} only appointed "righteous" people??

What this event did is show the world and terrorists that the bush administration is totally inept, nothing but "talk", all about bullshit, nothing to back themselves up, no leadership, no proper critical communications in an emergency and how they view their own poor people.

The terrorists see a target that will collapse under easy conditions. Much easier then they thought. This event taught them much thanks to bush and his appointed buddies.

Now YOU ARE THE TARGET EVEN MORE then before.

I am embarrassed by bush and his total administration. Yes embarrassed by the rest of the world. G-D forbid if this was a terrorist attack of the deadly kind. A bio or dirty bomb and bush would go hide in some bunker along with cheney and his gay buddy Rove.

As you can see, Homeland Security is nothing but a shame put on to impress dunmmies like dxace, beerbrain,jd and their kind. You see, they believe it truly exists and works. They don't think this is major catastrophe in itself besides the hurricane. They see nothing else but "bad weather". Amazing isn't it.

Yes, people around the world and the terrorists see who we really are and how we act under chaos and confusion under this administration.

The hurricane happened on Monday.I still can't believe that Chertoff had the audacity, the lack of respect for the Americans people intelligence, to say on Thurs he had NO IDEA that people were stranded in the Superdome with NO FOOD, WATER, MEDICINES OR SECURITY.

So by Thurs, the leader, head honcho of our "Homeland Security said, "I had no idea" blah blah blah....

Now go be good blobs of human waste and have another beer while wearing your Radio cap and living off the public.

I'm not one to advocate off topic posts, but one thing to think about is that the on topic posts all would fill a FAQ in their commonality. Consider that we're about due for another IC-R75 vs. Sat 800 or an IC-R75 vs. R8B or an 7030+ vs. R8B thread shortly.

I suppose that for variety, we could start a SX-100 vs. HQ-180A thread. Or a Degen vs. Kaito thread.

My point is that the on topic posts tend to be rehashed quite a bit, and if we came up with some more interesting on topic posts, the S/N ratio would decline naturally.

Assuming you are looking to clean up voice comms and not music look for a used Daiwa AF606K audio filter - one of the best performing analog units I've used. Also look for a used Datong FL3. Finally, MFJ had made and I presume they still make some decent analog audio filters.

Yes Mark,

Fox news to me is a gov't channel. They do lie, make money by exploiting the dead, make believe they are against a lot of things bush and his administration does, but they do that to gain more audience by not alienating the left completely. This means more hits for them to show companies for commercials which means higher rates and more cash in their greedy little pockets.

The hand pick their employees just right.
Are they "on our side"? Do they have believable and trusting faces? Can they lie good? Are they true republican supporters?

It's funny how O Reilly exploits whatever and whomever he can. But did he talk about the new eminent domain laws?

NO

Did he talk about Jeff Gannon, the homosexual G.I. hooker and prostitute who had security clearance to enter and roam the White House at his own will?

NO he never covered the topic. Never.

IF this was done by Democratics, you KNOW how he would have talked about it for weeks in a row. Look how they covered Clinton and his little affair? Can you just imagine what these holy right wingers would have done with this story were it Dems who did it??

The media in this country is tightly controlled. They are owned and run by highly motivated political power players like Rupert Murdoch. News Corp and Fox news for example.

Take our radio stations. The majority are run by a couple companies and people with political connections.

You can't get the real truth anymore. At least on SW you can get some real views by outside governments who are NOT SCARED of bush and his power connections. Good for them.

But, as David stated here once, they are trying to do away with that source of info too.

It doesn't look that way on: news:alt.certification.a-plus where I was told by a regular there that he had worked on computer for 42 years, and that electrolytic capacitors just don't go bad on motherboards.
Most of the people trying to pass the different a+ tests just memorize several sets of practice questions and hope to squeak by without really knowing what they are doing. A good computer tech should have at least one full year of basic electronics education, along with a year of hands on electronics troubleshooting before preparing for the A+ tests. Its hard not to laugh at the low level of skills shown by most of the people on that group where reformatting the hard drive is considered a troubleshooting step. I have repaired computers for 22 years. When I started, you had to use a scope and have good soldering skills to find and replace the bad chips. I still troubleshoot most motherboards before I replace them. If it isn't a bad custom chip, I just repair the board and put it back in service. A+ doesn't guarantee that a tech can find a bad board on the first try, let alone make effective repairs in a reasonable amount of time. I tried to explain logical troubleshooting to one of them and was told it was too much trouble to do things that way.
He would rather stumble through each problem blindly than learn to follow a set method to let him fix more computers and make more money.
That's OK with me. If I ever get well enough to go back to work I am going to open a computer store and do things my way. Let him starve if he wants to.

If you don't think CATV operators have to answer to the FCC you know nothing about the business. They also have to comply with FAA and EPA regulations and inspections. CATV operates as a closed system over public service and aircraft frequencies, so any system damage that causes radiation in those bands must be repaired quickly, or the system operator gets a stiff fine. Accidentally carry a sporting event that is blanked in your area, and watch the fines roll in. Pole attachment fees and right of way fees are governed by FCC rules.

Mostly mainframe applications. I know one programmer who was retired who was asked to come back to work to do software maintenance for a large corporation because they couldn't find anyone with the skills needed.

Things can always, at least theoretically, be better.

So what? We live in the real world, where "good enough" has to be acceptable (either that, or you go insane trying to get perfection).

An intelligent person expects that plans will evolve over time.

Hint: Democrats expect perfect plans, never deviated from, before any action is taken. Which makes Democrats . . . well, see above.

The plans aren't secret, and they've told you what they are.

And indeed, the plans are working.

Ah, yes. Killing is only appropriate if done in the name of Liberalism, right? Like that more than 100 million you liberals killed across the globe in the last 100 years?

Iraq was not a "killing spree" you ignorant, hateful propagandist. It was a war of liberation, and is now assistance as the Iraqi's create a free,

Hey, such stuff happens in war. And he may not have known at the time that his injury was self-inflicted. But his actions do not make him a

Paul R. Smith is a hero.

Kerry just served a few months in Vietnam, then

No. Depose Saddam as part of the GWOT. In the process, liberating the Iraqi's was the fastest, most efficient method for doing so. Establishing a democratic government in Iraq is part of making sure that Iraq does not immediately fall back into the hands of terrorists, or terrorist supporters.

Don't forget wireless solutions, like DirectWay. If you run on a generator, satellite service is still operational, since it's not reliant on cell towers, wifi locations, cable or phone access.

Rice has no place in NO offering pronouncements on a domestic policy issue and being seen loading groceries into a pickup for photo op's. But Bush is quite adept at playing race cards as needed. Also look at the verbally challenged Light General Russell Honore who heads the rescue effort. Not a random choice imho.

With the end of Summer (yeah, right, given it's supposed to be close to 90F by the weekend here) upon us, has anyone any goals for the upcoming winter SWL listening?

-Testing out a new antenna/receiver?
-Puttering around on a boatanchor?
-Hunting down an elusive DX catch?
-DXpedition to someplace?

Personally, I'll be doing some recapping of the SX-100 that I bought at Dayton, and will be getting some last listening on the old 50' random wire before I have to shorten it considerably next year to get an oak tree planted in the yard.

On a non-shortwave note, I'll be reacquainting myself with scanners as well. Although the Hamilton County and Cincinnati police and fire entities are on a digital trunked system, there's still plenty to listen to with a non digital trunked scanner.

Just received 2 of these units from Andy in Wales.

I have to admit: I am totally rethinking antenna solutions for townhouse/apartment living.

This unit is very impressive. Similar in design to the true wellbrook loops, the ALA100 allows the end-user to assemble their own flexible wire loop. It can, quite literally be tacked to the side of a wood frame house, taped to the wall of your apartment or pinned to the perimeter of your balcony or lanai (if you have one.

In a couple of mornings (on the West Coast)
I have had fairly good reception from Australia and Tahiti on medium-wave (612 and 738khz) and the conditions are totally sub-par at the moment. The ALA100's performance seems to be fairly consistent from 100khz (or lower) to beyond 30Mhz.

My 5-foot coupled and matched frame loop now stands idle... more reviews to follow

Cuba's Offer

Even Cuba's Fidel Castro has offered a fleet of boats to help in the Hurricane Katrina recovery effort. The White House turned that down, but the Bush administration says it will seek Castro's help as it plots ways to crush all dissent after this debacle.

Cuba's Offer II

Cuba's Fidel Castro has offered a fleet of boats to help in the Hurricane Katrina recovery effort... and an amazing 90% of the citizens of Cuba are already waiting on the docks offering to man those boats and head for America right away!

I'm intrigued about these photo ops. Who are the photographs being taken by? Does the President order those photo's to be taken?

Aren't the photo's being taken primarily by the liberal press? And if so, who is staging what, and who is actually mugging?

1566. Legal Update(pretty long, sorry!)

I had the odd experience of a quasi court hearing over speaker phone today at 11:00EDT. As I mentioned I have had some ongoing trouble from a "disturbed" person in the form of a gazillion Emails. It climaxed Thursday when the mail server for the place I worked crashed under a email flood attack. I ended up in the directors office trying to explain this event.

After that I talked to an lawyer and decided to just bail from this and other groups and where posssible I removed my posts. Good and well except Friday night my Hotmail and Yahoo mail accounts where chocked.

In desperation I asked some IT gurus for help. With the help of another friend, a shrink, I posted a series of bait, in the form of vitrolic posts designed to make this person freak out.

It worked and at 7:00 I got a phone call from this person's father. When I explained what had happened he told me his son was on probation for simialr cyber attacks and as part of probation he was banned from accessing any computer. He had returned home after asuring his parents he had changed his ways.

I got a call about an hour later from the DA in the state where the person had been tried and placed on prabation. I aggreed to an 11:00 conference call to see if a "disposition" could be agreed upon. The attacker admited that he had stalked, harased and flooded my work account. That he had hijacked many PCs and had penetrated my works "childish" security. I wasn't the only person on his hit list. About 2 dozen people were lucky enough to get his un-loving attention to detail.

He had been released on shock probation, from a 20 year sentence.
He was given the choice of finishing the final 19 /12 yers, or facing a new trial in addition to a probation hearing. His lawyer tried to argue this person needed psych help, but when faced with an either or option, the lawer agreed that it was in "everyone's best interest" for his client to "return to a supervised environment." LEOs will be contacting the other lucky people in the comming days. This person could still face legal action from his other actions.

When I asked him why he hated my comments on antennas he went off on my "lofty" and "arogant attitude". He ranted for 5 minutes with exact quotes from the post that "triggered" him. I was stunned. And alarmed.
If I managd to set him off with a pretty innocent post about a good antenna design, what are my posts in misc.survivalism likely to prompt?

The cop friend I had with me told me after it was all over, that this person would amost certainly not last 6 months in prison. At this point

I am at a loss. My shrink friend and IT friends all tell me that this is like getting hit by a metorite. A once in a lifetime event. So I don't know if I am going to continue to post or not. I have enjoyed, mostly, the banter in this and the other NGs. But once burned forever shy.
I am wrestling with the question of "is it really worthwhile?"

Lets not start a flame thread over this, it isn't worthy of the wasted bandwidth. I felt an obligation to let this group, and those who read this group and are active in the other groups know what happened and the result.
Disturbed people are much more common then I realized. They are all too common. When I think what this person could have, planed to do but never got around to, do to me by attacking my credit history etc, it is down right scary. I really lucked out and didn't get fired. In the end it comes down to a cost benifit question.

Is the net worth the risk?

Sorry this took so many words, I left out a lot of detail. But couldn;t really cut out any more detail without lossing the thread.
I don't know and won't for a week or two, or longer.

Take care and be sure to take steps to protect your selves like geting the credit agencies to notify you of >ANY< activity.

Robert, RFH, Tom, and the rest, sorry for pulling my posts from your groups, but my lawyer says it is "prudent". He wishes I could cancel everything I have every posted. When you think how easy it is to find every post anyone has made it is a little frightening. Anyway I have a new antenna to test.

And for the time being I will be lurking in the background.

Well, since he begged the Governor on Saturday to evacuate, it must be the former.

I use the Kantronics KAM XL with a simple 30 meter vertical on my Icom 7800.
All you need then is a simple terminal program or packet program like winpack and it works great. I also use the Pacterm program a lot but its pricey...works great on anything covered by the Kam though!

You are misinformed. This was sent on 26 August (Friday):

''Dear Mr. President:

Under the provisions of Section 501 (a) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, 42 U.S.C. ï¿½ï¿½ 5121-5206 (Stafford Act), and implemented by 44 CFR ï¿½ 206.35, I request that you declare an emergency for the State of Louisiana due to Hurricane Katrina for the time period beginning August 26, 2005, and continuing.
The affected areas are all the southeastern parishes including the New Orleans Metropolitan area and the mid state Interstate I-49 corridor and northern parishes along the I-20 corridor that are accepting the thousands of citizens evacuating from the areas expecting to be flooded as a result of Hurricane Katrina.

In response to the situation I have taken appropriate action under State law and directed the execution of the State Emergency Plan on August 26, 2005 in accordance with Section 501 (a) of the Stafford Act. A State of Emergency has been issued for the State in order to support the evacuations of the coastal areas in accordance with our State Evacuation Plan and the remainder of the state to support the State Special Needs and Sheltering Plan.

Pursuant to 44 CFR ï¿½ 206.35, I have determined that this incident is of such severity and magnitude that effective response is beyond the capabilities of the State and affected local governments, and that supplementary Federal assistance is necessary to save lives, protect property, public health, and safety, or to lessen or avert the threat of a disaster. I am specifically requesting emergency protective measures, direct Federal Assistance, Individual and Household Program (IHP) assistance, Special Needs Program assistance, and debris removal.

Preliminary estimates of the types and amount of emergency assistance needed under the Stafford Act, and emergency assistance from certain Federal agencies under other statutory authorities are tabulated in Enclosure A.

The following information is furnished on the nature and amount of State and local resources that have been or will be used to alleviate the conditions of this emergency:
. Department of Social Services (DSS): Opening (3) Special Need Shelters (SNS) and establishing (3) on Standby.
. Department of Health and Hospitals (DHH): Opening (3) Shelters and establishing (3) on Standby.
. Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness (OHSEP): Providing generators and support staff for SNS and Public Shelters.
. Louisiana State Police (LSP): Providing support for the phased evacuation of the coastal areas.
. Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries (WLF): Supporting the evacuation of the affected population and preparing for Search and Rescue Missions.

Mr. President
Page Two
August 27, 2005

. Louisiana Department of Transportation and Development (DOTD): Coordinating traffic flow and management of the evacuations routes with local officials and the State of Mississippi.

The following information is furnished on efforts and resources of other Federal agencies, which have been or will be used in responding to this incident:
. FEMA ERT-A Team en-route.

I certify that for this emergency, the State and local governments will assume all applicable non-Federal share of costs required by the Stafford Act.

I request Direct Federal assistance for work and services to save lives and protect property.

(a) List any reasons State and local government cannot perform or contract for performance, (if applicable).

(b) Specify the type of assistance requested.

In accordance with 44 CFR ï¿½ 206.208, the State of Louisiana agrees that it will, with respect to Direct Federal assistance:

1. Provide without cost to the United States all lands, easement, and rights-of-ways necessary to accomplish the approved work.

2. Hold and save the United States free from damages due to the requested work, and shall indemnify the Federal Government against any claims arising from such work;

3. Provide reimbursement to FEMA for the non-Federal share of the cost of such work in accordance with the provisions of the FEMA-State Agreement; and

4. Assist the performing Federal agency in all support and local jurisdictional matters.

In addition, I anticipate the need for debris removal, which poses an immediate threat to lives, public health, and safety.

Pursuant to Sections 502 and 407 of the Stafford Act, 42 U.S.C. ï¿½ï¿½ 5192 & 5173, the State agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the United States of America for any claims arising from the removal of debris or wreckage for this disaster. The State agrees that debris removal from public and private property will not occur until the landowner signs an unconditional authorization for the removal of debris.

I have designated Mr. Art Jones as the State Coordinating Officer for this request. He will work with the Federal Emergency Management Agency in damage assessments and may provide further information or justification on my behalf.

Sincerely,

Kathleen Babineaux Blanco
Governor

I'm going to try to put up some sort of random wire along my (wooden) balcony, to see if I can pick up more DX I think better winter propagation should help things along somewhat as well, though.

I'm also a scanner listener-- we have a few trunked systems online, but they're mostly county public works departments with little in the way of truly interesting conversation. Most of the active freqs in my area are still in the VHF-150 and UHF-450 ranges. I have a Pro-95 and a Pro-83. I live in a large metropolitan area, so there is always something interesting to listen to around here.

Please be aware:

NEW YORK STATE OFFICE OF CYBER SECURITY AND CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE COORDINATION CYBER INFORMATION BULLETIN
DATE ISSUED:
September 1, 2005

SUBJECT:
Fraudulent Websites for Hurricane Katrina Victims

OVERVIEW:
We have received information indicating that Internet domain names are being created that could be used to lure unwary users into visiting potentially malicious web sites.

BULLETIN: Relief and charity efforts for the victims of Hurricane Katrina began immediately after the hurricane devastated the Gulf Coast area.
Shortly
thereafter, web sites began to appear which were designed to defraud unsuspecting users. Some of the activities include soliciting donations for seemingly charitable purposes, attempting to collect personal information through phishing scams and also spreading malware to unsuspecting users. Over the past few days, domain names that redirect users to malicious web sites have appeared online, in addition to email scams requesting donations for those impacted by the hurricane. While some of these sites and messages may be legitimate, many are not. At the time of this bulletin, please be aware that the following domains are reported to be suspicious:

katrinahelp.com katrinacleanup.com katrinarelief.com.

Please note that this is not an exhaustive list and additional domains may continue to appear.

In addition to fraudulent web sites, opportunists may use this event as a vehicle for other types of online attacks. For example, email messages that claim to contain attachments with photos, video, or other information about Hurricane Katrina may actually contain viruses, worms,

or other malware.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

We recommend that staff be advised to:

* Validate the relief fund or charity through a known reliable entity. Please refer to the FEMA link below for a list of reputable disaster relief resources for Hurricane Katrina.
* When a message containing a request for donations for these victims appears, do not respond unless you are certain it is a valid message.
* Avoid visiting untrusted web sites.
* Avoid opening email messages and attachments that claim to contain video, photos, or other information relating to relief solicitation for Hurricane Katrina.
* Follow standard best practices for email and web browsing security.

1604. (OT) : Dredge Lake Pontchartrain -and- Raise the City of New Orleans

DaviD - The actual plan to re-build the City of New Orleans would be to Dredge Lake Pontchartrain by an average of Seven Feet; contoured more in the center and less on the sides.
Put the Lake Bottom Mud inside the Levees surrounding the City of New Orleans. This would bring the average elevation of all parts of the City of New Orleans about Five Feet above Sea Level and generally make the City of New Orleans "Flood Proof" from the Lake and the Sea.

[Just Add Water - Ooops !]
New Orleans Hurricane Risk Accessment
http://www.globalsecurity.org/security/ops/hurricane-risk-new-orleans.htm

"In addition to its separation from the coast, the topography of the land in the city is adverse. The city is surrounded by a river levee system 25 feet high along its southern boundary, and by hurricane protection levees about 15 feet high along the remaining boundaries.
Most of the land in the city is below sea level, with much of the northern half of the city more than 5 feet below sea level. About one half of the population of the city can't and won't evacuate during a hurricane. Many people, about 200,000, do not have automobiles or access to an automobile. There are an additional 20,000 special needs people that cannot be easily moved. Finally, there several hundred thousand people that will not evacuate because of the difficulty of actually evacuating and finding suitable shelters. The hurricane protection levees surrounding the city are designed to protect the city from a category slow 2 or fast category 3 hurricane. Thus for any slow category 3, or category 4 or 5 hurricanes, the possibility exists for flooding the metropolitan area of New Orleans. The city of New Orleans averages 1.8 m (6 ft) below sea level, resembling a shallow depression surrounded by levees and water."

I sure can't argue with a reasoned statement like that. jd, you're smarter than all of us.

The POTUS is covered by a travelling press corps that goes wherever he goes.
When he's on the road, the photogs in this press corps make up the "tight pool" and have the closest access to the POTUS. Local media are in the media pool which doesn't normally get as close as the tight pool. Whenever the prez makes a local appearance, it's news and is covered by all media.
It's up to individual networks, stations, and papers whether or not they use it. It's up to the prez his-own-self what he says and how he acts.
Presumably, the media is hoping he will say/do something of substance. Not likely, but they gotta be ready just in case. jd thinks the liberals want dubbya to make his lips quiver. He's said that about 49 times in the past 2 days. The people in NO want him to stop posing and get control of the situation. Haliburton wants Cheney to take control of the scene. Guess who wins!

That contaminated dirt/soil is going to have to be treated too.A few years ago,I saw an article on the internet about that.Something about bulldozing up the dirt and putting the dirt in some big very high temperature ovens that rotate around on their axis and cooking the dirt for a couple of hours or whatever lenght of time.It is suppose to cook all of the contamination out of the dirt.They better not throw all of them Bulldozers in Lake Pontchartrain. www.ireland-information.com (Irish Music and Lyrics) Lakes of Pontchartrain just got my anlp1. reception is somewhat better than with the windup antenna in the 4-20 Mhz range. Which is what the specs of the antenna are. Reception is also better in the FM range. However the antenna does have one little quirk. When antenna is hooked up and on, if it turned on to MW (for example 770khz) the reception actually suffers. I have to unplug the antenna to get a decent signal. toggling on/off switch does nothing because the antenna is controlled by the main unit. It's very annoying to plug/unplug the antenna just so that I can listen to the MW. Anyone else experienced this issue. Any other ways around it?

How much am I paying for gas? Well,I went to the Goodwill store at about noontime this afternoon,I didn't see anything there I couldn't live without so I flirted with the wimmns as usual for about an hour or so.Then I went over to the wal mart store food department.I was going to buy some gas at the MurphyUSA gas station in the wal mart parking lot but I counted nine vehicles lined up to get to the gas pumps.There was only a couple of vehicles at the gas pumps and somebody was letting only one or two vehicles at a time from the line get to the gas pumps as one or two of the other vehicles already at the gas pumps was leaving,so I dont know what the deal on that is.I didn't bother to get in that long line of vehicles because I can easily go a few more weeks without needing any gas.I think the price per gallon on the sign said $2.74 per gallon.

I know about using heating oil being illegal. But sure enough, I googled this subject and various state DOT's are trying to get Bio-Diesel categorized for taxation. Still they are not talking about going after solar power, but I am sure that is coming next. By the way, there is a new "initiative" called "open roads", which is everything but open roads. They are trying to put RFID transponders in every car and extract tolls from everywhere you drive.

I don't know for sure, but I think yours may have been defective.

Have you checked information on the Tecsun PL350? There is also the Kaito/Degen 1101. Both are small radios, maybe not quite as small as the E100 though. I have both and both are very reliable small radios, very portable.

That's pretty darn cheap. The lowest price in my area (W. Central Fla) is 2.89 but the average price is 3.06 - 3.09.

A much better idea would be to let mother nature continue to level out the area between the river and the lake. In other words don't rebuild
New Orleans in such a poor location.

I predict that, one of these days, the father of one of those destitute girls on Brother Stair's "farm" is going to learn that Stair has been getting it on with his daughter "behind the barn". The father will then settle Stair's hash for good. It's just a matter of time....

I've managed to dodge your wrath for nearly two years on this newsgroup, and now I get tagged "tard", "shitstain" (I especially like that one!) and "dumbass" in one swell foop! A trifecta!

We will spend billions rebuilding a city in a location where a city never should have been built in the first place. We should spend the money to rebuild and protect the harbor and businesses located there but develop housing inland for the former residents of New Orleans. By rebuilding New Orleans in it's historic location we will waste uncounted billions trying to build a city on soggy swamp land that is now polluted.

FDR - Your reply is typical of the mentality of the Political Cadre of the Democrat Party of the USA.
FDR - You Preach HATE For All Those Who Do Not Believe As You Do !
[Your Fellow American Citizens and See Them as Evil.]
FDR - You equate an Islam-O-Fascist Extremist Terrorists who would call you an Infidel and Kill you for failing to Believe as He Does :
To an American Christian Born-Again-Believer who would call you a Sinner and then Kneel Down and Pray with you for Salvation.

Hang in there, man. At least on the bright side, you didn't post anything that would have gotten you fired. I've seen that happen before, and I'm not talking about X rated, racist

Even as Katrina was bearing down on the Gulf Coast that Sunday night and early Monday, Aug. 28-29, and the National Hurricane Center was warning of growing danger, the White House didn't alter the president's plans to fly from his Texas ranch to the West to promote a new Medicare prescription drug benefit.

By the time Bush landed in Arizona that Monday, the storm was unleashing its fury on Louisiana and Mississippi. The president inserted into his speech only a brief promise of prayers and federal help.

He continued his schedule in California, and he didn't decide until the next day that he should return to Washington. But it took him another day to get there, as he flew back to Texas to spend another night at his home before leaving for the White House.

Once the president was in Washington, the criticism only intensified.

In a television interview, Bush said - mistakenly - that nobody anticipated the breach of the levees in a serious storm.

Even Monday's trip to the region was a redo, hurriedly arranged by the White House over the weekend after lukewarm response to Bush's first in-person visit to the Gulf Coast last Friday.

Bush had raised eyebrows on his first trip by, among other things, picking Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss. - instead of the thousands of mostly poor and black storm victims - as an example of loss.

"Out of the rubbles of Trent Lott's house - he's lost his entire house - there's going to be a fantastic house.
And I'm looking forward to sitting on the porch," Bush said with a laugh from an airplane hangar in Mobile, Ala.

In the same remarks, Bush gave FEMA chief Brown - the face for many of the inadequate federal response
- a hearty endorsement. "Brownie, you're doing a heck of a job," Bush said.

Later in Biloxi, Miss., Bush tried to comfort two stunned women wandering their neighborhood clutching Hefty bags, looking in vain for something to salvage from the rubble of their home.

He kept insisting they could find help at a Salvation Army center down the street, even after another bystander had informed him it had been destroyed.

And at his last stop that day, at the airport outside of New Orleans, Bush lauded the increasingly desperate city as a great town because he used go there and
"enjoy myself - occasionally too much."

"It's going to be almost impossible to overcome the perception about the president that he didn't show compassion and didn't get control of the policy failures," American University political scientist James Thurber said. "The vivid images that are coming across the television are really destroying his image as a leader."

White House counselor Dan Bartlett said the president and his aides are unconcerned for now about the unrelenting criticism.

WHY - The simple Random Wire Antenna is better than the Dipole Antenna for the Shortwave Listener (SWL)
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Shortwave-SWL-Antenna/message/4854

JP,

* "proper elevation and orientation"
There is the thing that makes the properly built Amateur Dipole Antenna the better Transmitting anf Receiving Antenna for it's designed Frequency and Target Signal Area.

AMATEUR DIPOLE ANTENNA :
The Amateur Radio Operator who knows his craft will take the time and spend the money to Build and erect the Dipole Antenna in the right place and at the right height for it to perform optimaly for it's designed operating Frequencies.

OOPS - The Shortwave Listener will often simple 'hang-up' the Dipole Antenna between two relatively low supports and expect miracles.

RANDOM WIRE ANTENNA [LOW NOISE INVERTED "L" ANTENNA] :
NOTE - This is why the simple Random Wire Antenna configured as an Inverted "L" Antenna is usually the better "Throw-It-Up" Antenna for the Shortwave Listener who wants an All Band (AM/MW and Shortwave) that is an Omni-Directional Antenna to Hear Them All . . .

TIP - The lay-out of the Inverted "L" Antenna lend itself to the design concepts of the so called Low Noise Shortwave Listener's (SWL) Antenna that were popularized by John Doty.

Under average circumstances, a dipole at proper elevation

>It's the 3rd most important port in the US. It's location is no more vulnerable than Miami or San Francisco. Do you advocate abandoning them, also?<

Don't forget Seattle - Along with major earthquakes, Mt. Rainier is just itching to send a cubic mile of lahar and glacial meltwater down its west side toward the Space Needle.

This is a very difficult question to answer, and one that will be asked again and again with no final answer.

There really are only two reasonable answers to this question, regardless of the city - either (1) abandon the most vulnerable portions of the cities in question, or (2) rebuild/retrofit to a standard that will make the vulnerable areas much less so. In New Orleans, that means filling in the basin, building more or less leak-proof dikes, building structures to withstand a flood (yes it can be done!) and having a fabulous plan, both pre-emptive and mop-up, in case this happens again - and I'll bet my life's earnings that it will happen again.

In San Francisco, it means identifying all of the most dangerous areas for the effects of shaking in a dangerously large earthquake, and building / retrofitting all habitable structures, infrastructure and elevated roadways to withstand the maximum credible temblor. And, of course, having a fabulous plan in case it happens (and it will!).

For Seattle - I honestly don't know...that's a really tough one.

There are no other intelligent answers, really, that get the job done right - unless we can accept major loss of life and property whenever this type of thing occurs.

As difficult and protracted as this discussion may be, the tougher one - because we choose to make it so - is, Who pays for all of this and assumes responsibility? With a net estimated cost of between 100 and 200 Gigabucks, the area of devastation from Katrina will take $$ from many quarters, and we, the US that is, now have some more hard decisions to make as a nation. And we will every time a Katrina or a Mt. Rainier explosion or a large San Andreas Fault earthquake happens. Will we keep on breaking the back of the middle-class taxwise to make life palatable for the poor and the rich? Will we expect the businesses that have prospered in New Orleans to pick up most of the tab? Darned if I know.

RHF - do you, then, suggest that a separate ground rod for the antenna and one for the radio is worthwhile to reduce noise? And if so, how far apart? Random readings on this group the last year or so suggest that this is a recipe for voltage differences that can cause problems for the receiver...with wider spacing of the rods resulting in greater potential differences.

I'm going to have to dig this up again, but I thought that I read somewhere in my internet searching on antennas that you'd want something like at least 10 feet between the two so you don't have to worry about electrical issues for lightning. In my personal case, I have two grounds in my backyard because not that I wanted two, but because I moved my antenna, so I needed a ground at another location. I ended up using both grounds anyway, the first one at the 9:1 transformer, and the second at the entrance to the house with the zap trapper.

I own a very good Westinghouse AM/FM/Shortwave shirt pocket size radio.A few years ago when I laid it down on my couch to go to my kitchen,it slipped off and landed on my hardwood floor.The on/off/tuneing knob is attached to a little electronic circuit cube shaped block thingy and the cube broke loose from the circuit board in the radio.It looks to me like a lot of very close to each other side by side very tiny solder connections from the cube to the circuit board broke loose.I am too fumbly to try to solder all of those many little very close solder connections back together and a powerfull magnafying glass would have to be used to help see those little solder connections,I have some powerfull magnafying glasses,but I dont think I can repair the radio.I would like to get the radio repaired.

Abandoning a harbor of that size makes no sense - that is obvious. But it makes no sense whatsoever to build housing in a bowl that is below sea level. Built the housing out of the immediate area and include public transit for the people who work at the harbor and other large businesses. But abandon New Orleans as a place of residence - it is too vulnerable.

A Second Look : The WellBrook lay-out for a Low Noise Antenna
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Shortwave-SWL-Antenna/message/4856
This webpage by WellBrook shows what I think is the best way of using a 9:1 Matching Transformer at the 'remote' Antenna Feed-Point and then using a 1:1 Line Isolation (Coupler) at the ground level (rod) entry to the House.
http://www.wellbrook.uk.com/longwire.html
Note - How the Feed-Point of the Antenna is moved to the Far-End of the Antenna vice the normal way of simply using the Nearest-End as the Feed-Point.
http://www.wellbrook.uk.com/longwire.html
TIP - Burying the Coax Cable under the Ground directly under the elevated Antenna Wire can also improve the overall properties of Antenna.
(Making the Coax Cable a Unifying Ground Radial)
IMHO - Even if a 1:1 Line Isolation (Coupler) is not used with the above lay-out of a Far-End-Fed Inverted "L" Antenna. Since the Horizontal Arm of the Antenna would be at least 30 Feet (10 Meters) the distance would still make the use of an Antenna Feed-Point Ground and a Shack Ground the better Noise Reduction Set-Up.
http://www.wellbrook.uk.com/longwire.html
PLUS AGAIN - Burying the Coax Cable under the Ground directly under the elevated Antenna Wire can also improve the overall properties of Antenna.

Hi Mike

Isn't that SX-100 made by Lowe who also made the HF-150?? If it is, I almost bought one but saw the "Lowe" Nasa Target HF3 instead and bought that. But, Lowe called it the SX-200 I believe back in the day.

If it is the Lowe, do you like the radio? If yes, why? What's it's prime features that you like?

Thanks

Actually, it's the Hallicrafters SX-100. I went hunting for a boatanchor I could tinker with and still get good performance at Dayton this year; there were several Hammarlund HQ-180's and one HQ-160 that was in great condition, but the several Hallicrafters SX-100's had the right price point as well as good enough condition for me to use immediately. I'd have loved to have bought an HQ-180, but it weighed twice as much as the SX-100 (or it felt like it), and the people were asking $400 minimum for them. I could have bought a Kenwood R-5000 or Icom IC-R71A for that price at Dayton, so I declined.

Right now, the SX-100 works okay with a little cleaning done, but I know that if I intend to get it in top working order, I have to recap it and align it at minimum. I figure that I can do the recapping while listening to UD basketball during the winter.

Sorry it's not the Lowe; I'd not mind an HF-150 some time down the road, but right now I've got my hands full as it is.

might also allow us to begin treating the Cubans as we have treated the Chinese.

There was a failure at all governmental levels and blame a plenty to go around.
1. Over the years the local city government should have been convincing the populace that immediate evacuation was a requirement.
The city government also should have had an evacuation plan that addressed the equipment needed to get as many people as possible out of the city. It was clear that idiot they call a mayor had nothing to offer other than a bunch of tearful whining.

2. The state government should have declared an emergency and called on the feds much earlier than it did. Governors of two adjoining state were pleading with the governors of Miss and La. to do so, but they dithered and waited. It takes a declaration to get the feds formally involved.

3. There was a lot of uncoordinated effort at the federal level that was at least in part caused by the massive shift in funds away from FEMA as it was gotten ready to be absorbed into Homeland Security.

Yes I will be heading out for our Seefontein DX site on the Atlantic West coast of Africa on Monday, as close as I can get to the equinox which highly favours DX reception.
I will put up a 1000ft/300m beverage and rig up my Kiwa MW loop.
(details of last Seefontein DXpedition see http://www.dxing.info/dxpeditions/seefontein_2005_07.pdf)
The reception I will really be gunning for is the U.S. West coast BCB AM stations on MW.
That's 16,000 km's/10,000 miles away -> really tough catches if you can get them.
U.S. East coast comes in fairly easily as does the Caribbean and Brazil.

Best catch I had so far was Mexicali, Baja California. I thought I got KGA 1510 Spokane, but turned out they would not QSL my two detailed requests, so who knows..??

Hope I can do West coast U.S.A. Needs favourable propagation conditions in addition to good antenna's.
The weather can be anything from howling late winter Antarctic gales to lovely spring weather = here's hoping..!!
Will then go on up the West coast to view the lovely Namaqualand daisies for a couple of days.

I think we only have to look at the relative suceess of our policy of openness with China to see that holding a country like Cuba away and enforcing economic blockades does not work. This is a perfect opportunity to open the door just a crack but I doubt Bush has the cojones to do it.

So things are FU as usual in a disaster
No excuse for not helping

We saw the same FU;s here in So Calif during the fires -- but we were on Ham RAdio for 3 days with Health and welfare, donated to our charity, delivered canned goods and clothes.

For cris sakes - quite the blame game and pony up

Nobody sed to particularly donate to FEMA
Their site has approved charities,
There are a lot of scam artists out there Caveat Donators

As for all this blame game below - yeah things get chaotic during a disaster SNAFU as it were
But things got done -- big time

>It ain't like those gigabucks are going into a big black hole; that money means commerce and jobs. <

'strue - for the most part. We can consider that taxation stream as thopugh it were a huge donation to the Red Cross or Salvation Army, I suppose...and Halliburton too, I understand.

>This country used to be about great works. <

This country (the U.S.) has been, and continues to be, about many things. We get to choose what those things are, with every election, with every dollar we spend, with every job we take. We can support good quality, sound economy fiscal practice, good environmental policy and good foreign dealings if we choose wisely. Even small positive things can be great works if seen in appropriate context.

To some extent, it is still about great works, and will be as long as regular people work toward their fruition.
